SUCCESS—

WHAT A COMPREHENSIVE WORD THAT IS.

Our idea of success is not measured entirely by money, but is a combination of Common Sense, Honesty, Courtesy, Consistency, and Perseverance, and when applied to business, failure is almost impossible. This firm has endeavored to apply those ideals to their business. The success we have achieved is immeasurable in dollars and cents, for, although we have been favored with possibly more than our share in this respect, we value most highly, the position we hold in regard to the public opinion. We are in business to handle the highest class of business investments available, and will positively not handle anything that does not come up to our idea, and only then when they are placed exclusively with us for a limited time. We are in a position to select the propositions we work on, thus enabling us to eliminate those undesirable ones, that would cause grief and annoyance to both ourselves and the purchaser. We are open at all times to consider the handling of any high-class meritorious business, and shall be glad to call on business concerns who may require our services. Below are a few of the best openings we have at the present time, all of which are worthy of earnest investigation.

A MODERN LAUNDRY PLANT located about two hundred miles from Los Angeles on the coast, in one of the very best cities in Southern California. This is a real business, it is clearing 30 per cent. on an investment of $18,000, it could not be replaced today for less than $22,000, you can buy this through us for just $18,500. The best reason in the world will be shown for its sale, come in and talk to us about this if you mean business.

Here is another—A-1 BUSINESS in the same vicinity, it is a high-class paint store, handling the best line of paints on the market. This business is clearing about $8000 a year, the investment is around $15,000, the local bank will probably loan five or six thousand on this if necessary, it is a most exceptional opportunity to get a chance to buy a business like this. This is a business man's proposition, others need not waste their time. Everything is open for thorough investigation.

A REAL MANUFACTURING BUSINESS in Los Angeles, the purchaser in this case must buy the real estate and building that the plant now occupies, but at the price we are offering it is a most attractive investment in itself. It is most probable that another manufacturer close by would buy all the real estate, leaving enough for this company to operate on. This business is clearing at the present time about $9000 a year, over and above a salary of $3600, for the two partners. The only reason for selling is the fact that these men are opening up in the same business in another part of the country in a very much larger way. It has been established nine years, the customers are the largest concerns in the country, and the books are open for any business man to take his own acountant in and investigate, if he will show us he has the money and means business. It will require from $15,000 to $20,000 to handle this.

An EXCLUSIVE TOY STORE in the city, an exceptional buy at $7500.

A STATIONERY and MUSIC STORE, in the suburbs, $5000.

A CONFECTIONERY STORE in the suburbs, the best we know of for $4500.

A LUNCH COUNTER in the city, clearing $800 a month, $3500. Don't dispute this statement, if you have the money we'll satisfy you that this is true.

A FEED and FUEL BUSINESS in the city, $3000.

A CABINET and REPAIR SHOP, more work than the owner can attend to, $1000.

Massed Bands will Play and Thousand Girls March.

Planning a novel patriotic tribute to the service men and service women of Los Angeles, Fred W. Blanchard, chairman of the general committee in charge of the Armistice Day celebration at Exposition Park, last night announced the details of the programme for Victory Day.

Beginning at 2:30 p.m., after a half-hour concert by massed bands, the first portion of the programme will be occupied by community singing and short addresses in honor of the soldiers, sailors and marines, represented by the American Legion, and also the women war workers, for whom reserved seats have been provided in the grand stand.

The dedication of four flags, to become the permanent property of the city, will conclude the tribute. The flags will symbolize the patriotic service of the women, the sacrifices of those who gave their lives, the service of the city's men, and the national emblem.

The flags will be received at a victory memorial altar opposite the grand stand by the American Legion for the men, the Red Cross, representing the service women, and the Mayor on behalf of the city.

ADMIRAL TO ATTEND.

Community Service, Inc., is drilling and will direct the singing and the tableaux. Admiral Hugh Rodman and his staff will represent the navy, the American Legion the service men and the Mayor and Council the city. The Elks' drill team will form a guard of honor around the altar.

The detailed programme for the pageant at Exposition Park grand stand follows:

Concert by massed bands, 2 p.m.; community chorus and massed bands, "America," 2:30 p.m.; invocation, 2:33 p.m.; community chorus, "Onward Christian Soldiers," 2:36 p.m., first, second and fourth verses; address to service men, 2:40 p.m.; address to service women, 2:50 p.m.; community chorus and massed bands, "Battle Hymn of the Republic," first, fourth and fifth verses, 3 p.m.; dedication of flags, demobilization and memorial tableaux, 3:10-3:30 p.m.

FLAG PRESENTATIONS.

With the singing of the last verse of "Battle Hymn of the Republic," 1000 girls within the altar ring will form a semicircle. The flag committees, representing the American Legion, the Red Cross and the Mayor, will come forward through a decorated aisle from grand stand, reaching the foot of the altar at the conclusion of the singing. At the time of the advance of the flag committees, the four costumed "Graces," who will hold the flags on the altar, will ascend it from the rear, meeting the flag committees upon their approach to the altar.

The city's service flag will be presented by "Service" to Capt. Walter Brinkop of the American Legion.

The service women's flag will be presented by "Loyalty" to an officer of the Red Cross.

The gold glory flag will be presented by "Patriotism," who, with "Miss America," holding the Stars and Stripes, will descend the steps together and present these two flags to the Mayor. He will make a short speech of acceptance.

GIRLS TO MARCH.

Immediately after the Mayor's remarks, while he remains standing, the music of "America the Beautiful" will begin and the 1000 girls, in column of threes and dressed in white, will march around the altar, singing "America the Beautiful" and depositing wreaths at the foot of the altar, near to the gold glory and American flags held by the Mayor.

When this column has passed and the wreaths are deposited, the music of "How Firm a Foundation" will be played by the bands and the three flag committees, each accompanied by the "Grace" that presented its flag, will proceed to the grand stand and occupy boxes arranged for them. When they are in their places the "Star Spangled Banner," the concluding number, will be played by the bands and sung by the entire gathering.

LAST DISPATCH OF RICHARD H. LITTLE.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

Appended is apparently the last dispatch written for The Times by Richard Henry Little before he was seriously wounded while advancing with the Russian White army against the Bolsheviki:

GATCHINA, Oct. 25, 2 p.m. (Via Copenhagen, Oct. 31.)—The northwest army is making a determined attack today on the Bolshevik line between Tsarskoe Selo and Pavlovsk.

The Whites are slowly advancing, the soldiers confident that they soon will recapture these towns, which were taken from them two days ago.

The Whites also are advancing between Strelna and Krasnoye Selo. Krasnoye Selo is still held by the Reds.

Gen. Yudenitch's troops all along the line cheered the news that Denikine had reached Tula and Kaluga and was closing in on Moscow.

PUBLICITY FUNDS NOT MISUSED, SAYS CREEL.

FORMER CHAIRMAN WAR INFORMATION COMMITTEE DENIES CHARGES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—George Creel, former chairman of the Committee on public information, issued a statement here yesterday terming as "false in many particulars and viciously misleading as a whole," charges of "chaos" and "gross negligence" by the committee in handling government funds. These charges were made in a report to Congress by E. K. Ellsworth, of the Council of National Defense, who was appointed to liquidate the affairs of the committee after it went out of existence.

Mr. Creel also made public a letter to Secretary of War Baker denying the charges and asking him, as chairman of the council, for an early opportunity of appearing before it.

In his statement, Mr. Creel refuted the charge that the committee cost the government about $6,000,000, asserting the committee's appropriations totaled $6,850,000 and it returned in earnings $2,385,397.61 before its final accounting.

"The Committee on Public Information therefore cost the taxpayers just $4,464,602.39 for two years of work in the United States and every foreign nation, less than the amount spent in a single country in one year by some of the belligerents," said Mr. Creel.

Denying the accusation that officials of the committee "deserted" after the armistice, Mr. Creel declared:

"I dismissed myself and every other division head on March 15 as an economy measure, but every one of us, at his own expense, has kept in constant touch with the work of settlement."

Taking up the charge that more than the $1000 maximum limit fixed by Congress was paid in instances for expense allowance, Mr. Creel said that when a man was sent to Russia or China, "even an official skull should be able to grasp" that he had to be allotted a lump sum instead of the $4 a day allowance by Congressional rule. He maintained that every cent so spent could be accounted for.

ASK WESTERN WOMEN'S AID IN WELFARE WORK.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Miss Julia Lathrop and Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCullough are two of the group of women led by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt who are rousing the women of the Western States to the necessity of support for child welfare measures and the unification of laws concerning the status socially of women.

The imperfections of the methods of the packers in dealing with the problems of food supply will be made clear by Miss Jessie R. Haver, representing the National Consumers' League, who will leave Washington Monday to join the remainder of the party at Denver.

Miss Haver will urge support for Senator Kenyon's bill providing for the regulation of the meat packing industry and also the organization of co-operative societies along the lines which have achieved success in England.

Other subjects to be discussed are Americanization, improvement of election laws and methods, and the protection of women in industry.

Cardinal Expresses Grati to All Americans.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

QUEBEC (Can.) Nov. 1.—Cardinal Mercier boarded the steamer Megantic for Liverpool today after being given a civic reception. He was the guest of Cardinal Be[illegible] during his stay here.

Cardinal Mercier, prior to boarding the White Star liner Megantic today at Quebec for his return to Belgium, sent the following farewell message to the people of the United States:

"To the people of the United States of America: It is difficult for me to give adequate expression to my feelings at this moment when I am about to leave your wonderful and hospitable land. The sympathy and love which I have received everywhere have gone to my heart. I can say with full truth that the moral comfort which you have brought to my soul has indeed rejuvenated me and given me new strength and vigor with which to face whatever duties the Divine Providence may call upon me to accomplish in my beloved Belgium.

ADMIRES AMERICANS.

"I have learned to admire the American people. I have learned to love them. I have felt a strong assurance that a lasting tie of mutual sympathy and confidence has been established between your country and mine; and that it will endure for generations to come. If the calamities of this great war and the bitter sufferings which it entailed for our people have brought one bright thought it is of this bond of union between us. I realize and firmly believe Americans also realize that it has been a privilege for our generation to go through the crucible of this gigantic struggle. For those who would be cleansed spiritually and morally by its lessons it is an opportunity such as has never been given at any other time of the world's existence.

LESSONS OF WAR.

"By these lessons which can be sought, and I may say, which stand out in bold letters on every page of the annals of the war, I mean the magnificent incidents of individual and national self-sacrifice and self-denial, object lessons of the highest moral order, in and by which each one of us may make his way of life in the future.

"Once more, my dear American friends, let me express to you my heartfelt thanks for the wonderful assistance which you gave to Belgium during the war.

"Let me thank you again for the generous way in which you have responded and are responding to my appeal to help me once more in the heavy tasks of social and moral reconstruction, in combating the devastating effects of radical Socialism and Bolshevism, which await me at home, tasks which are related closely not only to the welfare, but to the very existence of my people, even though they themselves in this period of unrest and resentment may not fully realize it.

JUSTICE WILL WIN.

"The world, I know, seems to have these difficult and unsettling problems before it everywhere. And yet I have the profound conviction that justice and right will, when given their hearing, solve these problems of unrest and measurably reconcile the differences of men. It is my duty, I know, to work to this end. I pray you, my dear friends, to do likewise.

"I had hoped before leaving to be received by your President, Mr. Wilson. To my keen regret this has been impossible owing to the present state of his health. I express my sincerest wishes and prayers for his prompt and complete recovery.

"Let me, in conclusion, my dear people, assure you that you will ever be present to my memory and in my prayers, and give myself the privileges of bestowing my blessing on you with all my heart.

[Signed]
"D. G. CARDINAL MERCIER,
"Archbishop of Malines."

PIGEON MESSAGE TO NYE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Flying from the army transport George Washington at sea, a carrier pigeon reached Fortress Monroe, Va., today with a farewell message from the Belgian royal party to J. M. Nye, chief special agent of the State Department, who accompanied the royal visitors throughout their tour of the United States. The message said:

"We miss you very much. With warm thanks and best souvenir,

TO REFORM SANTA MONICA.

Roused by the sight of Mrs. Samuel Austin, wife of a Santa Monica editor, wearing a clothespin on her nose as a protest against the stench of politics in the beach city, an executive committee of representative citizens announced there yesterday that the episode has cemented support for the re-election of Mayor Berkley. He had announced that he would not be a candidate, but leading citizens met and framed a petition that he run for office again. He acceded.

The petition was signed by more than 200 persons. The names of 250 leading citizens supporting him were published in a local paper, with the request that the people elect Mr. Berkley and do away with petty politics. A pledge to support his campaign was signed by 267 volunteers.

The executive committee that handed the petition to the Mayor is said to represent all factions and all sections in Santa Monica. The members are: C. C. Doran, C. McInerny, Charles Hile, A. A. Weber, C. A. Tegner, H. M. Gorham, Burt Kenaston, Mrs. F. J. Heney, Mrs. Emma J. Graffius, Mrs. Mary Stevens and E. J. Vawter, Jr.

Their announced purpose is "to stop petty, political, factional fighting, the one thing that has been of great injury to Santa Monica."

The petition and pledge of support for Mayor Berkley reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, recognizing that S. L. Berkley is a man of unimpeachable character and reputation and that his four years of service as Commissioner of Public Safety and Mayor of the City of Santa Monica would insure his re-election with the almost unanimous approval of the voters of this city and further believing that his candidacy would receive the support of all factions and interests in this community and would cement together all those persons who are now working so earnestly for the advancement of the city, and further believing that it is a public duty for S. L. Berkley to reconsider his determination not to become a candidate for re-election, we do hereby petition S. L. Berkley to stand for re-election to the office of Commissioner of Public Safety and Mayor of the City of Santa Monica, and we do hereby pledge our support to his candidacy and promise to use every honorable effort to secure his re-election."

SIX TEXAS OIL "IFS"

(1) "IF" you buy the Oil and Gas Lease today on two and one-half acres in King County, Texas, "ahead of the drill."

(2) "IF" The De Leon Petroleum Company strikes oil in the well it is now drilling on the same structure as your lease.

(3) "IF" this "strike" results in the usual "stampede" to the "new field" and the prices bid for leases become fabulous.

(4) "IF" you refuse to sell your Lease at any price, preferring to get the highest possible return on your "dabble in oil."

(5) "IF" a Company contracts to drill a well for you at its own expense for half the oil, as they are doing every day in Texas.

(6) "IF" you have a little bad luck at this stage and all they get is a miserable little old hundred-barrel well,

THEN YOU WOULD HAVE TO WORRY ALONG ON A MONTHLY INCOME OF $2625.00

CHANGE No. 1 "IF" into "I WILL," and all of the other five "IFS" become the everyday possibilities of Texas Oil Development. Unless you do make the change and make it before these "CHECKERBOARD" Tracts are all sold, you are only a spectator of the game that is making the dreams of hundreds come true daily. NOTHING VENTURED, NOTHING WON.

THESE ARE FACTS — NOT "IFS"

King County, Texas, lies in the very pathway of the southwest trend of the Burkburnett Pool and in the northwest trend of the Ranger Pool, less than one hundred miles from each townsite. I bought the oil and gas lease on 640 acres from J. J. Driver, cashier of the First National Bank of Benjamin, Texas. He "Warrants and Defends." My lease is recorded on the books of the County Clerk of King County, Texas. It provides for one-eighth royalty to the land owner and seven-eighths of the oil to the lease owner. "Privilege of assigning" the lease in whole or part is expressly granted.

$25 WILL BUY 2½ ACRES OF POSSIBILITIES

I do not "know" that there is oil under this land. If I did, I would keep it all for myself, naturally. "I think" there is oil there and I am willing to back my judgment by keeping 320 acres for myself. I have subdivided each alternate ten acres in two and one-half-acre tracts and am offering the tracts at $25 each. There were only 128 of them and they are mostly all sold. If you can afford to "gamble" $25 where you have absolute control of the Oil Fortune which may be under your two and one-half acres, where you won't have to depend on the ability and honesty of officers and directors of a stock company, where you know that no human agency can move your land away or make a substitution, and where you won't be waiting for years to know the verdict—ninety days should tell the story—I emphasize, IF YOU CAN AFFORD TO "GAMBLE" $25, with the chance of making thousands, send in your check today or call and let me show you why I think "CHECKERBOARD" Tracts offer you the best chance for a fortune that ever came out of the State of Texas.

3½ PER CENT MONTHLY INCOME

3½ per cent. to 4 per cent. monthly—payable the first of each month—coupled with safety of principal, is only a part of the inducements offered investors in

Triangle Royalty

The above inducements, plus unquestionably increasing dividend rate, naturally incident to present drilling activities, and consequent higher market or selling value, constitutes what we believe to be the best oil investment in America today.

8 per cent. Monthly

This investment has a record of fifteen consecutive monthly cash dividends, aggregating 117 1-3 per cent., or approximately 8 per cent. per month.

Increasing Values

The foregoing results were obtained from four wells out of a possible twenty-five.

The fifth well should be pouring oil into the pipe lines and increasing owners' dividend checks by December first.

Increased dividends mean increased market or selling values. Remember, this offering is exclusive, is limited in amount, and is being absorbed rapidly.

Texas Oil Leases $1.00 Per Acre

We are forming a syndicate to take up leases on 9,600 acres—in 9 counties of Southwest Texas. You may win or you may lose—but, it's a good 50-50 chance to win something worth while. There is said to be from 100 to 150 deep test wells being driven in Southwest Texas and oil has been found at shallow depth—two or three places 50-barrel wells have come in, but they are going deeper.

You can afford to play with 25% of your savings where the chances of winning are equal—in this way only, will you ever become independent.

You can buy as many acres as you want from 40 up, at $1.00 per acre; so act quick. Insofar as we know this is the last chance to secure Texas Oil Leases at this price. The same character of leases being sold in Texas for $3.00 per acre.

BEATTY OIL Announcement

The first allotment of Beatty Oil stock amounting to 100,000 shares has been over subscribed mostly by residents of the City.

The company has a permit to sell another 100,000 shares at 75c per share, par value $1.00. As soon as this is subscribed the price will again be advanced.

Remember, this company, besides owning its valuable 300-acre lease near Eagle Rock City and its 1000-acre lease in Ventura county, also owns a very valuable lease in the Richfield gusher district. According to a survey recently made by William E. Stephens, this Richfield property is situated on a continuation of the same very rich but narrow and winding streak on which is located the famous Chapman gusher as well as the 2000-barrel producer brought in a few days ago by the General Petroleum Oil Company.

In addition to activities now going on at our Eagle Rock property, it is our aim to commence drilling operations upon this Richfield lease inside of ninety days.

Non-assessable stock now selling at 75c per share. Par value $1.00.

Oil Has Been Struck in New Mexico

A NEW field where the wideawake investor can secure LEASES as low as $5.00 an ACRE surrounded by such companies as the STANDARD, CARTER, OHIO GIPSEY, TOLTEC, COSDEN, UNION OIL OF CALIFORNIA and Associates, and many others.

THESE COMPANIES

Are the real successful companies in the United States, acting only on the advice of their Geologists and operating only in fields they feel certain oil will be found. YOU can hardly go wrong in following their lead. THEY have no promotion stock for sale and can only profit when oil is found, and as a result must know what they are doing.

THE NEW FIELD

Tucumcari, N. M., Oct. 17th.—With gas spouting from the McGEE well, 12 miles southeast of Tucumcari at the estimated flow of half a million feet of gas a day, and oil showing in the bottom of the well, Tucumcari is excited as it has never before been in its history—[News item reproduced from the El Paso Herald.

$1,500,000.00 WAS PAID FOR ONE 40-ACRE LEASE IN LOUISIANA LAST WEEK.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN YOU. THE ONLY REASON IT WASN'T IS BECAUSE YOU DIDN'T OWN THE LEASE. The only way you can own an oil lease is to BUY ONE. You can read of the many fortunes being made in the oil fields, but reading and wishing don't do you any good.

THE MEN WHO ARE MAKING FORTUNES IN OIL ARE THE MEN WHO ARE INVESTING IN THE EARLY STAGES OF ACTIVITY AND DEVELOPMENT IN THE NEW FIELDS. WE KNOW WHAT WE ARE TALKING ABOUT BECAUSE WE SPEND PART OF OUR TIME IN THE OIL FIELDS AND HAVE MADE AS HIGH AS $15,000 AN ACRE PROFIT BUYING AND SELLING OIL LEASES.

We were in the Louisiana Oil Fields early, in September—and bought a large acreage for ourselves and clients. Many new wells have been brought in since we bought and THE BIG BOOM IS NOW STARTING AND PRICES FOR LEASES ARE ADVANCING RAPIDLY. THE TIME TO BUY IS RIGHT NOW.

Part of our acreage we are preparing to drill, part of it we are holding for the big prices we expect to get during the next few months, $500 to $3000 or more an acre. Part of our acreage we are selling, in tracts of 5 to 40 acres, at $25 to $100 an acre, SUBJECT TO ADVANCE IN PRICE ANY DAY, giving you the benefit of the wholesale bargain we obtained in September.

CALL AND SEE US AT ONCE. SEND OR MAPS AND FOLDER OR MAIL CHECK FOR AMOUNT YOU WISH AND WE WILL MAKE SELECTION FOR YOU, AND MAIL YOU YOUR LEASE. WE HANDLE NOTHING BUT PERSONALLY INVESTIGATED INVESTMENTS GOOD ENOUGH TO INVEST OUR OWN MONEY IN.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Local Banker Tells of Visit to France; Week in Review; New Records.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

We are all interested, in a more or less direct way, in affairs across the big water. Many of us are immediately concerned in the economic conditions which are bound to have their reflection in this country for many years. Others feel the tie that binds either through personal experience in the war zone or because friend or relative is at rest in some little French burying ground.

George Reid, cashier of the Home Savings Bank, returned a few days ago from a six months' stay in France, under conditions which enabled him to form a better than average first-hand opinion of things as they really are. Because of his training along financial lines, and because of his connection with the treasury department of the Y.M.C.A., he speaks with authority.

Running through a very interesting talk I had yesterday with this globe-trotting banker is a decided strain of optimism. Mr. Reid does not believe that the world is a total loss with no insurance. There is much to be done, he says, and America is being relied upon for every material aid, but France is coming back and coming back fast.

Naturally enough we were each especially concerned with the economic phase of this comeback although he has plenty of material for a dozen human interest stories. France, he says, is anxious and willing to buy from the United States, but the chief thing which stands in the way of this interchange is the foreign exchange rate. Before the war five francs were approximately equivalent to $1 in our money; now it takes nine francs and thirty centimes.

GERMANY STEPS IN.

At this point Germany steps in and says: "Of course we did have a little misunderstanding, but that is all over now; let's get down to business. You need the things which we produce and your money is just as good and has just the same value as it had before August 1, 1914." France does not want to trade with Germany. Why should she? But she is in no position to pay America a premium of four francs and thirty centimes on every dollar's worth of business sent to this country. And there we have the most serious economic problem which is facing the French people, and one which, more than any other, is retarding her courageous and successful effort at rehabilitation.

"Don't make any mistakes about Germany," said Mr. Reid. "She is not seriously crippled financially. Her industries are rapidly swinging into production and she appears to have plenty of funds with which to start the rebuilding of her world trade. Germany may be hors de combat in a military sense, but she is very much on the job industrially and commercially.

"With all the shrewdness of the national character Germany is playing this card to the limit. She is preparing to pay France 100,000,000 francs on account of the war indemnity. Now 100,000,000 francs is only a drop in the bucket, but it is a drop, and it is a time when every drop counts, and France is not going to be made any more bitter by the receipt of a large sum of money at a time when she needs it sorely."

AMERICA'S DUTY.

Mr. Reid makes no bones of the things this country must do if we are to participate in the rehabilitation of France. If we stand aloof, he says, other countries, and notably the enemy country, will surely carry off the plums. The business is there, the inclination to trade with us is there, the ability to come back and to pay their bills is there, but we must do our part in regulating exchange, in credit extensions, in prompt delivery and in modification of passport regulations.

It is the opinion of the returned traveler that it is time to lower the bars, at least partially, to the tourist, for it is from the American tourist that France will derive a much-needed inflow of foreign capital. France, he says, is all ready to receive the visitor from America in large numbers and in the course of a few months her facilities in this respect will be greatly increased.

NO ROBBER PRICES.

The talk of exorbitant charges he declares to be erroneous. Many things are already much cheaper than they are in this country. An excellent meal may be obtained for the equivalent of 60 cents American money. A pair of gloves which would cost $3.50 or $4 in this country may be purchased in Paris for $1. At the great fashionable hotels one may pay fashionable prices just as one may at the Ritz in New York, or the Blackstone in Chicago, but there is no need to fear that robber prices prevail.

France, he continued, is doing marvelously well considering the awful handicap under which she is laboring, considering her devastated cities and ruined factories considering her millions of dead and wounded, and considering the fact that strikes in England just at a time when production was needed the most, has retarded rebuilding and resumption. The coal supply, for example, was cut down to 25 per cent. of pre war normal, and at the great pottery and other plants only 25 per cent. of the workers are available.

The American dollar is needed to help restore trade balances and to put France once more upon her commercial feet. Already she is standing upon firm ground. In another year she will be approaching normality, but she must have our help. The courage of the people is prodigious. In some places Mr. Reid saw roofing being made from old oil cans abandoned by the A.E.F. Nothing is wasted.

CROPS ARE GOOD.

A severe blow was struck the extensive wine industry of France when this country mounted the water wagon, but the wheat and grain crops this year are fine; corn land is in good shape and the food situation is improving daily. Retail trade, in Paris at least, is excellent; stores are crowded and shelves are reasonably well stocked. In the devastated region the peasants are plowing and sowing and reaping and building and restoring. Miracles are being brought to pass, and with a little intelligent financing and the application of ordinary business acumen from this country her rehabilitation will be far more speedy than anyone one would have dreamed possible when Big Bertha was hammering away at the very gates of the capital.

Concerning his own activities which had to do with closing up the business activities of the Y.M.C.A., and salvaging large quantities of material, which had gone forward under the expectation of a much longer war programme, Mr. Reid spoke interestingly.

"I was stationed at Paris," he said, "during most of my service abroad, and had an opportunity to studying reconstruction conditions at first hand, and of meeting and securing the viewpoint of prominent French bankers and officials. When I went there, eight months after the armistice, there were still 6000 secretaries; when I left there were 300 or less. In selling the supplies of the association, which included large numbers of autos and auto sundries we secured a better price than it cost to lay the supplies down in France, and as a result of our success in this phase of post war activities the Y.M.C.A., in France is in exceptionally good financial condition.

GOOD WORK OF THE "Y."

"The association is still functioning at Brest, Coblenz and along the line to embarkation ports, and there are about forty secretaries in Germany. Before very long, however, this work will all be turned over to the international branch. No one, not in active touch with it, can realize the tremendous accomplishments of the Y.M.C.A., during the war and after; the character and importance of which is becoming better understood as the rough spots inevitable to such a gigantic undertaking are forgotten. Five large hotels were operated in Paris, and the monthly record of entertainments was often as high as 40,000."

Before his return the Los Angeles banker visited the war zone and came into possession of much valuable information of the business requirements and possibilities, by means of which he hopes to spread a propaganda, which will result in this country's realizing more fully its opportunities and duties, and through which we will not let slip the bonds of affection, esteem and confidence in which we are held by the brave soldiers of peace over there.

The Week in Review.

The week has been one of continued good business conditions without much of the sensational. The end of the month brought a period of comparative calm during which there was a slowing down in new financing. This was merely a stock taking time, and with the start of the new business month tomorrow the clutch will drop almost automatically into high. The records for the month show unprecedented bank clearings, and the highest monthly building total for years. This latter is the most encouraging of all, but we are so far behind in this regard that the task looms formidable. There are no local labor troubles worthy the name, and the coal strike is not likely to affect this section of the country seriously unless it should involve a railroad tie-up. On the other hand it is sure to start thousands of tourists this way earlier than usual, and this will add to the housing problem which is already a very serious one. Money continues plentiful, and is available at the standard rates of interest which have steadily prevailed during the year, in spite of fluctuations elsewhere. Banks all report heavy deposit increases, and there has been liberal response to investment opportunities. A new offering of Goodyear stock is finding ready sale, and a 6 per cent. Moreland truck issue was snapped up almost as soon as it was announced, indicating perfect confidence in well established local industries. Trading on the stock exchange was in heavy volume, with especial emphasis being laid on the oil stocks. Retail trade is showing a steady increase and will reach its peak within a few weeks. There is every reason to anticipate a record-breaking holiday business. The food cost situation is practically unchanged, and

COTTON MARKET FEELS EFFECT OF COAL STRIKE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Nervousness over the coal strike situation restricted buying on the favorable weather map and led to irregular fluctuations in the cotton market during today's early trading. The opening was at an advance of 8 points to a decline of 10 points with January selling at 35.06 cents and March at 35.32 cents right after the call, or about 47 points net higher. There was realizing at this level, however, which caused reactions of about 20 points and the tone was unsettled.

The early offerings were well absorbed around 35.75 cents for January and the market later turned firmer on the bullish weather news and western belt forecast for freezing temperatures. January sold up to 36.40 cents and all late months also made new high records in the late trading with the closing strong at a net advance of 15 to 55 points. Range:

BULLISH NEWS SENDS GRAIN PRICES HIGHER.

CORN TAKES LEAD; OATS IS OUT OF RUT AND GOOD FEELING PREVAILS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Grain advanced to the highest of the week with the news bullish and short sellers and more outside buying in evidence with the best prices at the last. Corn took the lead and oats were lifted out of the rut and a better feeling prevailed all around the close being at gains of 2⅞@3⅝ cents on corn, ⅝@1 cent on oats, ½@1 cent on rye and ½ cent on barley in Chicago.

Outside corn markets were 2¼@3¼ cents, with Kansas City leading.

Despite efforts to depress grain prices, the coal strike and the general nervousness prevailing prices have advanced with shorts and best buyers and the close was the highest in several weeks with corn 4@5 cents higher, oats ¾@1 cent higher than a week ago while rye is 1¼ cent lower on December and ⅛ cent higher on May. Barley is up 1¼@2 cents, lard 75@80 cents and short ribs 1.10 higher than the close a week ago.

A marked increase in the outside buying combined with free purchases by commission houses led to a general rush to cover on the part of shorts and with offerings light a good part of the day there was a stampede toward the last that carried prices up 3½ cents from the previous day's finish, on the December into high ground on the present upturn. Profit-taking checked the bulge at $1.31½ with the close ¼ cent under the top.

Despite heavy selling of December and May oats by a strong cash house the bulge in corn caused general covering by local and outside shorts and prices advanced rapidly and closed at the top with December 72⅝ cents and May 75⅛ cents. Range:

PRODUCE IS SOLD ON RISING MARKET.

POTATOES AND ONIONS STILL GOING UP—APPLES ARE STRONGER.

Trading was active on the local produce market yesterday, and all varieties of fruit and vegetables met with a brisk demand throughout the session. The offerings by the farmers were only moderate as to quantity, and in excellent condition. At the opening of the market, the buyers were much in evidence, and the farmers on the floor sold their produce readily at Friday's closing prices. The demand slackened toward the end of the session, but on account of the fact that the late arrivals were very light as to quantity the tone of the market at the close remained steady.

The market for apples, which has remained about stationary as to price during the week, strengthened yesterday, with Jonathans selling as high as $3.50 for the extra fancy grades. Fancy Jonathans brought to $3 per box, while other grades sold at prices averaging $2.50. Most of the arrivals by rail yesterday were the California product, only one car from Utah and one from Idaho arriving on the local market.

A new variety of very fine eastern cranberries appeared on the market yesterday. The early blacks, which have been offered by local dealers for the past two weeks, are still selling at prices ranging from $12 to $12.50 per barrel. Yesterday's arrivals, which were late Howes, sold at $13.50 and $14 per barrel.

Grapes remained firm in price for all varieties. Some fancy Red Emperors were offered on the market at 6 and 6½ cents per pound. The arrivals of this product, both by rail and from the local producing sections were very light, a factor which helped to keep the tone of the market strong.

Most of the changes which occurred for fresh produce yesterday were upward. Carrots advanced 5 cents per dozen bunches, on account of the small supplies now available. Celery was stronger, selling at $4 and $4.50 for the ordinary run of the offerings, while the fancy shipping stock sold up to $5 per crate. Very little corn is being offered on the market, and prices are correspondingly high. Yesterday local stock brought as high as $1.10 per lug, the majority of the offerings moving at that price. Lettuce increased in price because of the better quality of the offerings and the strong demand for this product. Local stock advanced to $2 per crate, while the fancy shipping stock held firm at $2.25.

Onions and potatoes continued their advance yesterday, with strong demand in evidence, and arrivals by rail very light. Dealers are now drawing extensively on their storage holdings to supply the demand. All varieties of onions showed a sharp advance of 25 cents per hundredweight. Some dealers predict a rise in price of this commodity to $5 per hundredweight in the near future, unless the shipments to the local market from the northern producing sections become normal within the next few days. Stockton Burbank potatoes rose 15 cents per hundredweight in price yesterday, while russets showed an average rise of 20 cents.

Are You a Speculator or Are You an Investor?

Men and women who have had little experience in investing money often try to "get rich quickly" by "taking a chance" and buying securities which they are led to believe will yield ten per cent. or even hundreds of per cent. on the investment. The least experienced usually take the longest chance.

Men trained in financial matters, such as the financial directors of banks, insurance companies, trust companies and successful investors, feel that they cannot afford to take the risk which almost always accompanies an opportunity to make abnormally large returns.

We handle investments for banks, trust funds, insurance companies and thousands of conservative investors. We give the same careful attention to the needs of the small investor as we give to the largest.

If you are a speculator and are trying to get rich quickly, we cannot be of much assistance to you; if, on the other hand, you want to invest your money safely so as to get a definite income and safeguard the principal, we can be of service to you.

We should be pleased to send our latest investment list upon request.

WE OFFER
LITTLE RIVER COUNTY, ARKANSAS
ROAD IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT NUMBER EIGHT

Dated July 1, 1919. No Option. Due Serially, August 1.

Total Issue $225,000. Denomination $1000. Principal and semi-annual interest, February 1 and August 1, payable at the St. Louis Union Trust Company, St. Louis, Missouri.

LITTLE RIVER COUNTY, situated in the southwestern part of the State, between Little River and Red River, embraces 349,440 acres of land, about 60% of which is now in cultivation. Ashdown, the County Seat, located 17 miles northwest of Texarkana, is a growing, prosperous community. The County is traversed by the St. Louis & San Francisco, the Kansas City Southern and Memphis, Dallas & Gulf railroads.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT NUMBER EIGHT, formed by a special act of the 1919 Legislature, contains 54,597 acres of land in the eastern portion of the County, as well as a part of the City of Ashdown and the towns of Rosebud and Long. Land values range from $25 per acre for the cut-over land, to $100 per acre for the land under cultivation.

THE IMPROVEMENT, for which these bonds were issued, contemplates the construction, maintenance and repair of 20 miles of permanent hard roads, including all necessary bridges and culverts. Free access to Ashdown, afforded by this improvement, will greatly promote the development of the agricultural resources of the District and facilitate the marketing of the crops.

THESE BONDS are the obligations of entire District and constitute a lien against all of the real property therein. A tax, exceeding by 10% the amount required to retire principal and interest of these bonds as they mature, has been irrevocably levied, and benefits aggregating $510,954 have been assessed and confirmed by a court of competent jurisdiction. This issue is the only bonded indebtedness of the District, which has an actual value conservatively estimated at $2,000,000.

THE BONDED DEBT PER ACRE IS $4.10 AND THE AVERAGE ANNUAL TAX REQUIREMENT TO PAY PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST OF THESE BONDS AS THEY MATURE, IS LESS THAN 21c PER ACRE UNTIL 1924, AND LESS THAN 33c PER ACRE THEREAFTER.

LEGALITY APPROVED by Messrs. Rose, Hemingway, Cantrell & Loughborough, Attorneys, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Ranger Oil Adds
Potential Value.

We are semi-officially advised that the Ranger Oil Company has just acquired an additional royalty interest in the Albers and Barkley leases on the Turner farm, which added interest is said to now yield the company on the present production, approximately $4,000 per month. Three wells are now producing on the Albers lease with a reported daily production of 12,000 barrels, while one well on the Barkley lease is reported at 1,500 barrels daily production. Two additional wells are now drilling on the Albers and five additional on the Barkley. Should these wells come in equally as well as those already on a production basis, it should mean approximately $10,000 monthly to the Ranger Oil Company, so long as such production might continue, or earnings equal to 5% per month on the entire capital stock of the Company.

Another Speculative Addition

Further advices state that the Company has just acquired an interest in an actual lease (not royalty) on 800 acres of prospective oil land which is said to have been passed upon very favorably indeed by eminent geologists, which property is located near Corsicana. It is understood that eleven wells are now drilling on properties located adjacent, and this lease is reported to have been purchased upon such a favorable basis to the Ranger Oil Company that should any one of these eleven wells (which are purely wildcat ventures) bring in production, it would prove this new acquisition so that a profit of at least $100,000 to the Ranger Oil Company would not be unlikely, which would materially increase the intrinsic value to the individual stockholder, especially in view of the Company's small capitalization of $200,000. This lease interest has been bought by the Company purely as a gamble, but the possibilities are really enormous.

Considering the many properties now producing in which the Company is interested, its monthly dividend earnings and the speculative possibilities added by the new Corsicana lease, the stock presents what we believe is one of the best investment speculative offers ever presented by any Texas oil company in this section.

We anticipate strong demand for Ranger Oil tomorrow, and advise purchasers to place their orders early with a market limit of 17c.

UNSAFE vs. SAFE INVESTMENTS

The temptation to SPECULATE, rather than to INVEST, is gambling instinct inherent with most of us.

OIL and MINING exploitations are always alluring, frequently profitable, often absolutely disastrous, but always extremely hazardous.

On the other hand, COTTON GROWING is SURE, SAFE and PROFITABLE. Especially is this true of PIMA LONG STAPLE COTTON grown under the conditions prevailing in the GREAT SALT RIVER VALLEY OF ARIZONA, which has aptly been termed "NATURE'S HOT HOUSE."

We are offering the opportunity to invest in this newest industry through the purchase of absolutely secure FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS, bearing interest at 7 per cent. per annum, and to participate in the annual profits through a division of the surplus earnings.

WEEK SHOWS ADVANCE IN NEW YORK STOCKS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Regardless of the more adverse economic conditions created by the approach of the coal miners' strike and the gyrations of the money market, stocks this week made numerous gains, rails being the only important issue to be set back. Publications of United States Steel earnings for the third quarter of the calendar year were so favorable, from the viewpoint of speculative interests, as to give fresh impetus to shares of that description. Equipments of the steel and electrical varieties participated to a marked extent, the turnover for the full sessions establishing a record for the money, not only in volume, but in variety of issues.

The bulk of the week's call loans was placed at 6 to 7 per cent., but the rate frequently soared beyond these quotations, 16, 18 and even 20 per cent. being paid in some instances by belated borrowers.

Time money evidenced a tendency to ease, but hardened again when available funds were absorbed, chiefly for the shorter maturities. Interior, or country banks continued to buy heavily of commercial paper at 5¼ to 5½ per cent.

Further collapse of foreign exchange rates on Italy, the discount approximately 52 per cent., caused unfavorable movements in other continental points.

Indications point to the successful flotation of the British government and French municipal loans in this market.

THE HIDE MARKET: MILWAUKEE PRICES.

Cotton Goods Market is Strong.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The cotton goods market yesterday was very strong and prices rising. Many goods have been withdrawn from sale in an effort to check the demand for late future deliveries. Combed yarns were high and active. Wool markets were quiet and firm. Silks were steady with the demand in excess of present supplies.

FINANCIAL AND TRADE REVIEW.

prices for many commodities continue higher than they should be from an academic standpoint. There is a surface shortage of sugar which is probably not as serious as some dealers would have us believe. Another increase in milk is announced, and dairy products continue excessively high. Collections are good. Failures and fire losses for the week were negligible. A very happy localized condition, and a splendid business outlook.

The Stock Market.

The market yesterday was narrow and somewhat soft, the comparative Saturday calm being in marked distinction to the activity and heavy trading which marked the earlier days of the week. The weakness was cumulative for the opening was fairly strong while towards the close of the one-hour session several of the leaders displayed evidences of a week-end languor. As an offset to this general condition, however, both Associated and Amalgamated oil attained a new high record. The former sold to $129 from which point it reacted to $127. Very little stock came out, even at these prices. The peak for Amalgamated was at $101 and sales of over 1000 shares were registered at par. Union opened at $192 and was fairly active, declining later in the morning to $191.75. General Petroleum was also soft, but few transactions being recorded at $184.50. United moved up to 91 cents, reacting slightly to 90 cents. Mines were quiet, featured by the further recovery of United Eastern which sold up to $4.20. Tom Reed was strong at $1.78. Republic Petroleum was not so active as during the week, but held its own around 27⅞ cents. Bonds were weak and the volume small.

Bank Clearings.

The first day of the new month started with a very satisfactory clearinghouse total which, if maintained, will probably mean another record-breaking period. The day's business amounted to $8,144,511.97 an increase over the corresponding day in 1918 of $2,262,765.24.

Another Record.

The Los Angeles Stock Exchange established a new record in October both in volume of business and valuation. It was the heaviest trading month in the history of the exchange, 1,638,000 shares going over the board having a total valuation of $5,799,664.85. The oil listings provided the motif for the greatest activity, 1,060,176 shares to a value of $4,145,254.83 changing hands. Mining stocks were next in point of volume, but industrials were second in valuation. Of mining shares, 527,643 were traded in, the valuation being $222,816.25. Only 46,347 shares of industrial securities were involved, but the total valuation of these amounted to $759,443.32 indicating the esteem of the public for this class of investment, for most of the business was in local concerns. There was a fairly heavy bond business, $734 being sold, but the value ran high, totaling $639,732.55. Bank stocks completed the list, 100 shares to a value of $32,395.50.

Morris Plan Bankers.

The Morris Plan Bankers have organized themselves into a national association with Thomas Coughlin of Cleveland, president. There are 102 Morris banks in the United States, and founder claims that during the past year $125,000,000 has been loaned with a loss of but $1 per $1000 on the base of character as collateral. One of the extensive developments of the year has been the use of retail trade acceptances. The purchaser buys goods on part payment and subsequent payments are made on a saving account basis through the banks. Investment securities are also used, investors purchashing time certificates, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent., thus providing capital for the banks for loaning. The Los Angeles branch of this enterprise reports a very satisfactory growth during the year, and a constant expansion of activities.

New Chinese Loan

The bond department of the Security Trust & Savings Bank received notification yesterday that it has been designated one of the participants in the syndicate managed by the Continental and Commercial Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, underwriters of the new Chinese loan known as the "Republic of China 6 per cent. Treasury Secured two-year Notes." At the price at which these bonds will be sold, they will yield to the investor 7 per cent. net. In view of the fact that the issue is secured by definite assignment of duties and taxes which aggregate considerably more than the amount of the issue, besides the credit of the Chinese government, and carries a high rate of interest, the issue, it is expected, will be sold rapidly.

The Security Bank was also one of the participants in the issue of United Kingdom of Great Britain 5½ per cent. bonds, which was sold locally last week.

CITRUS REVIEW FOR WEEK.

The market is holding steady on fancy Valencias, but on fruit showing decay there is a decided easier tendency. There are about 2500 cars of Valencias remaining for shipment and shippers are making every effort to get this fruit on the market before the heavy rush of Florida oranges begins. To day, the shipment of Florida oranges has been light and the color decidedly poor, resulting in unsatisfactory prices. Many of the largest shippers have announced their intention of leaving the fruit on the trees until it attains color which will leave no room for criticism and it is generally believed the shipments will not be heavy for another week or two. Weather conditions the past few weeks have not been conducive to rapid coloring of the fruit. Prices on Floridas in eastern markets have ranged from $2 to $4.75 per box, delivered.

F.o.b. quotations on Valencias range from $3 to $4.50 according to size and pack.

Cash quotations on new crop navels from Tulare county are generally talked of on the basis of $4 per box, but no actual sales have been reported on that basis.

The navel deal is rather in the air because of the heavy supply of Valencias remaining for shipment as buyers are slow to take hold under existing conditions.

LEMONS.

The market on California lemons is easing off considerably under the influence of cooler weather throughout the Eastern States and the heavy importations of foreign lemons now arriving.

Latest advices from New York show approximately 80,000 boxes of foreign lemons available for sale within the next thirty days, not including two cargoes, the quality of which are unknown.

F.o.b. quotations on California lemons are on a basis of $5.50 per box.

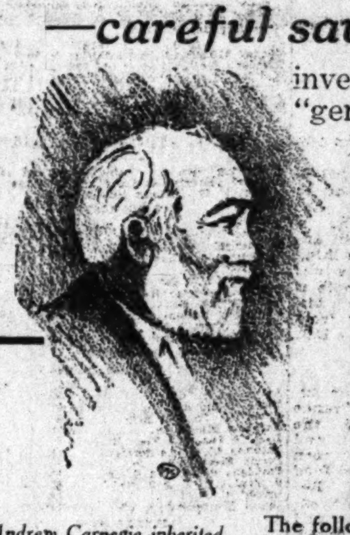
—careful saving and wise investing was the secret of Carnegie's "genius for success."



Andrew Carnegie inherited nothing but "poverty, health and a Scotch spirit of thrift." He died this year a commanding figure in the field of American industry.

Andrew Carnegie began his career working at 20c a day. When 16 he made his first investment—10 shares in an Express Company. From this and his next investment dates Carnegie's accumulation of a $500,000,000.00 fortune.
On a salary of $50.00 he bought shares in a sleeping car company: "I paid my first note from my savings," he said; "so much per month, and thus did I get my feet on fortune's ladder. It is easy to climb after that."
So-called genius for financial success lies in ability to grasp the opportunity when it offers. By means of THE ARONSON PLAN OF SAVING the thrifty investor is enabled to save his money systematically and at the same time invest it wisely, for you pay down only one-fifth of the total investment, the rest in 12 installments. You receive an immediate return from your capital and in a year the possession of a substantial income.

HOLDINGS OF THE COMPANY
The properties of "Montebello Crude" consist of leases, totaling 55 acres, in the famous Montebello Field—the largest producing oil field of Southern California, with a monthly yield of 1,130,000 barrels from 76 wells. NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Realizing for profits and pressure from shorts accounted for the uneven tone of today's short but lively stock market session, after a firm to strong opening. The selling was ascribed in part to possible adverse adventualities over the week-end.

Steels and equipments monopolized the movement, Republic and Lackawanna scoring new records. Marked strength was also shown by Gulf States and Republic steels. That group as a whole made extreme advances of 3 to 12 points. Heaviness was shown by motors and their specialties, oils and tobacco also develing reastionary tendencies in the shippings, the latter having opened with a demonstration of strength.

Sales amounted to 750,000 shares.

Trading in bonds was fairly large, but irregularity was created by the heaviness of local traction issues. Liberty bonds eased and internationals were steady. Total sales, par value, aggregated $7,675,000.

Actions Louder Than Words

The above telegram is more eloquent, in our opinion, than a full-page advertisement, made up of mere words.

Following, within 24 hours, the allotment of a considerable block of the capital stock of the

(Of Texas)

The President of the Company, now in Los Angeles, made good his announced intention of hurrying his properties to the producing stage by pledging his private resources to his Company in sufficient amount to insure completion of the No. 1 well planned to be drilled.

This first well, at Burkburnett will adjoin "Block 97," in which "Texas Chief" well is located.

Brown-Gilbert properties comprise 25 acres of oil lands in the three richest oil fields of Texas—Burkburnett Field, Desdemona Field and Comanche County.

Well located leases in these fields are worth many thousands of dollars an acre. Whoever has studied Texas oil fields is too well convinced of that fact to require proof of the probable value of these 25 acres. Brown-Gilbert's leases are all well located—a fact which, we very earnestly feel, should operate to make the small capitalization of Brown-Gilbert—$150,000—an important factor in demonstrating the investment value of its securities at par, or $1 per share.

We conscientiously recommend this investment as a "good buy" with strong promise of profit.

WHEAT CROP SHORT FOUR MILLION TONS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ROME, Friday, Oct. 31.—The yield of wheat for 1919 amounts to 51,900,000 tons in the Northern Hemisphere countries, which produce about half the normal crop of the world," as a report issued by the International Institute of Agriculture.

It is added that this is about 4,500,000 tons below the yield of 1918 and more than 2,000,000 tons below the average crop of the four years preceding 1918 and that thus there is a grea shortage than last winter.

The report says the yield of rye in the same countries amounts to 4,200,000 tons as against 4,400,000 tons in 1918.

WIDESPREAD CAMPAIGN TO PUT EMPHATIC STOP TO MOTOR-CAR THEFTS.

GO-FAST STARS IN ASCOT RACE.

Telegrams from East Indicate Unusual Interest.

Turf Races Before and After the Main Event.

Cutting the qualifying time to forty-eight seconds may not eliminate a sufficient number of entries to reduce the field of starters to [illegible] in America's All-Star Sweepstakes to be run at Ascot Speedway, Thanksgiving Day. Indications are that the total entry list will go to twenty—and all fast cars.

Telegrams from the East indicate a greater interest in Los Angeles' annual Thanksgiving race than ever before. The fact that the drivers are to receive $100 a mile in the prize money has proved an unusual attraction for the speed pilots. Some of the gofast performers who never considered the Coast before have telegraphed to Chairman George R. Bentel for particulars.

"It is simple enough," said the chairman yesterday. "The purse will be $5000 for fifty miles, the largest amount ever offered anywhere for that distance. There will be no other special inducements. Each driver will receive exactly the same sort of treatment.

BIG MONEY.

"The winner will receive $2500, or something over $50 for every mile that he is driving. The second money is $1250, third $750 and fourth $500. The purse is well worth the try, for while we had to cut the distance of the race we allowed the purse to stand. In addition to the motor contest there will be five running races, including the Thanksgiving Day Derby, a real classic."

The All-Star Sweepstakes will start at 3:15 o'clock, after two of the horse races have been run. This is done to allow those who plan Thanksgiving dinners to still have time to get to the speedway for the fastest race ever run on the [illegible].

But it will be that easily. In all the racing at Ascot never has an event been so devised as to bring such sensational driving. With the distance reduced to fifty miles it will be a continuous brush, for there will be little opportunity to lay back and "jockey" into the [illegible] in the last few rounds.

The entry list will include some of the best mile-track drivers in the country. Arthur H. Klein will be the first arrival from the East, bringing with him from Detroit the [illegible] that Ralph de Palma [illegible] a Peugeot and a Detroit special. These cars are owned and [illegible] by Millionaire Book of Detroit and because of his long years of association with De Palma re[illegible] are that the famous star will [illegible] here in one of the three [illegible].

It will be like a home-coming for Klein, who has just ended a long and brilliant service abroad. Klein was one of the first speed stars to go into aviation and get into the thick of it. He was in the English Channel patrol for months.

Klein raced in road events here in 1913, 1914 and 1915, and was a star at that game. Then he went in for speedways, and made some sensational drives. That his service in the air reduced none of his track cunning is shown by the fact that in his first race after returning to civilian life, he won second money, finishing just behind Joseph Boyer at Cincinnati.

BOYER COMING.

Boyer, too, is coming. He will ship his three Frontenacs. Boyer introduced his Frontenacs to Los Angeles in 1916, and they were marvelously fast. But they did not hold together. These cars are new and have shown consistency as well as speed. It will be recalled that Louis Chevrolet made the fastest mile in competition ever recorded in a 1917 race at Ascot.

Boyer will be at the wheel of one of these cars, while Goodson, who drove as his teammate at Cincinnati, will have another. The third car will be driven by Roscoe Sarles, who was the first entrant for the Thanksgiving Day race.

Eddie Pullen, who is one of the stalwarts of the "Coast defenders," has been watching the eastern invasion with much interest. Pullen has written Bentel that he is coming down from San Francisco "to win." Pullen in the big spring race at Ascot was out in front until he lost a couple of cylinders. Even then he kept going, and coasted into the money.

EDDIE HEARNE.

Eddie Hearne is another priming his car for the race. Hearne is one of the greatest stars on Ascot that the speed fans ever saw. He drives that mile with a daring and dash that makes him a factor in any company.

Eddie O'Donnel, another hard one to head off at Ascot, is coming with a new Duesenberg. He has a car that is one of the fastest that ever came out of the East, and O'Donnel's arm so far has recovered that he is getting back in his old-time form.

And there are others, a long list of them, getting cars ready for the Los Angeles race. But the motor drivers are not the only speed hounds that are looking toward Ascot. There is the motorcycle squad, which will decide a national championship of its own.

The motorcycle events will be run Sunday, and already two factories have announced that they will enter teams.

Chairman Bentel announced yesterday that Frank Garbutt, the veteran sportsman, who was one of the most active in the introduction of the motor sport to Los Angeles, would serve as referee in the motor classic.

LEADERS TIED IN RELIABILITY RUN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

JEROME (Ariz.) Oct. 31.—The Jerome News reliability run for light cars, from this point to Flagstaff and the Grand Canyon and return, was undertaken by four cars. The net distance was 322½ miles, done at the rate of about nineteen miles an hour. The Overland and Oakland entries tied for first place, each with a score of 995, the former making about eighteen miles to a gallon of gas and the latter about fifteen miles.

BY WARDE FOWLER.

These hand automobile signals may be a wonderful thing but they're causing a lot of trouble these days. A careful observation of traffic shows that not one person in a hundred is taking the pains to give the hand signals properly. And when not given correctly they are much more dangerous than no signals at all.

For instance, a motorist driving down Broadway puts his hand straight out, indicating that he is going to turn to the left. The driver behind takes the signal as it is given and pulls in on the right-hand side. Then suddenly the man ahead swings to the right and smashed fenders and a lengthy argument ensue.

PLACING THE BLAME.

The blame, in this particular case, belongs entirely to the driver in the first car. The signal for a turn to the right is to hold the arm at a distinct angle. When the arm is held straight out a turn to the left is indicated.

Careless use of these signals has demonstrated the fact that the signals alone are not enough. Before making any turn whether in city traffic or on country boulevards the driver of a car should glance behind to see whether he is going to get into trouble when he starts to swing. A glance to the rear before attempting any turn would prevent hundreds of smashes in Los Angeles city alone every month.

The first thing a student in aviation learns is to glance behind before starting to taxi his machine over any part of a flying field. Instructors watch this point with particular care. If a pilot fails to take this precaution he is severely censored and continued breaks throw him out of aviation entirely.

NO EXCUSES.

Several pilots, learning to fly in France, climbed into airplanes and started from the ground without taking the trouble to see if there was anything going on behind them. Pilots landing on the field crashed into several of this type and it took whisk brooms to sweep up the results. A few deaths demonstrated the fact, conclusively, that flyers must watch out for planes behind them.

In motoring the results are seldom so disastrous. Smashed fenders and lost tempers are about all that happens, and consequently motorists do not take the precautions that they would if their lives were at stake.

Frequently a car standing at a curb will suddenly swing wide into traffic without any sign or warning. Machines approaching behind this car have to whip to the left to keep from smashing. Usually no trouble is caused because the man behind was watching. Sometimes the two cars go together. A glance to the rear by a driver leaving a curb would eliminate every particle of danger from this particular affair. A hand signal should be given showing that he is swinging into traffic, but this signal should be assisted by a glance behind to certify that no one is going to misunderstand the signal.

PROPER SIGNAL.

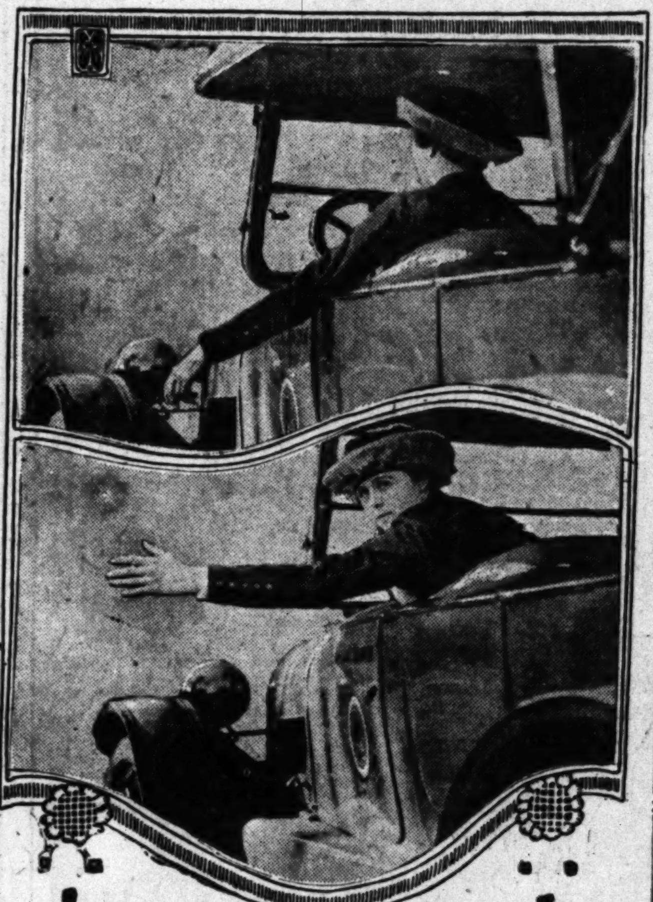
When turning on a crowded corner the proper signal, with a quick glance behind to see that everything is O. K., will always turn the trick.

If someone was killed every time a careless driver failed to give any hint of what he was going to do, the matter would be taken care of and would be corrected without any waste of time. As it is, the thing drags along and hundreds of minor accidents take place every month.

The very fact that hand signals are seldom given properly is being used by many authorities as an argument against this form of warning. It has been suggested that only one hand signal be recognized. That is, when the arm is extended, no matter at what angle, it indicates a turn to the left. This would do away with complications, but would leave no method for indicating a right-hand turn.

The best solution is for drivers to watch themselves and give all the signals, and do it correctly. This, and a glance to the rear to guarantee safety, would save thousands of dollars every week in repair bills and would be a great load lifted from motorists' tempers.

Keep an Eye on Your Arm Signals.



Eliminating Hundreds of Accidents

Would be an easy matter if motorists would be more careful about turning in traffic and on country roads. The photograph (above) shows the way in which nine-tenths of the drivers give the arm signals for turning. The signal means nothing at all and doesn't give the driver behind an indication of what's going to happen. The correct method (below) of giving warning of a left-hand turn with the driver glancing behind to see that everything is clear.

Baseball Critics Predict Batting Record for Babe Ruth Next Season.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Baseball critics who had a chance to study Babe Ruth's style during his career in the majors, and have watched his development into batting greatness, predict that he will hit .400 or better next season.

It is figured that now that he has established a record of twenty-nine home runs for a single season—a record which may never be endangered—Ruth will cease swinging for the circuit clouts with a resulting increase in his general batting figures.

BEST HITTERS.

In case Ruth does revive the .400 division, which has been dead for seven years, he will rank as one of the best hitters of all time, even though he should fail to rival Cobb in point of continuous batting leadership.

Four hundred is not an unknown batting mark in baseball. The more ancient records are rather replete with athletes who amassed this mark, while there were .400 hitters as late as 1911 and 1912, which means under more modern conditions.

But all these figures were compiled under favorable conditions. The years 1911 and 1912 in which Cobb compiled marks of .420 and .410, figures that are almost inconceivable against big-league pitching, an unusually "lively" ball was in use. These years were marked by tremendous hitting all over the country.

The records of some of the old-timers, while authentic, can hardly be seriously considered. While there were high-class pitchers in those days, as pitchers were then ranked, pitching was really in its infancy. It was wholly lacking the complexity of modern mound work. When some of these marks were made the curve ball had not yet been invented. The heaver was hedged about by limitations that greatly circumscribed his effectiveness, and left no opportunity for the employment of resourcefulness or ingenuity.

CHANGE OF PACE.

The change of pace in anything like a perfected degree, and the cross fire, came later. This was followed by the spitter, which finally was supplemented by the emery, the shine ball and the mudder, and endless variations of these.

Even Cobb when he established his marks of better than .400 in 1911 and 1912, while batting against the spitter and the knuckle ball, was not forced to face the emery and the shine ball, at least, not in any great quantity.

These deliveries did not come into general use until the past four years. They have been legislated against, and rules will continue to be enacted against them, but they will not be wholly eradicated next season, and not possibly for some seasons to come. So if Ruth runs in the .400 class it will be under more adverse conditions than those which any other batter has been forced to work.

FALLING BACK.

Batting has not kept pace with pitching in point of development. That is because batting is more primal or elemental than pitching. Pitching has become a science. True, there is a certain degree of science even in batting, but there is little room for variation. There is little besides bunting and straightaway hitting. Practically all great hitters are born that way, whereas a pitcher may be developed, and he has resource to an almost exhaustless range of deception. A good eye, strong wrists, ample shoulders and speed are about all there is to batting, and even the speed is not essential if an athlete has the other three in anything like balanced proportion.

With all the bulky percentages of the old timers, there is no doubt that the batters of the present decade have it on their predecessors of that era. They have by the very nature of things been forced to improve the standard of stickwork. Otherwise, there would not, in view of the pitching improvement, be a .300 hitter in the game today. A .300 mark in the majors now is a better figure, and represents more real hitting ability than did a record of .400 twenty years ago.

Pit almost any of the old-timers, wonderful players in their day, against down-to-date pitching, and they would be hopelessly fogged.

Then there is another consideration. While there may not be better fielders now than then, there are more good fielders. Also defensive teamwork had attained a greater degree of finesse, and all these elements combine to reduce batting.

In this connection the following list of those who have slugged their

NEW PLANT FOR GENERAL MOTORS

Truck Company to be Re-established in Detroit.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Oct. 31.—Reports from a reliable source state Detroit is to become the home of another great General Motors unit. It is understood that the General Motors Truck Company, now located at Pontiac, is to be re-established in Detroit, in one of the finest and largest plants devoted to truck manufacture in the United States.

Official confirmation is lacking, in the face of statements that such a move could not be made in less than eighteen months, during which time only maximum production schedules maintained in the Pontiac plant would enable the company to keep up with the demand for its products.

RELIABLE SOURCES.

The report, which comes from sources too important to be ignored and which lift the news out of the class of rumors so common to the automotive industry, is to the effect that the new truck factory is to be located on a site on Holbrook avenue, near Oakland avenue, on land which came into the possession of General Motors interests when they bought the Cadillac Motor Car Company in 1915.

Information obtained is to the effect that a factory 1800 by 360 feet is to be erected, most of it two stories high, allowing a floor space of approximately 1,300,000 square feet. It is understood that plans have been accepted and that ground is to be broken very soon.

Whatever the General Motors Company's truck plans will finally be, they will in no manner affect the production schedule at the Pontiac plant, which is being constantly enlarged to care for the company's increasing business.

NO INFORMATION.

Inquiry at the general offices of the General Motors Company in Detroit brought the statement from Walter P. Chrysler, vice-president in charge of all operations, that he had no information regarding the reported change.

Recently it became an open secret that the policy of the company was to concentrate as many units as possible in Detroit and centralize production activities. This first became known when the enormous building programme was given to the public this spring. Since then the inability of certain Michigan cities to make good on their housing projects has had something to do with the revision of original plans, as the General Motors has been committed to a policy of demanding co-operation of municipalities wherever it established its units. It would not be surprising, therefore, to those close to the situation to see such expansions as were not otherwise provided for last spring, or new enterprises becoming necessary in the face of the company's enormous increase of business, be established in Detroit and on the site of the Cadillac purchase in Northeast Detroit. A rumor is now going the rounds that the General Motors Company may erect a mammoth apartment and rooming house on the site now occupied by the Cadillac Company at Cass and Amsterdam avenues. This report asserts that such a plan has been discussed informally by the corporation's officials, although direct confirmation of the same is lacking.

VACATE PREMISES.

The Cadillac company will vacate the premises when its extensive new plant, now under construction on the west side of the city, is completed. Various smaller automobile manufacturing concerns are said to have been negotiating from time to time for a lease of the property, but the experience of these has been that they have decided the property is held entirely too high for industrial purposes.

The present Cadillac factory site is in the center of what now is considered Detroit's higher class apartment district. Supporting their conviction that the General Motors will erect apartments on the property, those responsible for the statement call attention to the fact that when the mammoth office structure of the corporation, which is being erected for the corporation a block distant, is ready for occupancy, between 6000 and 7000 persons will be employed in the building.

"Where are these going to sleep?" they ask. Every room in the neighborhood for a radius of three miles is taken. Some provision will have to be made for this army of workers and it is the General Motors policy to provide housing for its employees wherever possible.

EXCHANGE PLAN FOR WORN TIRES.

Many motorists attempt to run through the rainy season with old tires worn smooth, yet servicable. Tires such as these are not safe for wet weather driving, yet it would hardly be economy to discard them.

"To induce motorists with worn down tires to put on new non-skid Victor Cord or fabric tires for the winter," says Manager N. Bershon, of the Bershon Tire Company, "We offer to make an allowance on the old tires equivalent to the mileage left in them. This enables him to have new tires on his car when he most needs them—during the rainy season. The exchange plan is proving extremely popular."

CORRECTION.

In order to correct any erroneous impressions regarding the Willys Corporation and the Willys Overland Company, which are two separate corporations operating under entirely different managements, John N. Willys, president of both companies, has issued the following statement:

"Willys Corporation should not be confused with the Willys-Overland Company. These are separate and distinct organizations. Willys Corporation formerly was the Electric Auto-Lite Corporation. Recently it has acquired the factories, patents, equipment and manufacturing talents of the New Process Gear Corporation and the Duesenberg Motors Corporation. With its several plants it is now engaged in the manufacture of automobile starting and lighting systems, the farm lighting and power plants, transmissions and gears and a new corporation lists among its assets 500,000 shares or a little more than 27 per cent. of the common stock of the Willys Overland Company. It has entered into a contract with the Willys - Overland Company whereby this company, through a special unit of its sales organization, will market the new "six." Aside from this the two corporations are in no way related."

It required but four days to subscribe $4,000,000 worth of preferred stock of the Lafayette Motors Company of Indianapolis. Although the eagerness to buy Lafayette stock is an impressive exhibition of public confidence, trade circles, familiar with the achievements and stand of Messrs. Nash, White and Hoard, accept it as a matter of fact.

The capitalization is $6,000,000, with a present issue of $4,000,000 nonvoting, cumulative preferred stock at $100 per share. The total issue of common stock is 40,000 shares of no par value, of which 10,000 shares will be given with the preferred.

Equipment of the factory has been started and Lafayette officials will make every effort to exhibit cars during the January shows.

Capital stock of the Dort Motor Car Company, of Flint, has been increased from $2,000,000 to $3,500,000. It is understood the company will shortly announce an extensive expansion programme.

GREAT ORGY OF MOTOR STEALING

Auto Club Warns Against Leaving Autos Unlocked.

License Counterfeiters Found by State Officials.

With the coming of November and the winter season, Los Angeles and neighboring counties are plunged in the greatest orgy of automobile stealing in history, according to a report for the year to date issued yesterday by the theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Restless youths, innoculated with a spirit of uneasiness after demobilization, and infecting their friends with the moving malady are partly responsible for the increase in auto thefts in California, say the authorities, but the motorists of Los Angeles themselves are principally to blame.

An exchange of cars stolen in Texas, Arizona and Nevada to be sold here and cars stolen here to be sold in Texas and neighboring States is one of the latest developments of the theft programme, state automobile club officials. Every effort is now being made by the police, the Sheriff's office and the club's theft bureau to prevent Los Angeles from becoming too firmly entrenched as a sales center.

ORGANIZED GANG.

An organized gang of "license counterfeiters" operating throughout the western States has been uncovered by the theft bureau here, and the hunt for remaining members of the gang is now being carried on in Colorado. However, the capture of George Schlaughaus and a man giving the name of "Meirs" by the San Diego police department, led by Captain of Detectives Paul Hayes and Detectives Klein and Myers, stopped for the time being this style of crime in California.

Following up the lead from the capture by the San Diego police, Detectives Erven and Hickok of the auto club discovered the "camouflage house" here, where every imaginable tool was stored to be used in "fixing" automobiles so their own parents wouldn't recognize them. This house had been rented by the thieves for the purpose of having a place to take stolen automobiles, paint them over, change the motor and license numbers and issue them forth as cars recently arrived in Los Angeles from the East, according to the club detectives.

Paraphernalia for making enameled metal license plates was found on the premises, and a number of sample plates which had been made by the gang, to try out. There was evidence to show that they had also taken California license plates and changed the numbers so cleverly that an expert could not tell the difference.

"Taking a plate bearing the number "22989" they had changed the

DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through

An outstanding and impressive fact about the Dort is that the testimony of one owner varies but in the slightest degree from what another owner has to say about the excellence of the car.

What difference there is can be fairly credited, we believe, to a difference in the care of the car or the conditions under which it is operated.

The essential thing to consider and remember is that the skill and soundness with which the Dort is built is bearing fruit in the shape of trouble-free travel at a very low upkeep cost.

You can confidently expect to secure from your Dort the same fine and faithful quality of service that thousands of other Dort owners are now enjoying day in and day out.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AFTER AUTO THIEVES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — Automobile thieves, take warning. The long arm of the United States will get you now, if you cross a State line or run a stolen car into a foreign country or territory. And the penalty is enough to make even hardened criminals hesitate — $5000 fine or five years' imprisonment or both.

This bill which passed both houses of Congress quickly went to President Wilson on October 16 and on account of his illness, he allowed it to become a law without his signature on October 28. It is estimated this will increase the recovery of cars, locally, tremendously, as it will put a stop to all interestate traffic in stolen motor vehicles.

The law is considered by the automobile men and the police as one of such great importance that it is here given in full and the Department of Justice officials suggest it be posted up in garages and distributed generally by automobile dealers and clubs wherever possible to the end that stolen cars will not be moved outside of the State and make their recovery the more prompt and easy.

This is the law:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that this act may be cited as the national motor-vehicle theft act.

"Section 2—That when used in this act:

"(a) The term 'motor vehicle' shall include an automobile, automobile truck, automobile wagon, motorcycle or any other self-propelled vehicle not designed for running on rails.

"(b) The term 'interstate or foreign commerce' as used in this act, shall include transportation from one State, Territory or the District of Columbia, to another State, Territory or the District of Columbia, or to a foreign country, or from a foreign country to any State, Territory or the District of Columbia.

"Section 3—That whoever shall transport or cause to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce, a motor vehicle, knowing the same to have been stolen, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5000 or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both.

"Section 4—That whoever shall, with the intent to deprive the owner of the possession thereof, receive, conceal, store, barter, sell or dispose of any motor vehicle, moving as, or which is a part of or which constitutes interstate or foreign commerce, knowing the same to have been stolen, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5000 or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both.

"Section 5—That any person violating this act may be punished in any district in or through which such motor vehicle has been transported or removed by such offender."

ARRANGEMENTS FOR NEW PLANT.

Plans Completed for W. P. Herbert Company Home.

Floor Space of Building Increased at Last Moment.

Every Modern Convenience Being Incorporated.

All preliminary arrangements for the building at the southeast corner of Eleventh and Flower streets which wil become the home of the W. P. Herbert Company have been completed and work is now under way making ready for actual construction. The contractor has assured Mr. Herbert that he will be able to get the structure under roof in five weeks after actual operations start.

The original plans for the building that will house the organization representing the Cleveland Six line of cars were for a four-story edifice 100x150 feet in dimension. The plans have been altered, however, and the entire Flower-street frontage available 150 feet will be used and the height will be three instead of four stories. The foundation will be of such strength that later an additional three stories may be added. Under the new arrangement the three-story building will provide a total floor space of practically 70,000 square feet instead of 62,000 square feet on four floors.

Every modern convenience that can be thought of for providing top-notch service to owners of Cleveland cars has been included in the specifications of the building. Besides being the largest building devoted exclusively to motor car merchandising and service in the city, it will be the most modern. Of concrete construction throughout it will have direct daylight on four sides, an important factor in connection with mechanical operations.

Mr Herbert left Thursday for the Cleveland factory at Cleveland, O. He will take with him a copy of the complete plans of the building and ask for recommendations as to possible improvements. He will also put forth a serious effort to induce the makers of the Cleveland car to send as many to this territory during the winter months as the manufacturing schedule will permit.

CLEANING THE MUFFLER.

In cleaning the muffler, after the part has been dismembled and the parts cleaned with kerosene, it is well to go over all the holes designed to break up the gas with a sharp punch or fine taper reamer, to make sure that these holes have not been reduced in size by accumulations of burned oil or carbon.

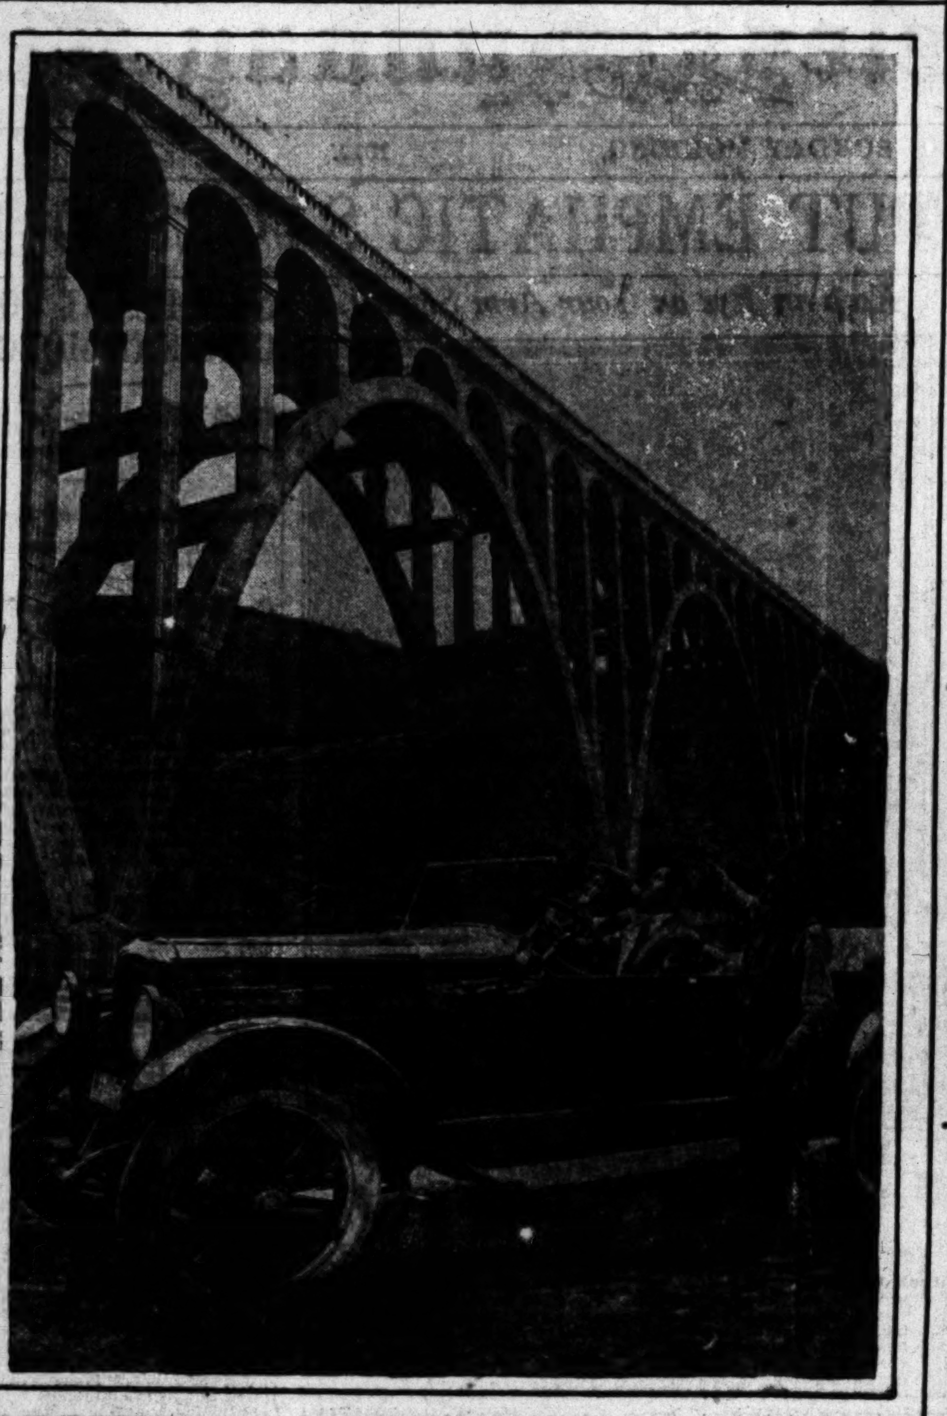
THREAD RUBBER



The New Arroyo Hondo Bridge.

Just completed on the Coast route between here and San Francisco. The car is one of Bob Evans's newest arrivals in the Paige line and was driven on a trip of discovery through the Arroyo Hondo country.

IN ARROYO HONDO LAND.

There is hardly a motorist of Southern California who has not driven over and enjoyed the shore line drive from Los Angeles to Santa Barbara, and still further to Gaviota, Los Olivos and San Luis Obispo. The trip takes the motorist over rugged beautiful mountain passes, across arid country and over the famous Rincon ocean bridges, with a refreshing drive for miles at the very edge of the ocean.

Though many a motorist has traveled the road before, and will again, but few of them know the wealth of romance, the quaint bits of history and the burden of sorrows that surround many of the curious little spots along the road. They are all known, however, to the Ortega brothers, the last of the famous Ortega family of early California, now living practically as hermits in Arroyo Hondo, part of considerable property owned by them from Spanish land grants given to them by their father.

The two brothers were discovered by A. E. "Bob" Evans, distributor in Southern California for Paige cars, while inspecting the famous Arroyo Hondo bridge, just completed on the Los Angeles to San Francisco shore highway, across the bed of the Arroyo Hondo, or deep creek.

The new bridge, erected during the past year in the intensive better roads campaign in California, is perhaps one of the most beautiful and picturesque in the State. Crossing the deep Creek at a point within 100 feet of where it empties into the ocean, the river bed was naturally wide, necessitating the construction of one of the longest bridges in Southern California. The depth from the creek bed to the top of the bridge will average more than 100 feet.

The new bridge is built entirely of concrete, held by six huge spans. It is about 550 feet in length. The addition of the new bridge to the shore route means the cutting of about a mile detour along tortuous roads and heavy grades to the bottom of the creek bed and return to the old road.

While inspecting the new addition to California's highway system, Mr. Evans met the Ortega brothers, the quaint, silent men of the Arroyo Hondo, who quietly, and with almost passive interest, watch from their canyon the kaleidoscopic changes being wrought around them.

Long years ago, when Fra Junipero Serra wearily trod El Camino Real, the first good roads system, the first of the Ortega family settled in California. Given 3000 acres of land in a Spanish land grant, Antonio Marie Ortega, the grandfather of the present representatives of the family, settled down on it. The land is in Santa Barbara county, and besides including the Arroyo Hondo, which is rich in beauty but poor in agricultural possibilities, includes some rich farming lands. From the grandfather the land passed to Peter Ortega, the father of the only two remaining members of the family, and at his death passed on to them.

Both Havez Ortega and his brother, T. Ortega, have lived in the little old house in Arroyo Hondo since childhood, and both are old men now. The house was built sixty-five years ago, and born in it, the two men have never left it.

HANDLING BIG LOADS.

When two Mack trucks, owned by Lee B. Hawkins of Moneta, recently transported fifteen tons of seed from Los Angeles to Calexico in thirty hours, the exploit furnished a subject that has been widely discussed by truck operators. Although the sacked seed could have been shipped by rail if there had been a car available, the factor of time that was saved was one of the most important in connection with the entire transaction. But truck operators point out, there are many loads now being hauled by truck that are not adapted to rail shipping

MANY TYPES.

In the variety of types of load that can be carried by truck, an advantage over any other system of shipment is possessed. Truck operators admit that there is practically nothing that cannot be put into shape for railroad shipment if time enough is taken to do it. However, trucks are being used to do the work without the loss of this time. In many instances this factor of time is so important that any delay means a financial loss to the parties most concerned.

An instance of this being the case is cited by H. M. Tolson of Torrance, who owns and operates a three-and-one-half-ton Mack truck. A few days ago a contractor desired to have a huge pile-driving apparatus transported from Huntington Park to Glendale in the shortest time possible. The engine, boiler and hoist were mounted on heavy timbers, and to take them apart and prepare the load for railroad shipment would have consumed probably a day's time. Furthermore, there would have to be a means devised for hauling the load to the railroad, and then carting it the second time to its final destination.

DOES THE WORK.

Tolson said he could make the transfer with his Mack and a trailer, and do it in a shorter time than it could be handled otherwise. The pile driver and complete equipment weighed eighteen tons. They were loaded on a trailer that was drawn by the truck, and the run from Huntington Park to Glendale was made in less than two hours. The entire length of the truck and load over all was in excess of sixty-three feet. Although of a very unwieldy nature, the load was handled without particular difficulty.

MAKING IT HOMELIKE.

A visitor in the slums of a large city asked the wife of a hard drinker why she did not keep her husband away from public houses.

"Well," she answered in a discouraged tone, "I have done my best, but he will go."

"Why don't you make your home look more attractive?"

"I'm sure I've tried hard to make it homelike, ma'am. I've took up the parlor carpet, and sprinkled sawdust on the floor, and put a beer barrel in the corner. But it ain't a bit of difference, as far as I can see."—[Grit, of Australia.

BELIEVES IN USING STRONG-ARM METHODS.

SAYING PLEASE SELDOM GETS RESULTS FROM HEADS OF EASTERN FACTORIES.

There are two ways, among others, of getting delivery on automobiles from the eastern manufacturers, according to George W. Franklin, manager of the Security Motor Corporation, who has just returned to Los Angeles after a month's visit in the East.

"You might get what you want by saying please, that's one way," Franklin said, "but a sure enough for certain way is to go right to headquarters and demand cars. I've tried both methods, and I must say that the latter is far more productive of results."

All of which is to say that the Security Motor Corporation, distributor of the Mitchell victory six, is again receiving prompt deliveries, and in quantities somewhat approximating the demand, though still not keeping pace with it.

C. W. Arthur, western representative of the Mitchell Motors Company of Racine, was visiting the Security Motor Corporation salesrooms when Manager Franklin returned.

"It's a lucky thing I found you here," was the Security manager's greeting, "because I want to serve notice that from now on I am going to camp right on your trail. The factory told me that all I had to do to get things straightened out when deliveries slowed up, or anything else, was to get after you.

"And," the Security corporation manager declared, "I serve notice right now that you're not going to get any rest unless we get all the cars we require."

The Security sales force did not have to wait for Manager Franklin's return to learn that something had taken place at the factory to speed up deliveries here on the Mitchell victory six. "I figured that something out of the ordinary had happened," Bob Manning, sales manager, told Manager Franklin, "because it wasn't very long after you were due at Racine before we got notice that the factory had resumed the shipment of cars."

HIGH-POWERED CAR TO CHASE SMUGGLERS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 1.—The high-powered automobile, with a multiplicity of valves under the hood and cylinders as large as buckets is not for pleasure alone. Motorists who have just come into Redlands from the Imperial Valley over the desert road through Palm Springs and Banning can testify to this. These motorists are now stopped in two places, usually once between the valley and Palm Springs and another time between Palm Springs and Banning. Those who stop them are Federal officers and they go carefully over each machine searching for any liquor that may have been smuggled across the border. These men are not of so much interest to motorists as the big high-powered machine they have standing near the road. It is a racer, stripped for action and ready to go. It would be a fast machine that could escape these Federal officers.

Kerosene should be used in drilling, reaming or turning malleable iron or aluminum. On the other hand turpentine should be used instead of the oil for drilling hard steel, as it will enable rapid drilling of the metal.

CHANGES IN BODY ADD REFINEMENT.

IMPROVED STEERING GEAR INSURES GREATER EFFICIENCY IN CAR.

In the production of the present model R Hupmobile, the Hupp Motor Car Corporation has introduced a number of refinements in body and chassis which is in line with its progressiveness, according to Billy Williams, sales manager of the retail Hupmobile department of the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors

"An improved design of steering gear has been adopted which insures greater efficiency. The improvement is very noticeable in the handling of the car. The durability of the springs has also been increased. A new front axle with Gurney ball bearings is another important feature. The backs of the seats are higher, and improvement has been made in the driving pinion and ring gear. A rearrangement of the exhaust and intake manifold insures quick preheating of fuel and consequent increase in efficiency.

"The Alemite system of greasing is perhaps the greatest improvement. By the use of a 'gun' under 500-pounds pressure into those parts requiring tion. What required hours to perform with to the motorist is now done efficiently and without soiling son or clothing.

"The Hupmobile has been a vorite car, but the demands improvements have been added made it ultra-favored. we get more cars from the buyers must still take their in line for deliveries."

EFFICIENCY IN MANIFOLD.

Degradation of Fuel Makes New Changes and Systems Necessary.

One of the factors that contribute very largely to the efficiency of the modern automobile engine is the manifold. As a matter of fact the present types of manifold have been practically forced by the degradation of fuel which has taken place in the past few years. It is peculiarly appropriate, too, that we should consider the question of manifolding just now, when we are standing on the verge of cold weather, because it is during the winter that the manifold exerts its greatest influence on engine efficiency.

IN DIM PAST.

In the now dim past when we got very high grade of gasoline it was very fine to indulge in the long looping manifolds that were then the rule. To get at the bottom of the problem we must bear in mind the fact that cold acts on gasoline just as it does on molasses—thickens it. With a long manifold, where the metal has a chance to get cold, the fuel coming in contact with this cold area is quite likely to become so heavy that instead of gaseous vapor it is a fluid again. When we got the light, volatile gas, this was not likely to occur, but with the present grades, which are not very much better than kerosene, this precipitation is almost certain to occur if the manifold is long and unheated. For this reason the modern tendency in manifold design has been toward short passages, leading directly from the carburetor to the combustion chambers. The long manifolds of the past have practically disappeared. Some designers hit upon the scheme of incasing their manifolds in the cylinder block itself. This had the virtue of compactness of design and, better still, heated the manifold by its proximity to the hot water in the water system.

Now every authority recognizes the fact that it is necessary to apply heat in some form to the inlet manifold in order to secure efficient vaporization of the gasoline fuel. Many different ways of achieving this end have been worked out. One of the first methods tried consisted of placing a jacket around the inlet manifold at some point near the combustion chamber and passing the heated gases of the exhaust around the intake. In this way the exhaust is made to furnish heat to the intake manifold at a proper operating temperature.

SECOND METHOD.

A second method consists in bolting the carburetor directly to the cylinder block and over the exhaust manifold so that the heat of the latter will keep the carburetor sufficiently warm to insure the delivery of a light and volatile fuel. This method is in very general use now. There were still other schools of designers. One insisted that the fuel must be heated before it entered the carburetor. Another heated the gas in the carburetor. The obvious trouble with these methods was the fact that the fuel heated at such a distance from the combustion chamber had a considerable chance of cooling again before it got to the cylinders. With the constantly decreasing quality of our motor fuel this danger became greater.

It is almost obvious that if the fuel is to be heated at all it is better to perform that operation when it is as near as possible to the combustion chamber, so the advocates of heating the fuel after it has left the carburetor have had the better of the argument.

The most recent designs in manifolds agree in placing inlet and exhaust in close proximity, so that the heat of the latter may be imparted to the fuel, keeping the fuel thoroughly vaporized until it is in the combustion chamber. Some of these designs place the inlet and exhaust together for a considerable distance, while in others the inlet passage simply passes through the exhaust at a given point. In some constructions the inlet passage is actually within the exhaust for a certain distance, its metal wall being subjected to the heat of the burning gases on their way from the cylinders.

RECENT IDEA.

Still another recent idea that helps efficient carburetion is the fitting of a small shutter in the pipe leading to the exhaust, so that after the engine is hot the temperature may be regulated at the point of maximum fuel efficiency.

Last year there was a flood of fuel warming devices known as "hot spots." These were heated areas in the inlet manifold, the fuel passing over which was heated and vaporized on its way to the combustion chamber. Some commentators on motoring matters informed their readers that the ot spot contributed to securing easy starting in cold weather. It requires only a moment's thought to realize that the hot spot depends on the heat of the exhaust for its heating qualities and consequently does not get warm until the engine has been started for some minutes, so that its help in starting is purely imaginary.

Engineers have discovered that while our present grades of fuel must be warmed to a certain degree to obtain fuel efficiency, the heat must not be too great or the gas loses so much in volumetric efficiency that the net result is a power loss which can be ill afforded. If the fuel is properly warmed and is then mixed with cold air the result is a snappy fuel that gives a maximum of power. This is the reason for the use of a shutter permitting the admission of cold air after the engine has run long enough to reach a fair degree of operating efficiency. It may be noted, however, that with our present grades of fuel there is little likelihood of too high a degree of heat being reached in cold weather.

The problem of securing fuel efficiency is by no means a simple one. Some of the best engineering brains in the country are engaged on it at the present time. There are many diverse factors to be taken into consideration and each must have due weight. However, this we can say, that any car owner who has noticed a distinct falling off in engine efficiency during the cold months will do well to see whether the manifold design of his engine is not to blame. There are many improved manifolds on the market today which may be used with benefit by owners whose cars are somewhat aged and equipped with manifolds that were designed to handle a grade of fuel very much superior to what we are getting today. Any such owners who will write this paper will receive advice in regard to devices that may solve their winter fuel problems.

MACK PERFORMANCE COUNTS

MORE ABOUT MACK TRUCK ENGINEERING

WE believe more detailed attention, skill, effort and resources are devoted to engineering the MACK motor truck than to any other type of highway transport.

MACK trucks are engineered thoroughly.

By "engineered" we mean that MACK trucks are not a mere assembly of parts made in many different places and cobbled together.

They are manufactured trucks—every part designed and made for its special fitness for heavy duty service.

That's why when any fair test is made MACK trucks invariably are the choice where trucking economy and delivery performance govern the selection.

Heat nor chill can affect the oil in the MACK engine and double straining insures clean oil at all times—that's MACK engineering.

Introducing a Smaller Silhouette.

Robert S. Weaver, vice-president of the Seager-Clark Company, was more than delighted last week when a shipment of the light Jordan Sixes rolled into the showrooms. Bob Weaver claims that the salesrooms have been filled with enthusiasts ever since the machine arrived.

SILHOUETTE MAKES HIT.

Introducing what its manufacturers feel certain represents a new trend in motor-car design and construction, the sensational new Jordan six five-passenger touring car has arrived in Los Angeles, and it has proved a veritable magnet in drawing motor-interested persons to the showrooms of the Seager-Clark Company, distributors for Jordan automobiles in Southern California. The glistening new addition to the Jordan line is slightly smaller than the silhouette types that have taken the country by storm, being somewhat shorter in wheelbase and incorporating a brand new type of Jordan-Continental engine. To the world of motoring, the car has been introduced as the new silhouette five.

Jordan ideals have been closely followed in the design and construction of the new model, and its manufacturers contend that its new dynamic, light bundle of energy marks the passing of the days of bulk and burden in open and closed cars. It possesses a wide range of flexibility that takes in the arduous mountain climbing, consistent running over rough, hot roads, and again the ability to hover around the mile-a-minute pace on the boulevard. While enonomy is largely dependent upon the ability of the driver, the new Jordan silhouette five is reputed to deliver fourteen to eighteen miles to the gallon of gasoline, while in excess of 300 miles to the gallon of oil has been the rule in exhaustive test runs.

Balance is the dominant characteristic of Jordan motor cars. This depends upon the careful distribution of weight, the length and quality of springs, the delicate point of their suspension and the arrangement of the steering apparatus.

Jordan bodies are hammock-swung between the axles, with long springs of chrome vanadium steel. Without body overhang, the whole tendency of the car is toward forward motion, with no side-sway.

Scientific light weight has been combined with sturdy and substantial appearance and construction. Through correct balance, it has been possible for Jordan engineers to bring the weight of the silhouette five down to 2800 pounds. Evenly distributed, this weight is ideally carried on the strong chassis, while easy riding is enhanced by the patented spring device that eliminates annoying rattles and absorbs spring side-sway.

In interior fitments and comfort points, the new Jordan model presents features that have won the highest admiration of the scores of motorists who already have inspected the silhouette five, according to Robert S. Weaver, vice-president of the Seager-Clark Company.

A REAL HERBERT HOOVER.

Horace Fletcher acquired national fame by declaring that the American people are disposed to eat more food than is necessary. Then Mr. Hoover, during the war, showed how food can be saved and the distribution improved, so that there would be some for everybody. These two exponents of reducing consumption and improved distribution have a mechanical counterpart, according to Harris M. Hanshue, of the Los Angeles factory branch of Apperson Brothers' Auto Company, in the motor of the 1920 models of Apperson cars. Owners of the new eight-cylinder cars report an average gasoline consumption from sixteen to nineteen miles to the gallon.

An impromptu celebration was staged at Apperson headquarters Wednesday, upon receipt of information from the railroads that a carload shipment of the new Apperson models will arrive here within a few days. One shipment that has left the factory contains the first of the new sedan models, and it is likely that this car will be included in the carload that will reach here soon. This season the Apperson company will produce a complete line of closed cars, the first time in many years, and owing to the popularity of this type of cars in Southern California, Mr. Hanshue anticipates a brisk demand for the new offerings.

HEAVY DUTY HAULING.

hauling with a truck designed for comparatively light duty by the use of a trailer attachment have recently been thoroughly investigated by the truck department of J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors for the State of California. An Oldsmobile economy truck, intended to carry approximately a ton as an average load, has been used for several weeks with a Utility trailer attachment to haul loads of lumber running as high as 6700 pounds in weight. The truck has performed this unusual feat without the slightest difficulty, and convincing demonstrations have been made to a number of the largest Los Angeles lumber companies as to the possibilities of the light, fast, pneumatic-tired truck in hauling loads far beyond its rated capacity through the use of a properly-designed trailer attachment.

"As a matter of fact the load which the truck itself is called upon to carry is virtually no more than its rated capacity," declares A. H. Wilson, sales manager for the Leavitt organization, who has watched the tests very closely. "We made several tests of the weight of the truck and load and the weight imposed upon each wheel. It revealed that with a three-ton load, the weight carried by the truck itself was approximately one ton, while the trailer carried two tons.

"As for power to handle the added load, the truck revealed ample capacity. It took the three tons and more of lumber over the Cahuenga Pass without the slightest difficulty. Loaded, it was capable of making as good speed as a three-ton truck, while, of course, on the return trips without load, the speed was more than double that of a heavy-duty truck."

LATEST THING IN MODERN COMFORT.

The county agent in Walsh county, North Dakota, has found a solution for a problem that has perplexed many a mother—what to do with the baby when the family is taking an automobile ride. He describes his apparatus as follows:

"Take two pieces of three-eighth-inch rope, each long enough to reach from one top bow around back of the seat to the other. Into these splice two short pieces to make a rectangle about a foot wide and nearly as long as the car body is wide. Leave ends of rope at the four corners to tie to the four bows on the top. Over this rectangle fit a denim basket about two feet long. This will make a very satisfactory hammock and one that can be used at any time of the year. The baby carried in it will be happier than in the mother's lap and the mother will have a pleasant trip."

CLEANING BRASS CASTINGS.

Brass castings may be cleaned of greasy deposits by boiling them in potash or lye.

TRUCKS POPULAR IN MOVING BUSINESS.

GIVES LIGHT TRUCK HARDEST USAGE AND IS NEVER HELD UP BY TROUBLE.

Los Angeles today is in the midst of a season of prosperity, the like of which it has not had for a number of years. Among the factors which has brought about this condition is the large number of homeseekers who are arriving from practically every State in the Union.

This is particularly true of those Atlantic Coast and Middle Western States, where severe winters are the rule rather than the exception.

Figures recently compiled for a housing committee of the Chamber of Commerce show that an average of 500 homes a month are being constructed, with the demand far in excess of the supply.

Many are taking advantage of the present level of prices to sell their homes, contemplating the erection of more pretentious structures. Others are seeking more advantageous locations in which to house their families.

And all of these things have made business exceedingly brisk for auto transfer men. Storage warehouse companies are getting scores of requests concerning space for household goods, and for a month one large firm has received on an average of 100 calls a day.

Among the men who are kept busy every working hour is W. S. Porter of the Dayton-avenue Transfer Company, who is using a Kissel three-quarter-ton truck, 1916 model. In a letter to Gilbert Woodill, manager of the Western Motors Company, local Kissel distributors, he says:

"My truck wasn't new when I got it, so I don't know how far it has run. I got it about a year ago, put it in good shape then, and have had scarcely nothing to do to it since that time.

"I use this truck for fast work—for moving trunks and household goods, and for picking up odd lots of stuff here and there.

"I also have another truck, a one and one-half-ton model, but it is far slower, and I like my Kissel much better. Although it is only a three-quarter-ton size, I often carry a ton and a half on it and the overhead never seems to affect it."

TIRES REQUIRE AIR TO WORK PROPERLY.

LACK OF AIR IS THE SAME AS RUNNING ENGINE WITHOUT OIL.

What lubricating oil is to roller bearings, compressed air is to auto tires, says S. Minnice of the Western Auto Supply Agency, distributors for Pharis Paramoid tires, and yet how many people ever consider it in that light.

No one would think of using a car without having the bearings lubricated because they know that without oil, friction would quickly bring a lot of trouble and yet they don't seem to realize that without air or the proper amount of air in a tire this self-same friction is developed to a high degree which quickly ruins a tire.

A tire is built with one layer of fabric over another and motorists are warned or advised to keep a certain pressure in them which keeps these layers of fabric firmly in place, thus doing away with or minimizing friction, but if this pressure is allowed to go down the weight of the car will tend to flatten the tire, which loosens up these layers one from the other and then there is trouble ahead for the motorist.

It does seem, however, says Mr. Minnice, that no matter how much is said or written about this, there are hundreds and thousands of motorists who keep ignoring the advice entirely even when they see the high mileage that is obtained by those who do keep their tires properly inflated.

B. L. GRAVES ENJOYS HUNTING EXPEDITION.

INSISTS HE SHOT SAGE HENS BUT THEY LOOK LIKE PLYMOUTH ROCKS.

That looks are worth less than the average Pasadena's estimation of Bill Nye when it comes to getting over the rough spots and through the tight places has always been the belief of B. L. Graves, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company, but his own firm convictions were proven to him to be true on a fishing, hunting and roughing it trip taken last week with ..as Henderson, one of the Ford service men, up into the great Owens River Valley country to Bishop, Independence and Mammoth.

Knowing the character of the country and its requirements as far as motor cars were concerned, Mr. Graves, as usual when making these long, hard trips, relied on one of his "old faithfuls" to get him there and back. It proved ideal for the purpose and some of the most inaccesible spots in that part of the country were negotiated without the necessity of the men leaving the car.

Game and fish had proven very plentiful and as hunters they were feeling pretty well satisfied with themselves but there was one strange bird which bothered them, not being fully aware as to what it was, but upon questioning a native driving a six-mule team typical of that great open country, they found out they were sage hens and good to eat if you were lucky enough to get them young.

Deciding then to get some of them Graves and Henderson pulled the Ford off the road and drove up a creek bed over and around boulders and out into the open, where they soon scared up some of the sage hens and got their limit.

PROPER LUBRICATION RECEIVES A BOOST.

GREASE FORCED INTO ALL BEARINGS BY HEAVY PRESSURE.

The question of the proper lubrication of the various parts of the automobile chassis has long been one that has given motor car designers much concern. There are many places on the chassis subject to constant wear, such as spring shackles and bolts, steering knuckles and rods, fan bearings, clutch collar, etc. In many of these points the problem of lubrication is further complicated by the fact that they are subject constantly to water, mud and dust.

The ordinary grease cup filled with heavy grease has proved anything but a satisfactory solution of the problem. Sufficient pressure could not be applied through the grease cup to force the grease into the bearings. Further, it is a most common occurrence for the threads on the cup to become stripped or crossed, with the result that the bearings got no lubricant at all. It was such a tedious, dirty job to fill grease cups that the average owner was apt to neglect the task entirely, with consequent excessive wear resulting to the unlubricated parts.

An entirely new solution of the question has recently appeared on the automotive market in the shape of the Alemite Lubricator, which is represented in Los Angeles by the Alemite Lubricator Company of California, with headquarters at 1400 South Figueroa street. C. A. Roesch, better known as "Shorty," has charge of Alemite sales. According to Roesch, the system has already been adopted as standard equipment by some of the largest American motor manufacturers.

"Under the Alemite system heavy grease is delivered to the bearings under 500 pounds pressure," said Roesch last week. "It is far quicker and cleaner than the old-style grease cup, as well as being immensely more efficient. The pressure is so great that the clean grease is forced completely through the bearings, carrying out ahead of it the old grease, which frequently is full of dirt and grit."

APPRECIATED BY TRUCK DRIVERS.

LITTLE DEVICE IS BIG AID IN STARTING ENGINES ON COLD MORNINGS.

The job of starting a big truck motor on these chilly fall mornings is frequently one that will try the strength and the temper of the driver to the utmost. With the oil stiff and heavy in the cylinder walls and bearings, and with modern gasoline that is by no means volatile and readily vaporized on mornings when the thermometer is around forty, the truck driver's task of starting a big motor is frequently a far from enviable one.

"The impulse starter with which Commerce trucks are equipped is especially appreciated by Commerce owners at this time of year," declares Freeman A. McKenzie, Commerce truck distributor for Southern California.

"Not every truck owner is completely familiar with the principle upon which the impulse starter operates. It is very simple, and has nothing about it apt to get out of order, yet is of the greatest assistance in starting a cold motor.

"In effect it is a device attached to the magneto which permits spinning the magneto without spinning the motor. 'Spinning' a heavy truck motor when it is cold is by no means an easy job. With the impulse starter, which is a standard feature of the Commerce equipment, the magneto does not revolve at all when you first turn the motor over with the crank. Instead, the first turn of the crank winds up a spring attachment on the magneto shaft, and after four or five turns of the shaft this spring is suddenly released, spinning the magneto at a high rate of speed. An extremely hot spark is thus generated and as a result the motor will usually fire at once."

DRILLING GLASS.

The car owner who finds it necessary to drill holes in glass will succeed if he uses the following method: Grind the points from one corner of a small three-cornered file on the bias from the other. Place this in a bit such as is used in wood work. Place the glass to be bored on a smooth surface covered with a blanket of similar material. Begin to bore the hole exactly as if the substance were wood. When a slight hole has been made surround this with putty and fill the dam thus created with turpentine to prevent heating. Do not press too hard on the drill in boring.

They Look Like Plymouth Rocks.

But B. L. Graves, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company, claims they are the genuine old-fashioned sage hens. Graves says he had to drive several miles up a creek bed to get these birds and that his Ford behaved like a thoroughbred all the way.

EUROPE BUYING FROM US.

America is getting back to its own. There was a time when the best, seemingly, had to come from Europe. But not now. The war has changed all of that.

Before the United States was forced to develop its Yankee genius and resources, Europe sent over the materials which went into the best tops and upholstery for motor cars. But now Europe is buying from Uncle Sam and getting a better article than it formerly sent over.

"It would amaze one to see how the United States mills have advanced in the manufacture of automobile top materials," said George R. Bentel of the Bentel shops. "Even in the last year there has been marked improvement.

"There was a time during the war period that we were hard put to get the materials that would give service under the trying California conditions. But the supply of good toppings is plentiful now.

"We find that there is an increasing demand for better tops. Since we have been building so many of the permanent type of tops, we can notice a great change in the attitude of the motoring public. Once upon a time the top was not regarded seriously. It was just somehting to be raised or lowered and keep off the sun and rain.

"But now a top is one of the car's best assets. We have done so much of this work in the last year that we have been able to increase the capacity by at least one-fourth, thereby lessening the time that a car is required to be idle while being fitted.

"While we have standardized in our methods so as to save time, we do not turn out the tops like so many cushions, for instance. Each car requires it own particular top."

"Then conventional colors are still the most popular in tops, although the grays and browns have certain demand.

"Individuality is the trend today," added Bentel. "What pleases one owner might be distasteful to another. But that is the reason that Los Angeles cars have such a name for being 'dolled up.' They are different."

A BRANCH AT PHOENIX.

Unprecedented revival in mine operations and cotton selling at 60 cents a pound have made Arizona so prosperous that nothing short of the best will suffice now for Hassayampans, which explains why Davidson, House & Meyer, Southern California and Arizona distributors of the Cole Aero Eight, have decided to establish a distributor's branch at Phoenix.

Not only has a decision of this kind been made, but all arrangements have been completed looking to the immediate erection at Phoenix of a replica of the beautiful Los Angeles display and sales headquarters of Davidson, House & Meyer.

Details were perfected last week by E. M. House, a member of the distributing firm, and H. L. Perkins, sales manager, who made a trip to Phoenix for the purpose. A site was selected, upon which a building 60x137 feet will be constructed, which, when completed, will be the most modern and attractive building in Arizona devoted to the sale and display of motor cars.

"Davidson, House & Meyer have been watching with increasing interest the commercial expansion of Arizona," Sales Manager Perkins said, commenting on the Los Angeles firm's decision to establish a distributor's branch in the neighboring State. "Arizona is one of the best motor-car markets in the entire country just now and the Cole Aero Eight models have met with pronounced favor in all parts of the State. Being assured of a wide sale of Coles, we have contracted for all the Cole motor cars the factory at Indianapolis would allot, which assures an uninterrupted supply for the State.

"I have been in touch with the Arizona trade for some years and there never was a time when Arizonans were better provided with money than now and there never was a time when the people there displayed the same discrimination in expenditures as now. I have been given unmistakable evidence on all sides that the people who are buying motor cars are content with nothing but the best and that they regard the Cole Aero Eight models as everything to be desired in advanced motor cars."

Announcement of a manager for the Phoenix distribution branch of Davidson, House & Meyer will be made soon, the firm announces.

YEAR OF PLENTY AHEAD.

Like many other motor car companies hampered by a shortage of cars, the Wright Motor Car Company, distributors in Southern California for Roamer cars, at last sees a let-up in the long shortage and again will be able to supply all demands of motorists, according to W. D. Wright, general manager of the company.

For many months, Roamer cars came to Los Angeles but in such small quantities that it was impossible to keep up with the demand. Dealers throughout the southern part of the State also demanded their share of cars with the result that for each district there were only a few cars.

Several weeks ago, H. V. Shank, salesmanager for the Wright company left for the factory of the Barley Motors Corporation at Kalamazoo, Mich., manufacturers of the Roamer cars, to see if anything could be done to speed up deliveries.

Upon his arrival at the factory he found production conditions undergoing a change of decidedly for the better. Closed cars, which are becoming very popular in the Southland are being manufactured rapidly by the Barley company. In addition to the closed cars many other of the popular Roamer types are being made, and without false promises, the company expects to get a greatly increased number of cars to this territory in the future.

FACTORY IS ENLARGED.

When announcement is made by an automobile factory that they are enlarging and adding to their plant it always tickles the cockles of the dealer's heart, for he knows it means increased production which in turn means a larger number of cars and a consequent increase in the quota for the dealer.

Hence the "smile that won't come off" worn by Lynn C. Buxton, the Stearns distributor, lately, for be it known that the F. B. Stearns Company of Cleveland have now under construction a large addition to their factory, which will add several thousand feet to their present large factory with every bit of the additional space to be used for an increased production of this well-known car.

Being one of the pioneers in the automobile industry, the Stearns company early selected a convenient site for their factory and with the passing of years and the steady growth of the city, they now have their large factory site practically in the heart of the city of Cleveland.

The perfection of the Sleeve-valve motor and the Stearns policy of making every unit of their car a finished mechanical art, has been responsible for the increased demand for this car all over the country, according to Mr. Buxton and has necessitated this latest enlargement to the factory which will increase their production at least 30 per cent.

ETCHING.

The car owner may occasionally desire to place his name or initials on some metal part or surface. This is best done by etching, and if it is iron or steel mix one-half an ounce of nitric acid and one ounce of muriatic acid. Shake these well when they are ready to use. Cover the place to be etched with beeswax melted and when this is cold write what is desired in the wax, clear down to the metal, using a sharp instrument for the purpose. Now apply the acid mixture with a feather, being careful to fill each letter. Let the acid stand for ten minutes and pour water on it. This stops the etching and the wax may be removed.

DEMAND FOR GIANT TIR

An important deal in coast tire circles was that recently consummated between the United States Rubber Company and the Imperial Valley Hardware Company, whereby the latter is to distribute United States tires exclusively in the Imperial Valley during the coming year. The Imperial Valley concern operates stores in El Centro, Imperial, Calexico, Holtville, Brawley, Calipatria and Seeley. The transaction also includes the mechanical line manufactured by the United States Rubber Company.

J. B. Magee, manager of the Southern California and Arizona branches, who recently returned from a business trip to San Diego and the Imperial Valley, said that in spite of efforts at the factory to increase production, it is difficult to keep a sufficient supply of Royal cords on hand. BIG BOOST FOR TRUCK INDUSTRY

Advent of Peace Develops its Tremendous Possibilities.

Ship-by-Truck Bureau Gives Local Information.

Motor Trucks Aid in Collecting Outside Data.

The "ship-by-truck" slogan owes popularity today to H. S. Firestone of Akron, O.

Mr. Firestone also has given further time and money to the afterwar stimulus of the motor truck industry.

During the war period the motor truck shouldered unprecedented burdens. With the advent of peace it seemed that its wonderful possibilities as an element of national transportation might be lost to industry. The time seemed ripe to let present and prospective truck owners know more of what the truck could do. Accordingly Mr. Firestone placed full-page "ship-by-truck" messages in the Saturday Evening Post, Literary Digest, Country Gentleman, Christian Herald and other national publications. By this method "ship by truck" was quickly brought to the attention of hundreds of thousands of shippers and millions of persons who should be benefited directly or indirectly by this form of transportation.

As a result of the advertising, the slogan quickly came into common use. It has aroused the needed action. It has increased the use of the truck. It is uniting all those interested in developing and extending the use of the motor truck.

Mr. Firestone followed up his ad vertising in national publications by advertisements in newspapers the country over. These newspaper advertisements were planned to help shippers use their local motor express lines and to obtain more tonnage for truck operators.

Inquiries that came from the advertisements convinced Mr. Firestone that some one must collect and distribute information regarding the motor truck. He made his own nation-wide organization ready for the work by organizing the Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau.

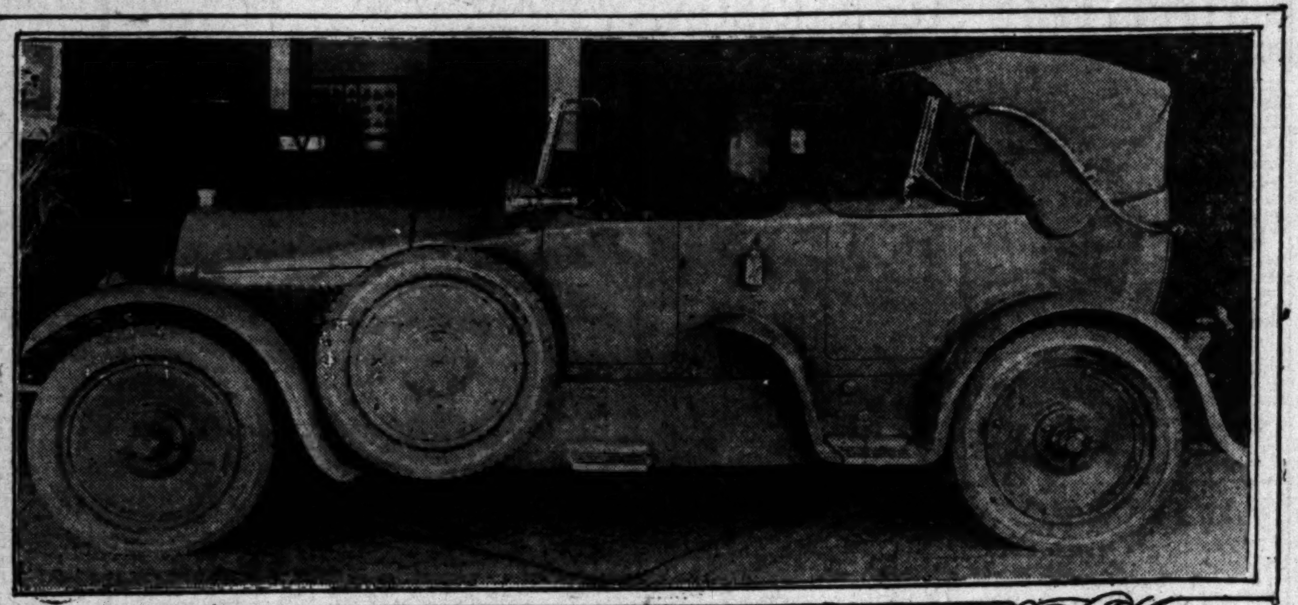
To date about fifty-five local bureaus have been formed. The central bureau at Akron, O., conducts its own research division, and also is assembling ship-by-truck information it receives from the various branch bureaus, and making it available to all. The bureau also maintains a fleet of motor trucks, which are constantly moving about the country collecting data and making demonstrations of the practicability of the motor truck as a freight carrier.

Mr. Firestone is quoted in a recent magazine article as saying that to attain success the essential thing is to pick out an objective and try to reach it, and when it is reached pick out the next higher one, and keep climbing to that.

Apparently, obtaining for the motor truck all the new opportunities possible through ship-by-truck is his present objective. As a business man he already has climbed high.

GAUGE GLASS CUTTING.

er or owner is often puzzled to make a cut of a glass cylinder, such as is used gauges of various sorts. A simple method this is to twist a section of light wire around the glass at the point it is desired to be cut. The ends of must be connected to two binding and these are then connected with the When the current is turned on becomes hot and heats the glass, which plunged into cold water. The result is fracture at the desired point.



You'll Have to Get Up Early in the Morning to Beat This.

The first custom-built body turned out by the Don Lee Coach and Body Works. The body is mounted on a Cadillac chassis and was built and designed for Miss Anna May.

KEEPS UP TO DATE ON AUTO EQUIPMENT.

BELIEVES IN HAVING EVERY FEATURE WHICH WILL ADD TO COMFORT.

If patience is as much of a virtue as is generally supposed then the little angels are already picking out a well-tuned harp, and St. Peter is oiling up the gates of the well-known heavenly kingdom for T. P. Killeen, 66 years old, one of the oldest motorists in Los Angeles. Mr. Killeen is patient even if he hasn't many other virtues.

Mr. Killeen, who cannot be classed among the "old codgers," is probably more progressive than 90 per cent. of the young men in their twenties. A number of years ago when motoring was just a fad, he became interested and purchased his first car in 1913. Since that time, despite his age, Mr. Killeen has been an enthusiastic motor fan, driving his own car at all times.

His initial purchase of a motor car did not end his interest in the automotive industry, however, according to the story he told Arthur R. Thompson, secretary of the Hillman-Shaynin Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of the National Windshield Wings. He watched every development and kept up-to-date in every way, purchasing a new car now and then and adding all modern conveniences.

Since the addition of the windshield to the automobile, according to Mr. Killeen, there has been no greater invention than the windshield wing. Previous to the introduction of the wing, the motorist, although partly protected by the windshield, suffered from the wind that swept around the windshield.

CLEANING SPOTS.

Grease or oil spots on clothing may be cleaned, if they have not been allowed to stay too long, by sprinkling the spot with talcum powder, which should be well rubbed in. After the first layer is rubbed into the cloth sprinkle more powder over the spot and let the garment stay for two or three hours. This gives the talcum a chance to soak up the grease. Then brush the spot briskly with a stiff brush and usually the offending stain will desert. It is important to apply this treatment while the spot is fresh.

USE OF TAPS.

A tap should never be used in a cored or rough hole. A heavy flat drill should be run through to take out the scale, sand or projections. Plenty of good lard should be used in cutting threads with a die. Very often a fine tap is ruined when it is first used, simply because there is no oil on the work. Taps should never be used without plenty of good oil. A tap will weld in any metal and tear off the threads unless it is kept well oiled.

EMPLOYEES STAND LOYAL.

No one realizes better, or even so clearly, as manufacturers themselves the great value of a factory organization that remains intact year after year. Consequently, manufacturers strive to hold their workmen together, after they have been painstakingly trained. In this respect, the records show that the Cadillac Motor Car Company occupies a particularly advantageous position.

The Cadillac record of employees' loyalty is unique in the automobile industry, which has been marked throughout its relatively short history by frequent changes. Quite the opposite is shown in this instance. There is at least one workman whose continuous employment under Cadillac auspices antedates the beginning of the company itself. He is an inspector who has followed the same line of work, with the Cadillac and its predecessors, for twenty-five years.

Five other workmen have been associated with the same interests for eighteen to twenty-three years, and a man who is now general foreman has had twenty-three years' continuous employment. A recent canvass of the shops revealed the fact that 142 superintendents, department heads and others had records of ten to fifteen years of Cadillac employment, and 427 men in the same classifications point to periods of employment ranging from five to ten years.

"The proportion of skilled Cadillac craftsmen who remain with the company year after year is very gratifying," said R. H. Collins, president and general-manager of the company. "The spirit of pride and personal interest which the men associate with our product is invaluable. We know, from reports which are constantly reaching us, that the feeling is widespread that the man who works under Cadillac traditions and standards is receiving the best training America affords. All this, of course, has its effect on the fineness and the accuracy with which all Cadillac operations, even to those which appear to be trifling, are executed.

"It is not too much to say that every department, and every man in every department, adheres to a code in which excellence of work is the aim and the ideal. The natural result of long association among the members of our organization, and with the company, is the harmony and unity of action which are sought above all else by every manufacturer."

NO HIGH COST IN TIRES.

While magazines, newspapers and periodicals of every sort contain columns of material on the "high cost of living," they have failed to mention tires in the long list of articles which have made high wages necessary. F. S. Black, Los Angeles traveling man, and an enthusiastic motorist, has amply demonstrated the reason why.

Despite the reputed high cost of practically everything, by close tabulation of records of his tires, Mr. Black has proved that the motorist, by economy and wise practice can travel twenty miles on each tire and still allow it to depreciate in value but 1 cent. At this rate the entire deterioration of a set of tires is only 1 cent for the set in each five miles.

Some time ago Mr. Black purchased a number of Canton cord tires for his car, in which he travels from Vancouver, B. C., to Tia Juana, Mex., on the West Coast, from Howard S. Reed, city dealer for the tires. Although a number of trips were made over almost impassable roads the tires gave the excellent mileage of 26,000 miles.

Fully satisfied with this record Mr. Black was prepared to discard the set when advised by Mr. Reed to make the tires do for many more thousand miles. The tires were given the exclusive Wade rib tread and were relined, making practically a rebuilt set of tires. Although a little dubious as to the results, Mr. Black used the tires and to his surprise obtained an additional 20,000 miles. From cost records, Mr. Black found that his tires had given him twenty miles to each penny's outlay, making a new record in post-war economy.

CROSSES CONTINENT IN TWELVE DAYS.

DOESN'T ALLOW A SINGLE DRIVER TO PASS HIM ON ENTIRE JAUNT.

In driving from Indianapolis to Los Angeles in a Peerless eight-cylinder touring car in twelve days, with lay-overs at Kansas City, La Junta, Denver, Grand Junction and Salt Lake, H. H. McIlvain of the Hoosier State, has hung up a long-distance touring record that many motorists will not care to emulate, in the opinion of S. Gordon Buckner, sales manager of Smith Bros., Peerless distributors.

"Mr. McIlvain tells me that no one passed him on the entire trip, and I can well believe him. Whenever conditions were anything like favorable, he used his sporting range, because, as he puts it, 'We all wanted to get to Southern California as soon as we could.' In spite of his fast time, he states that he never drove later than 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

"The Peerless, which is one of the last models, used only four gallons of oil for the 3000 miles traveled and the last water put in the radiator was at Grand Junction, Colo., on October 10. When the party arrived here, the water was still even with the top. With any more it would have run out. The average gasoline consumption for approximately 3000 miles was thirteen miles to the gallon.

"According to Mr. McIlvain, Kansas is making up for the last summer's drouth. In some places the roads were covered with water and the going in the sticky gumbo, was something fierce. For a distance of one and one-quarter miles, the Peerless made its way through water that was as high as the running board and sometimes higher. Several high-powered cars were passed that were stuck in the mud and left there by their occupants until the water subsided. The total weight of the Peerless with passengers and baggage was 5000 pounds." The party will stay in Southern California for the winter and drive back to Indianapolis in the spring.

AN OBSCURE KNOCK.

A knock difficult to locate is sometimes caused by one of the pistons touching a shoulder in the top of the cylinder, because the packing between cylinder and crank case has been worn thin. Obviously a thicker packing will cure the trouble.

PLUG BUILT FOR SERVICE.

A spark plug, made to stand the tests that forty-eight of fifty standard plubs cannot stand, is the claim for the Stewart one-point spark plug, just completed by Stewart engineers and due to arrive in Los Angeles in sufficient quantities to be placed on the market within the next few weeks. The new plug, according to Harry Ungar, manager of the Stewart Products Service Station, was announced by the Stewart company several months ago and samples arrived at that time, but they are just beginning to arrive in merchandising quantities.

The new plug, like many other motor improvements, is the result of war industries, and like many other war inventions is believed to be due to set a new pace in the motor world. Aviation motors, with their high compression and with the fact that when in service they are used constantly at full throttle, made the problem of getting satisfactory plugs for them a difficult one. The question of getting an insulation led to a tremendous amount of experimentation during the war and motor car users are to get the benefit of this successful research, according to Mr. Ungar.

"The Stewart company," he says, "has just produced a spark plug for motor cars which employs a remarkable porcelain which was developed for airplane service. The whole plug is of an unusually rugged design and is meant for the severest kind of service."

FINDS BUSINESS ON JUMP.

Business conditions in one city or in one locality may not be an indication of conditions in other places, but when conditions are found to be good over a wide area it is a pretty good sign that times are good and that prosperity has arrived or is lingering just around the corner.

That the conditions of good business does exist right now over all Southern California not in one line only, but apparently in all lines, is the judgment of F. H. Osler of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company, who has just returned from a trip over his territory calling upon his dealers and getting first-hand information all along the line.

In the many times that he has made these trips, never before has he found such activity and indication of good business which is not confined to any one line, but to all business in general; everywhere new people are coming in and everyone seems to have money to spend, and they are spending it, too.

When such a condition exists, the tire business is naturally good, too, and one and all of our dealers are up on their toes after their full share of business which leads us to believe that it is surely going to be another Racine year.

OIL MADE FOR REAL WORK.

Every motorist knows the importance of good bearings in a car, but not so many know or realize the importance of using good oil in their motors, yet in a way the two things are similar factors in the long life and good performance of a car, according to Walter Flavell, salesman for the Panama Lubricants Company, distributors of Pennzoil Motor Lubricants.

The purpose of the roller or the ball bearing and the motor oil is to prevent friction between the moving surfaces. The bearing must be of a quality of steel that is extremely wear-resistant. Otherwise its life will be short and its efficiency quickly impaired.

The quality of poor grades of motor oil would bear a resemblance to that of a bearing that wears rapidly. Poor grades of oil, when exposed to the intense heat of the explosions of a gasoline motor, break down rapidly and quickly lose their lubricating qualities. Excessive wear results between the surfaces that it is intended to protect, and the life of the motor is distinctly shortened as a consequence.

Pennzoil, the pure Pennsylvania paraffin base oil, is made to meet the hardest working conditions of a motor and to resist the heat developed in the internal combustion motor and lubricate thoroughly and well under such conditions.

DON'T USE A REAMER.

Never use a reamer on the inside of a pipe. The scale inside a pipe, caused by the flux used in welding or brazing, is as hard as glass and will turn the edge of any reamer that was ever made.

ADOPT TRUCKS FOR DELIVERY PURPOSES.

MANY REFINEMENTS GIVE MACHINES DISTINCTIVE, UP-TO DATE APPEARANCE.

The N. B. Blackstone Company, after a thorough investigation of the truck field and consideration of its needs, has decided to standardize with White equipment, and accordingly three-quarter-ton White chassis, equipped with special bodies that are to be utilized for delivery purposes, have been delivered by the White Auto Company to the well-known dry goods house.

These White delivery trucks, according to J. J. Canavan, sales manager of the White Auto Company, cannot fail to attract a great deal of attention on the streets, as they represent real delivery de luxe. "In my opinion the N. B. Blackstone Company is to be congratulated on putting into their delivery service such beautifully finished commercial vehicles. In them they have a combination of beauty and working essentials that will be hard to equal," he declared.

The bodies are finished in cobalt blue and black trimmings and included among the many new features are the gracefully designed hood and cowl, limousine side lamps and individual steps instead of the running boards.

That the number of concerns that are standardizing with White truck equipment is steadily increasing here as well as elsewhere, is the statement of Canavan. The double reduction gear drive which has been made an important feature of White construction is an important factor in increasing efficiency in heavy hauling.

"PATIENT JANE."

Twenty Years She Appeared Each Saturday to Ask Decision.

What has become of "Patient Jane" Bath? This is a question which the attaches of the county Courthouse are asking.

For more than twenty years Miss Bath visited the Supreme Court every Saturday and waited for a decision in "her case." She became known to all the attendants, who awaited her coming as regularly as the week-end itself.

But now she comes no more. Whether "her case" has been settled in the final court of life, or whether she got tired of waiting, is not known. The latter theory is not probable, however, for Miss Bath was patience itself.

Back in the '80s she came to the Courthouse and inquired about her case. She was told a decision would be handed down the following Saturday. Every Saturday since that time she had looked for it.

"She told me when she first came here that she lived in Allen street," said an attendant, who had been on duty in the building for a quarter of a century. "She said she was suing a corporation for false arrest, and wanted damages for the loss of her hair.

"It seems she was locked up over night, and worried so that her hair came out. The lawyer who took the case disappeared, and ever since then she's been looking for a decision in her favor."—[New York World.

PIPE JOINT CEMENT.

STIFF TIRE COMPARISON.

With conservation of resources and finances becoming in the United States a national hobby, motorists are looking more and more to the saving of money on their expenditures on cars. With economy becoming one of the national traits, the old-time negligence of motorists with regard to their tires is becoming passe.

Each day, according to H. D. Warfield of the Warfield Tire Service Company, city dealers for Gates half soles, finds some motorist or another subjecting his tires to the test which will show whether or not they will give service in proportion to money expended upon them. Tire records are strictly kept, mileage performance is noted and tires are given direct comparison with others on the same car.

F. Frei, a motorist of Southern California, residing in Los Angeles, kept such a record, according to a story he told Mr. Warfield. The results, according to Mr. Warfield, were amazing, inasmuch as they proved the wonderful service that may be obtained from tires if proper care is taken.

Mr. Frei had a tire that had been worn to the breaker strip. He had a Gates half sole applied to the carcass. When it was completed the rebuilt tire, costing just half as much as a new tire, was placed in direct comparison on the same car with a new tire of standard make. The two tires were driven in direct comparison to see their ability to stand the test of the road.

Surprising even the Gates boosters, according to Mr. Warfield, the Gates half sole outlasted the new standard make tire, running some 20,000 miles. The performance of the Gates product for Mr. Frei, Mr. Warfield says, is proof of the low cost of tires to motorists who take the trouble to investigate the ways to economize.

WIND WINGS MAKE HIT.

It is the older men in the automobile industry, and not very old men at that, who remember the days when automobiles were driven without any thought of a windshield or without anyone ever thinking of the necessity of one. But as the automobile motors became higher powered vehicles, and then attained what at one time was believed impossible, a higher speed and power than a locomotive, the rush of wind developed by high speed became noticeable. It was not liked, and then came the windshield.

When the windshield first made its appearance it was on the accessory market and it was believed to be a novelty. It wasn't long, however, until it was found that the novelty was a necessity. On its first appearance the windshield was an imperfect thing. It rattled and cracked and was never adjustable. The least jar of the car would crack and break it. Gradually, however, the improvements came.

The introduction of the windshield wing, according to E. C. Hillman, president of the Hillman-Shannin Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of the National windshield wing, was much the same as that of the windshield. It was at first believed to be a novelty. Comfort, however, made it a necessity and as a result it is now counted as the regular equipment of a car. The first wings had the same fault as the first windshields. They cracked, rattled, were not adjustable and broke very easily.

The National windshield wing, r. HillmaMn says, was perfected with the view of overcoming all of the common faults.

PROVES BUSINESS ASSET.

If those national legislators who, one year ago, were maintaining that the motor car is used for pleasure purposes only and consequently should be taxed as a luxury and their manufacture prohibited had been in Los Angeles last Sunday they might have been given a demonstration of the automobile's use as a business asset that would have caused them to alter their opinion.

J. E. Armstrong, who owns a Chandler four-passenger roadster, is interested in a water development company in the Antelope Valley. A concrete dam has been under construction for some time and it is essential that it be completed before the heavy rains of the winter season set in. Mr. Armstrong was notified that conditions required the services of two additional concrete workers on the dam immediately and it was up to him to get them there as quickly as possible.

He knew where he could locate the men and his Chandler roadster proved the solution of the transportation problem. He left his home in Athens-on-the-Hill, south of the city, at 5 o'clock in the morning, drove to the city, picked up his passengers, took them to the point in Antelope Valley beyond Palmdale, where the dam is under construction, and was back home to partake of the mid-day meal at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. He traveled via Mint Canyon road to Palmdale and then over the sand roads of the desert to the dam location and return, a distance of almost 250 miles, in eight and one-half hours. The elapsed time includes a number of stops and the stay at the dam site.

HELPING THE SOLDIERS.

Though it is almost a year since the signing of the armistice, the war is by no means over for many of the men who were most seriously wounded. Letterman Hospital in San Francisco still contains scores of soldiers whom the utmost skill of modern surgery has not yet been able to restore to health and usefulness. These men were given good evidence, however, that their presence in San Francisco has not been forgotten, when last Wednesday fifty big automobiles arrived in front of the hospital and took them for a ride around the Bay City.

The event was planned at the suggestion of Al G. Faulkner, State distributor for the Marmon, who is a member of the San Francisco dealers committee that intends to give a number of such rides for the wounded men. The army officials have given their sanction to these events, and Lieut.-Col. Bottoms, who had charge of the event for the army last Wednesday, in a personal letter to Faulkner, thanked him for his part in organizing the move.

Through the Faulkner organization, all Marmon owners in San Francisco were notified of the event, and asked to co-operate. That over seventy-five owners volunteered their Marmons for the day is a pretty good indication of the spirit which actuates the Marmon family in regard to events of this nature. Only fifty machines were needed, but the other volunteers will be called upon at a later date.

HIGH GASOLINE MILEAGE.

Carrying six adults and a boy, a Peerless seven-passenger touring car, one of the fleet operated by D. W. Stabler at the Beverly Hills Hotel garage, was run one day last week for a distance of 179 miles on ten gallons of gasoline, according to a statement made by Stabler to S. Gordon Buckner, sales manager for Smith Bros., Peerless distributors.

"This mileage was secured on a round trip from Beverly Hills to San Bernardino, Riverside and Redlands. I consider the Peerless a very economical car to operate, but an average of 17.9 miles per gallon is extraordinarily good in my estimation. It is my experience that it is hard to find a car in the high class that will do anything like that," declared Stabler.

He further stated that many passengers which he carries, operate expensive cars, and they have stated on many occasions that the easy riding qualities of the Peerless are equal to the best they have ever ridden in, despite its comparative light weight. "It is the superior balance and spring suspension of the Peerless that makes it such an easy riding car. This feature is freely commented upon by owners," stated Buckner.

Although the Peerless factory is speeding up shipments to Southern California in response to urgent demands from Smith Bros., this concern is still compelled to accept orders for future delivery. Said Buckner, "The more cars we get, the more orders we have, so it's about a standoff, in this respect."

WANTS EVERY CAR PRODUCED.

It was only several months ago that, in answer to an inquiry from the Nelson factory in Detroit, that Frank Nelson of the Nelson Automobile Company, Southern California distributors for Nelson cars, challenged the company to send him all of the cars that it was possible for the factory to produce.

That sweeping challenge to the company brought results. It has brought Mr. Nelson enough cars to fill a long list of back orders, and with the factory still taking him at his word when he challenged it to send him more cars than he can handle, more cars are arriving every day.

The result of his challenge, according to Mr. Nelson, has brought an arrangement that is very satisfactory both to the factory and to himself. In addition to his allotment of cars, the Nelson factory, without further orders, sends Mr. Nelson every car it can produce in addition to the regular orders. As a result, the Southland, for the first time in three years, is getting at least an appreciable portion of its desire for Nelson cars filled.

In addition to the convenience of having many long-felt Nelson wants filled, according to Mr. Nelson, the new factory policy toward Southern California has resulted in allowing the local firm to take orders for cars for immediate delivery, a practice unknown to it since the company opened its showrooms in Los Angeles.

"With considerable expansion of the Nelson factory," Mr. Nelson says, "and the doubling of production, Nelson fans in Southern California are now assured of better treatment. For the last few years we have been trying our best to obtain a larger allotment of Nelsons for Southern California, but have not been able even to supply the customers who have come into our showrooms. With the addition of a new unit to the Detroit factory, we were asked how many cars we could handle and we immediately offered to take every car the factory could ship us and the entire output, including the increase, if that was possible."

MARK TWAIN'S "INJUN JOE."

A number of men each claiming to be the original of Mark Twain's Injun Joe have sprung up at various times and used the claim to aid them in begging. According to the Macon Republican, one of these, begging in Macon, was recently cured, temporarily at least, by a local attorney. When he came to the lawyer's office asking for money and admitted he was Injun Joe, the lawyer called the police and when they arrived told them the man was a murderer. Despite vehement protestations of innocence, he read aloud to the beggar the extract from Twain's book which describes the way Injun Joe killed the doctor. The man was allowed to "escape" as soon as the police understood that the murder was committed sixty years ago in a book.—[Kansas City Times.

POLISHED STEEL.

When polished iron or steel becomes lusterless they may be restored with ammonia soapsuds and a stiff brush. The parts are rinsed thoroughly and dried by heat. Next a copious amount of sweet oil is applied and then powdered quicklime is dusted on. The lime is permitted to stay on for two days and is then cleaned off with a stiff brush. The metal is polished with a softer brush and with soft cloths until the luster is restored. If the lime is left on the iron or steel may be kept from rust almost indefinitely.

DAYLIGHT SAVING LAW IS NOT CLEAR.

RESIDENTS AROUND NEW SPEEDWAY WANT EXPLANATION FOR MULES.

Residents of Beverly Hills would much appreciate the services of some gifted individual who is competent to explain the workings of the daylight-saving law to the gang of 150 mules that Contractor A. E. Burge is working on the grading of the new road which will make the Los Angeles Speedway accessible from Pico and Wilshire.

Mules, it seems, are very insistent upon having their meals served at regular hours. They carry somewhere in their gizzards an unfailing time-estimating device, and about five minutes before their morning and evening meals are due, they are wont to lift up their souls in song that is awe-inspiring to say the least.

On Sunday morning nothing was said to the mules about the clock being set back an hour. Their regular eating time arrived, but no grub. Their regular morning song swelled and increased in volume as the moments passed and no hay and grain appeared on the scene. Men accustomed to mule oratorios for years, declare that they have never heard its equal. After fifteen or twenty minutes of it, the disgusted mule tenders arose and passed out the morning provender.

So far, the mules still protest each morning about the lateness of their grub. They accept it thankfully an hour earlier in the evening and say nothing about it, but they make the morning hour hideous for the residents of the fashionable Beverly Hills district.

They will move on to some other unfortunate district before long, however, for Contractor Burge has virtually completed the grading job on the new road. The road will measure 100 feet in width, and will give ready access to the bleachers and grand stand and the infield of the new track. It will be surfaced with oil macadam and aside from its importance as a means of access to the speedway will make a very convenient added cross-tie between Pico and Wilshire.

BIG INDUSTRIES RECOGNIZE COAST.

WAREHOUSE CONSTRUCTED TO HANDLE HUGE DEMAND FOR TIRES IN SOUTH.

That the big industries of the East are beginning to recognize the magnitude of the Coast as an outlet for their goods is being proven right along, and the latest indication of this is the announcement that the Mason Tire and Rubber Company are to build a large warehouse here on the Coast to better serve and meet the demand for this popular tire, and that L. B. Broering, the Mason factory representative, is at present out here to make all preliminary arrangements.

"This warehouse is going to be a big thing for us," says Mr. Thompson of the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, distributors for Mason tires, "as it will facilitate the delivery of tires and enable us to have a complete stock on hand at all times and to fill orders without any delay such as has existed, sometimes due to the long freight haul from Akron."

Mason tires, both in fabric and cord, have become very popular all up and down the Coast where they have been put to every kind of test possible in practical every-day use, in addition to the great stimulus given them through their triumphs on the big race tracks of the country.

HIGHWAYS ARE AN EDUCATION.

Unlimited Touring Possibilities for All Motorists.

Nebraska Driver Enthusiastic Over Local System.

Thinks "Good Road" Knockers Would Quit Here.

If the farmers of the country who are averse to paved highways could see Los Angeles' union stage depot at Fifth and South Los Angeles streets and then ride over the lines that operate from that modern terminal, their vision would undergo a decided change in the opinion of a winter tourist from Nebraska.

He may be a retired business man or farmer or a combination of both or he may only be "resting up" for renewed efforts in the great game of annexing more dollars. The only information that he vouchsafed concerning himself was the identification of himself as a resident of the Cornhusker State.

GREAT ROADS

"Your paved roads brought about this institution," he said, while sitting in the big waiting-room patiently waiting for some friend or relative to arrive in the city by stage. "If it wasn't for your great road system you wouldn't have these many stages. Of course not. To think that you can go from here to San Francisco by stage. Back in Nebraska no one would think of traveling that far by automobile. That is not as a rule. Even during the summer, our roads are not good enough to prevent jolting one all to pieces. Most of the farmers have cars that they run in a certain radius, but for anything like a hundred miles or more, they wait for the train. They are used to poor roads and not used to what you have out here. Too many of them believe that building paved roads means taxing the farmer for the benefit of the joy-rider and tourist.

"If the most violent opponent of paved highways in every township in Nebraska could be brought out here and ride over your highways in some of these stages, he'd go back East a changed man—probably in more ways than on the matter of good roads. He might want to sell the place and come here to stay." All of which, parenthetically speaking, leads one to believe that the "winter tourist" intends to become a resident of the Southland.

"These stage lines, they tell me, have considerable to do in building up communities and in enhancing the value of land along the right of way. I believe it. There will be similar lines in other States one of these days. There's no use in the railroads fighting stage lines, which, they tell me, is the case out here. The people here, as elsewhere, are the court of last resort. If they appreciate the value of the stage lines, they'll see that they are kept going."

Ready for Business—the Transport Truck.

D. F. Poyer and Son are congratulating themselves on the fact that they have machines enough on hand to make immediate deliveries in all Transport models. The Transport factory has materials enough in its storerooms to keep deliveries rolling for some time to come.

TRUCKS ON HAND FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

FIRMS ARE LUCKY THESE DAYS TO HAVE RESERVE SUPPLY FOR QUICK USE.

Considering the scarcity in many lines of business of articles in which metal forms a prominent part, the individual or the concern in any one of these lines that is well stocked is fortunate in these days of labor trouble and shortage of many kinds of material, in the opinion of D. F. Poyer of D. F. Poyer & Son, distributors of Transport trucks.

"We feel that we have started off on the right foot, in that we are able to make immediate deliveries of all Transport models," said Poyer. "The Transport Truck Company through its active and far-sighted buying force, has been able to accumulate a stock of material that will keep trucks rolling from the factory for some time to come. Its workmen are contented and they are turning out 100 per cent. production, I am reliably informed."

The Poyer organization has been busy demonstrating the truck that is new to Los Angeles and its numerous new features in truck construction are attracting many truck users. The radiator core is one feature that attracts the user. It is of a new type which is said to be most efficient because owing to the whirling motion of the air as it passes through the fins, it allows the entire volume to strike the metal thereby removing every heat unit possible. The Alemite lubricating system, which eliminates grease cups and makes for the highest efficiency in this respect, is another important improvement in truck construction.

TRUCKS

COMMERCE is the modern sort of motor truck. Commerce trucks carry loads up to two tons on big pneumatic cord tires that cushion truck and load, increase speed, reduce gasoline cost and repair cost.

There's a higher proportion of pay load weight to truck weight in the Commerce.

Low initial investment—low operating cost—low repair cost—these three vital advantages belong to the Commerce.

SERVICE STATIONS DO NOT STOP RUSH

BRANCHES DO BIG BUSINESS BUT JAM CONTINUES AT MAIN PLANT.

When the Western Auto Electric Corporation conceived and carried out the idea of carrying battery service to the door or home of the motorists of this city by establishing the Willard neighborhood or residential service stations, it was with the firm conviction that the congestion of service at their Pico and Hope place would be vastly relieved.

After an educational campaign carried on through the press on the care of batteries in conjunction with the opening up of these Willard service stations, it was interesting to note that while all of the service stations were doing a big business, the number of cars coming in for service to Pico and Hope streets had increased rather than decreased.

"After carefully checking up the service stations' business," says A. J. Tobey of the Western Auto Electric Company, "we found that over 75 per cent. of the patrons were people who had never before even bothered with battery service of any kind, but who had used a battery as long as a sufficient spark of life existed to operate the car and then went somewhere for repairs or a new battery, thus getting only a fraction of the service which the battery had been built to give."

MOTORISTS REMARK ON GOOD HIGHWAYS.

VISITORS FROM EAST SHOW KEEN APPRECIATION FOR OUR ROADS.

The good roads of California are such a common thing and because one can start out in almost any direction and drive for hours without leaving the pavement, we are quite apt to overlook and take for granted the excellent work done by the Supervisors of the different counties here, but let us take eastern visitors out with us and his enthusiasm will be almost unbounded over the wonderful California roads.

And the vast increase in the development of the automobile industry here has been due to a large extent to the number of excellent roads that have been constructed as well as to the way they are maintained, according to G. R. Keith of the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation, the distributors in Southern California and Arizona for the Standard eight.

Highway engineering has become a highly developed art, says Mr. Keith, and in addition to this, the materials for good road making are plentiful here in Southern California and it is a fact that a smaller percentage of our roads go to the bad quickly than any of the great Eastern States where road building has progressed to such a high degree.

Several transcontinental motorists who have driven Standard eights across the country into Southern California have told us that our roads are the best by far of any they encountered and that our dirt roads are kept up better than in any State through which they had passed and that there was a fine distinction between the terms "modern roads" and good roads.

SHARPENING FILES.

Worn files may be sharpened by placing them in a solution of sulphuric acid and water, made in proportions of one part acid to two of water. The files may be left over night, after which they should be rinsed in clear water. The acid should be put in an earthen vessel.

BACK FROM BIG SALES MEETING.

First Conference Held on Coast is Success.

Increased Shipments of Cars are Promised.

One-half of Production to be Closed Models.

Back from San Francisco, where they attended the first sales conference ever held on the Pacific Coast by representatives of the Franklin car, Ralph Hamlin, the distributor and the heads of his sales organization are putting their shoulders to the wheels of business as they never did before. Mr. Hamlin's contract for the new year calls for a larger number of cars than this territory ever has consumed and as increased shipments have been promised the drive is now under way.

The San Francisco conference was the largest in point of attendance that has been held in the country, even passing New York City. All the distributors and principal dealers from the Pacific Coast States and Utah were present. Mr. Hamlin was accompanied by Doc Green, his local sales manager, Eugene Martin, manager of the San Diego branch, and a number of his sub-dealers.

Previous to going to San Francisco the representatives of the H. H. Franklin Company, manufacturers of the famous air-cooled car, were in Los Angeles for a few days. They made a thorough inspection of Mr. Hamlin's establishment and when the conference was in progress one of them held the local Franklin headquarters up to all the Coast dealers as a model. "Imagine," said S. E. Ackerman, the sales manager, "if you can, a negro boy dressed in an immaculate white suit putting oil in a customer's car from spotlessly-white tanks and a measure of polished brilliance. That's the kind of service Ralph Hamlin gives his customers."

The history of Mr. Hamlin's success from the time, fourteen years ago, when he was operating a bicycle repair shop and rebuilding used automobiles as a side line and at which time he became the Franklin representative was sketched by Mr. Ackerman as an example of the possibilities that are presented a motor car dealer who represents a well-established line and practices fair business methods with customers. The Hamlin organization is today recognized as one of the strongest in the entire country. It has attained that leadership through Mr. Hamlin's broad-minded policies. The Franklin Company freely admits that in the pioneering days Hamlin's personal efforts did more to put the Franklin car on the map in this and other parts of the country than those of any other man outside of the factory personnel.

The Coast dealers were told by Mr. Ackrman that from September 1, 1919, to September 1, 1920, the Franklin Company expects to build 18,000 cars. Originally the figure was set as 15,000 but indications now are that 3000 additional cars will be necessary to meet the demand. The earlier estimate was made on factory calculations but approximations from dealers in all parts of the country that were received later will make the increase necessary.

Of the 18,000 cars that it is planned to build practically one-half will be inclosed models. This is a higher percentage of closed cars than will be built by any other automobile concern. The Franklin closed cars occupy a remarkable position in this respect. The reason is said by Mr. Hamlin to be due to the fact that they are designed with every idea of comfort and are so light that they can be operated as economically as open cars of other makes.

The improved series of 9B cars are now received in Los Angeles. The series includes touring, four passenger roadster, two-passenger roadster sedan and brougham models. There have been no mechanical changes except minor improvements. In the open models the seats are slightly lower and the windshield has a more rakish tilt. Sufficient shipments now are en route to make possible deliveries within a short time.

POLISH FOR BOTH KINDS OF ENAMEL.

HAS EFFECT ON AIR-DRIED PAINT AS WELL AS BAKED FINISH.

You frequently see a car with the body dull and badly tarnished, but with fender and hood bright and new in appearance; that is because the delicate finish of the varnished body was not able to stand the same degree of abuse as did the enameled hood and fenders, says Frank B. Webster of the International Sales Company, manufacturers of Duro-lac polish.

Enamel is baked on under tremendous heat, and naturally is more resistant than the air-dried paint and varnish of the body. It is not so easily scratched, nor so easily affected by dust, alkali, or any of the other factors which automobile finish must withstand.

"A polish that requires vigorous rubbing is frequently destructive to the varnished finish of an auto body, while it does not hurt the enamel of the fenders. Duro-lac, while it is equally efficacious on both enameled and painted surfaces, does not harm either, because it cleanses without the necessity of vigorous rubbing."

FOREIGN MARKETS LOOKING THIS WAY.

"Durability of the paint on American-made automobiles is a prominent factor considered by foreign dealers who are now seeking connections in this country," said Stewart McDonald, president of the Moon Motor Car Company of St. Louis.

"Before the war the belief existed in foreign countries that American cars, having fewer coats of paint, would not stand the trying climates of the comparatively new countries.

"Now the foreign agents are again investigating the paint on American machines. This condition is mainly responsible for the large orders for Moon cars from Central and South American countries."

In This Respect Hudson Has No Rival

The Super-Six Motor is Patented and Exclusive. It Added 72% to Power

Don't forget that no other car in the world has a motor like the Hudson Super-Six.

When you see a Hudson doing the things that only the highest powered cars can do, remember that in size, the Super-Six motor is not large and that it obtains its great power because of the patented principle which minimizes vibration.

Adds to the Life of the Car, too

Vibration is the greatest destructive force about a motor car.

Vibration does far more damage than any shock received in useful service. You can see its destructive effects when a motor is raced.

Vibration absorbs power. By minimizing it, greater power is available for the operation of the car. And there is less strain and damage done through self destruction.

The records made by the Super-Six were possible only because of its patented motor. It enabled the Hudson to maintain close to its maximum speed for hours, even days as in one test, without hammering itself to pieces.

Now Note How Hudson Is Even Greater

Hudson records were made more than three years ago. Then 60,000 Super-Sixes were distributed to owners. Everyone became a help in making the present model a finer, better Hudson, of which 100 are delivered daily. The qualities of every detail were brought up to match the motor, that had reached a new high level of efficiency.

All men seem to know this. For four years Hudson has been the largest selling fine car. Practically every buyer has had to wait for delivery. Even now we are booking orders for advance delivery. That men will wait to get the car of their choice is proof of Hudson quality. What greater testimonial can there be?

MORELAND CAR IS UNDER WAY.

First Models to be on the Road in Near Future.

Car Itself to be Light, Six-Cylinder Job.

Refinements of Design Give it Unusual Class.

Watt L. Moreland, general manager of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, has just O.K.ed the final design on a popular-priced car to be known as the Moreland, and expects the first two models to be on the road inside of sixty days.

This is not Mr. Moreland's first effort along passenger car lines, and he has made, in the past few years, ten different touring cars to try out different features of design and construction.

Prior to coming to California, eighteen years ago, Mr. Moreland was one of the first experimental men that Alexander Winton had in the early days of the Winton manufacturing activities. He was stationed on the Atlantic seaboard, and had many interesting experiences with the type of owner who at that time bought automobiles. In those days, the motor car was a sporting proposition and only appealed to men of extreme wealth. Motors were going through much experimental work and Mr. Moreland's training at that time stands him in good stead today. He later was connected with the Haynes company and upon coming to California was connected with the old Auto Vehicle Company, which manufactured the Tourist automobile, and organized and started the company manufacturing the Duro car. The Auto Vehicle Company went out of business at the time the Selden patent suits were in court in the early days of the industry. Difference of opinion with the stockholders and directors of the Duro car lead to Mr. Moreland's withdrawal. He felt that the tendency of the time was toward a four-cylinder motor instead of the then-accepted two-cylinder type. This company disappeared from the manufacturing field, when the public's insistence on four-cylinder motors made two-cylinder engines "back numbers."

During the nine years the Moreland Motor Truck Company has been a big factor in western motor-truck business, Mr. Moreland has had a western motor car in his mind, and would undoubtedly have been in the market with a car of suitable design for western use several years ago, had the war not prevented operation.

This new Moreland touring car will be produced and marketed by a new company which will be capitalized for $1,000,000, with separate and distinct production units from those used by the Moreland Motor Truck Company.

It is the intention of the organizers to distribute the stock among California people, to a large extent, placing it in the principal cities throughout the State. There will also be a considerable block of stock placed with eastern friends and business associates of Mr. Moreland, mostly people already in the motor-car business and who thoroughly realize the immense possibilities ahead of a motor car produced in this section.

The car, itself, will be a six-cylinder job, on a 118-inch wheel base with three body types, and will embody many refinements of design that are only procurable today on other cars at a very high additional cost and must be done locally by specialists in those lines. The wheel equipment will be disc steel wheels, and tops will be permanent with sliding glass panels and rolled celluloid curtains.

LOCAL MOTORIST HEARS WILD TALE.

BISHOP BOOSTER COMES BACK WHEN HE HEARS COMPLAINT ON ROADS.

When a Los Angeles motorist who had made the trip across the Mojave Desert in an Oakland touring car arrived at Bishop, Inyo county, a few days ago, he was met by a member of the Bishop Chamber of Commerce and asked how the roads were. He replied that they seemed rather bad. Then, as the tale was related to H. C. McVey, the Oakland dealer here, the following conversation ensued:

"Did you come over the Lancaster-Mojave road?"

"Yes; that was the worst stretch."

"Well, a man from Bishop was driving over that road right after the rains of a couple of weeks ago. He saw a hat in the road, so stopped his car and went back to pick it up.

"Imagine his surprise, when raising the hat from the ground he saw a thatch of hair protruding above the mud. He reached down and soon uncovered the face of a man who was almost completely buried.

"'You seem to be in pretty bad shape down there, Mister,' he said.

"'Yes, but not half as bad as this automobile I'm standing on,' came the answer.

"Now, when you folks come up here from Los Angeles and kick about Inyo county's roads, remember that incident occurred in Los Angeles county. Welcome to Bishop!"

MOTORISTS ON WAY TO SOUTH.

Transcontinental Routes Full of Motor Parties.

Greatest Westward Trek in Local History.

Cars Representing Twenty-six States Discovered.

That at the present moment there are more than 1500 automobiles bound for Southern California over the transcontinental routes leading here is the official information just issued by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

There are this many en route now between the Pacific Coast and the East, and the number is being increased by hundreds more every day, says the communique. This statement is based upon actual figures supplied by the Automobile Club representatives along the highways over which the mobs are coming, and by an individual count taken between Barstow and Needles over the National Old Trails Highway.

Automobile club officials traveling toward the Grand Canyon counted 109 "out of the State" cars and twenty-two machines with California license plates within 160 miles. Garages and parking spaces along the route were all filled to overflowing with those bound for the boulevards of Southern California.

It is the greatest westward trek in history. The view from the top of a hill looking across the desert, according to the club officers, was like looking down on the old-time caravans, so thick were the cars. Groups of machines from the same State travel together.

Cars representing twenty-six States were discovered between Barstow and Needles. Many hundreds of automobiles are reaching this part of the State also over the Lincoln Highway and the southern routes, swelling the 1500 to an almost even 2000 now actually on the roads.

All visiting motoring parties arriving here are advised to call at the Auto Club branch offices for visiting license information, and for information on road conditions. The club, it is pointed out, serves as host to all comers.

FRUIT CANNERIES USE MANY TRUCKS.

HOUSE-TO-HOUSE PICK-UP AND DELIVERY SOLVES LABOR PROBLEMS.

Women workers in the San Jose canneries were furnished free transportation to and from their work this season and those of the big cannery operated by the Richmond-Chase Company rode in a Packard.

This was a two-ton truck with a trailer and both vehicles were equipped with spacious, comfortable passenger bodies. That on the truck has a seating capacity of forty-eight while thirty-two more persons can ride in the trailer.

As there was a good crop of fruit and vegetables in the Santa Clara Valley this year and an enormous demand for the output it was found that the usual supply of labor was inadequate and the only extra available workers were housewives. Some way had to be found whereby their time would be conserved if they were to look after their household duties and get in enough hours at the canneries to make it an incentive to do the work, and as there had been considerable time lost in getting to and from work either by street car or walking, the Packard truck with a house-to-house pick-up and delivery proved to be the correct solution of the problem.

The women expected the truck at a certain time and had only to step out of the homes to climb aboard and after the work was done they were driven back to their door. Free transportation and a saving of their time made it possible for the big cannery to get enough women to do the work and a class of women who accomplished more and better work.

LATE ANNOUNCEMENT CREATES SENSATION.

INQUIRIES FLOW INTO OFFICE CONCERNING NEW LIGHT SIX-CYLINDER.

The announcement that the Willys Corporation, with its vast manufacturing resources, is building a new light six-cylinder car, has created a stir both within the automobile industry and out of it.

Not in many months has an announcement of such importance to the industry been authorized. The fact that it has interested the general public is evidenced by the number of inquiries which have been received at the corporation offices in New York since the corporation's plans first became known.

Quantity production of the light six, which has been developed and tested over a period of two years, is now being hastened in the corporation's plant at Elizabeth, N. J. This plant, formerly utilized by the Duesenberg Motors Corporation, is being expanded to many times its present size. When all additions are completed it will have an aggregate floor area of approximately 2,000,000 square feet.

Of almost equal importance is the announcement of plans for the expansion of the Electric Auto-Lite and New Process Gear divisions of the Willys corporation, both of which will contribute parts for the construction of the new car.

The Electric Auto-Lite division has outlined a production schedule which provides for the manufacture of 4000 complete automobile starting and lighting systems per day. This extensive programme will begin January 1.

CLOTH UPHOLSTERY.

Cloth upholstery may best be cleaned by beating cushions and backs lightly with a stick or carpet beater, after which the accumulated dust is washed off with a brush. Grease or oil may be removed by an application of lukewarm water and Ivory soap applied with a woolen cloth. There are a number of new woolen cleansers which will work very well on cloth upholstery, but gasoline and benzine have a tendency to spread instead of remove dirt.

BARGAIN COUNTER FOR EVERY TIRE.

ENTIRE STOCK TO BE PLACED ON SALE, WITH EXTRA TIRE FEATURE.

Applying one of the methods which is credited with having been chiefly responsible for the mammoth proportions to which department stores have grown, a plan has been evolved by R. O. Jackson for the introduction of the "bargain plan" in the sale of automobile tires.

Purchases effected by Jackson and his associate, F. A. Scott, for the Rubber City Clearing House Company, and negotiated in much the same manner as department stores contract for unusually large quantities of merchandise, have enabled the Rubber City managers to adopt department-store methods in seeking a quick turnover of stock.

In other words, the Rubber City Clearing House Company's entire stock of tires will be dumped on the bargain counter, the managers assert, without regard to make, grades, treads and sizes, and the "dollar sale" idea put into effect in connection with their sale.

As explained by Jackson, every purchaser of a tire will receive an additional tire identical with the one selected upon the payment of an additional dollar. The same "two-for-one" principle will apply to the purchase of tubes as well.

VOLT METER HELPS IN BATTERY UPKEEP.

TELLS EXACTLY WHEN BATTERY IS CHARGED TO PROPER POINT.

How a volt meter can be made to serve a most important mission in keeping a storage battery up to its maximum of efficiency was demonstrated the past week by C. H. Kay of Kay & Burbank Co., distributors of Exide batteries, on a motoring trip from Los Angeles to Riverside and return.

Primarily, he placed the volt meter on his car to check up the battery's performance. The start was made from Los Angeles with the battery fully charged, but Pasadena had hardly been reached when Mr. Kay found that the battery was being charged excessively.

From Pasadena to San Bernardino the car was run with the headlights burning. Notwithstanding this, the battery was charged to overflowing when San Bernardino was reached. Starting out from San Bernardino for Riverside the next morning, the headlights were kept on and quite a bit of energy diverted in this way from the overcharged battery.

By closely observing the volt meter readings, Mr. Kay was enabled to save the battery by switching on the headlights, and he returned to Los Angeles with his battery in practically the same condition it was in when he left the city.

"It demonstrated to my entire satisfaction," he said, "that anyone regardful of the welfare of his battery can make sure that it is charging just right and not overcharging by installing a volt meter. It is only necessary to devote a few minutes to learning how to read a volt meter to make its use profitable."

BIDS RECEIVED ON ARIZONA HIGHWAYS.

IMPORTANT LINKS IN TRANSCONTINENTAL ROUTES TO BE CONSTRUCTED.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 31.—The State highway department has asked bids on the Clifton-Franklin highway project to cost about $200,000, of which half will be paid by the national government. This road will be a very important link in the transcontinental system that will connect Clifton with the New Mexico line by way of Guthrie, Duncan and Franklin. From Clifton westward the road already has been improved to Solomonville in Graham county. Thence the route westward is by the way of Globe and over the Roosevelt road to Mesa. A new connection will be made some time within the next two years by the State highway under construction from Miami to Superior, somewhat shorter than by the way of Roosevelt. The Supervisors of Mohave county will call an election on the issue of $300,000 bonds for building and maintenance of roads and bridges within the county and $80,000 for a county hospital. The old Trails highway through the county is in poor shape and is to be bettered through the county bond issue, with addition of half the sum from the national government and probably some from the State. The county also will participate in building a State road northward to a new bridge on the Colorado. A third road may be constructed southward through the Santa Maria section toward Phoenix.

FIRST IN ELECTRIC FIEL

"I have never known such an active demand for electric cars in the whole history of the industry," said Mr. G. R. Beach, manager of the Gaffney Motor Sales Company, in commenting upon the future outlook of the electric car business.

"The modern electric car is here in reality, and not only is it here to stay, but it is now being more generally accepted as the common sense, logical car for family use.

"The Milburn Wagon Company of Toledo, O., manufacturers of the Milburn light electric, which since 1848 have occupied a leading place in the wagon industry of the country, today holds the distinction of being the largest manufacturer of electric pleasure vehicles in the United States, if not in the world.

"Its advance to this position at the head of an industry is attributed to the worthiness of its product, the Milburn light electric, which from the day of its introduction to the public has met with a continued and constantly increasing favor among automobile owners of discriminating taste.

"Entering the electric vehicle field while electric cars were still passing through an experimental stage, the Milburn company immediately introduced several innovations which tended to revolutionize the industry, and which, as time has proven, have paved the way to the present world-wide popularity of this truly wonderful car.

"From the start it was the Milburn light electric that inaugurated the light, stream-line car which combined luxury and beauty of design with comfort, economy and dependability. Later, it incorporated a seating arrangement which further greatly added to its particular distinctiveness and charm. It is because of these and other innovations, both in mechanical construction, operation and design that the Milburn light electric has been tablish itself at the head tric car industry and is few which by virtue of of their products have thrive and progress.

COURTESIES TO CALIFORNIANS.

Motorists Receive Warm Reception in the East.

License Plate Draws Crowd Like a Magnet.

Arrowhead Trail and Lincoln Highway Traveled.

"Easterners will often go out of their way to extend courtesies to motorists from California, according to R. Tomlinson of 626 East Third street, Long Beach, who with members of his family, returned October 1 from a transcontinental trip in his model K, 1915, Hupmobile. In recounting incidents connected with his trip to Billy Williams, retail Hupmobile sales manager of the Greer-Robbins Company, he said:

"The California license plate draws like a magnet. Time and again motorists in the East would wave greetings to us. In Perth Amboy, N. J., a man in a large touring car stopped us and insisted on my taking a handful of cigars with his card. I learned afterward that he was head of the Board of Trade of that city. In Washington, D. C., the Hupmobile dealer there passed our Hup on the street. He followed us, made himself known and the result was a column write-up in one of the Washington dailies. These are incidents are only a few of the high lights. In garages and hotels it seemed as though everyone tried to do something for the tourists from California. We never saw a California license plate after leaving Indianapolis."

The Long Beach tourists traveled to Salt Lake over the Arrowhead trail and from the Utah capital they followed the Lincoln highway to Omaha. Indianapolis, Baltimore, Washington, New York and many other eastern points were on their itinerary. The return trip was made over the Santa Fe trail and from Denver until California was reached. Tomlinson declared that heavy rains and washouts had made the roads very bad for motor travel.

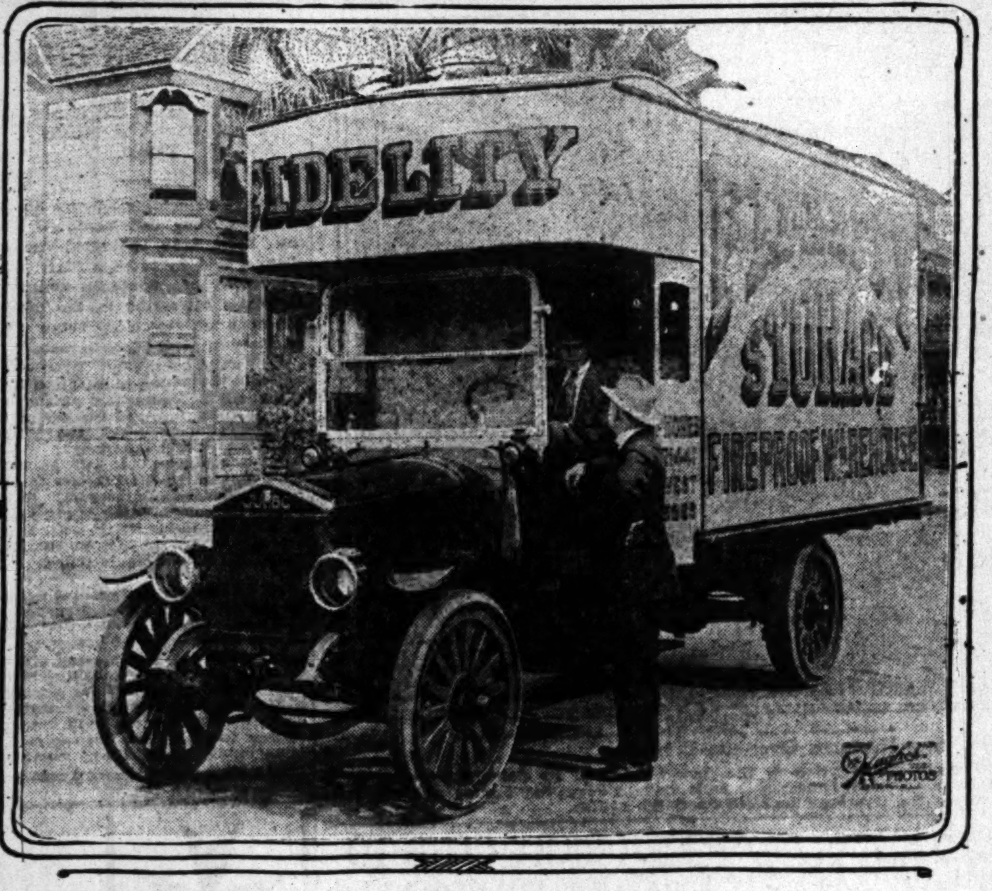
With five people in the car and luggage and a camping outfit, the model K Hupmobile averaged fifteen and three-tenths miles to the gallon of gasoline. Since he purchased the car, the valves have been ground twice while the bearings, he asserts, have never been touched. One tire, a Royal cord, which was on the car when he bought it, has the original Long Beach air in it. He purchased two tires on the trip, which began May 10. East of Indianapolis, the party stopped in hotels and before that point was reached its members camped. The Hupmobile covered a total of 8910 miles on the long tour.

STICKING TIRES.

Sticking tires are caused by rusted rims. To remedy the cause paint the rims with flake graphite mixed to a creamy paste with gasoline. The theory of this is that the gasoline evaporates, leaving the graphite, which prevents the formation of any rust.

LOCKING NUT.

It is easy to lock a nut securely by having the bolt a little longer than is needed and then riveting the projecting end a little after the nut is screwed in place. When the nut is to be removed it is necessary to file off the riveted part.



No Limit to the Size of Truck Bodies.

This miniature house mounted on a Jumbo truck had to be big as it carries the entire equipment of a house on every trip.

TRUCK BODIES ARE BIG AS A HOUSE.

MOVING COMPANY HAS MACHINE THAT ALMOST HITS STREET-CAR WIRES.

In modern building operations it is regarded as a more economical system of construction to extend the building into the air than it is to obtain the same amount of floor space by covering more ground area. Evidently the moving and storage companies of Los Angeles are actuated by a similar belief as they insist upon building bodies for their trucks that are so high they barely will pass beneath the trolley wires. The State law governs the width of a truck body by restricting it to eight feet, but there is nothing in the statutes that prevents two or three-story trucks, and if it were not for such obstacles as wires they probably would be built.

Recently the Fidelity Storage and Warehouse Company purchased a Jumbo truck from the Gates-Kelley Automotive Company and had it equipped with a body that literally is as big as a house. This company does not engage in house moving, but it does move the house's contents and the complete equipment of a six or seven-room bungalow can be transported at one time in this new van. Household furniture does not make up as heavy a load as it does a bulky one and for this reason any truck body that is used in this line of work must be spacious. The Jumbo truck is of the internal-drive type, using the Clark axle and this system of construction is conducive to high speed with an absence of vibration.

INCREASED DISPLAY SPACE IS UNDER WAY.

POWER-PLUS SIX TO GET MORE ATTRACTIVE SETTING THAN EVER.

Alterations which are now being made in the sales and display rooms of the Leach-Biltwell Motor Company, on South Grand avenue, will when completed, afford greatly-increased floor space for the exhibition of Leach power-plus sixes, as well as the different models of the Columbia light six, for which the company is the Southern California distributor.

Offices of the company are being removed to a location in the rear of the sales floor, and the latter is being widened to take in the space formerly occupied by a driveway and deepened to double the former dimensions.

The changes being made are designed to answer all requirements until the company removes its manufacturing plant to a new factory, which will be erected on a twenty-two-acre site east of Boyle avenue on Slauson, in the heart of the new industrial district. Upon the removal of the factory the Grand-avenue location will be retained and further remodeling will make of it one of the finest sales headquarters in the city, with the added advantage of being one of the most easily-accessible downtown motor-car headquarters.

"We have until now been greatly handicapped in exhibiting the Leach power-plus six to dealers and motorists on account of the cramped condition of our sales floor," M. A. Leach, president of the Leach-Biltwell Motor Company said. "In making the alterations we have undertaken we are following out the suggestions which came to us from dealers and others who insisted that the Leach power-plus six deserved a more attractive setting than heretofore."

RIGID INSPECTION AT TIRE FACTORY.

EVERY MOVE OF HAND-BUILT PROCESS IS CAREFULLY WATCHED BY EXPERTS.

Probably the most rigid inspection system in vogue at any of the automobile-tire factories in the country is that of the Hewitt Rubber Company of Buffalo, N. Y. J. B. Wood, the distributor for Hewitt products in Southern California, returned recently after being at the factory for several weeks, and he declares that the inspection system surpasses anything of its kind in use by tire companies. For each squad of six tire makers there is a captain, who serves as the inspector and not a single operation in connection with the hand-built process of Hewitt construction escapes his scrutiny.

Mr. Wood reports that the Hewitt company has an abundant supply of the highest-grade tire-making materials possible to obtain, already in stock, and if entirely cut off from receipts could continue production indefinitely. The company is now erecting an enormous addition to its plant which will make possible a daily output of 8000 tires.

The introduction of Hewitt solid tires into the territory controlled by the J. B. Wood Tire Company has been followed by such a pronounced demand that a carload shipment is now en route to Los Angeles. It is explained by Mr Wood that the Hewitt company uses what is known as the laminated process in building solid tires. The base rubber is rolled into the saw-tooth groves of the rim by hand. This prevents any possibility of the serrations being but partially filled. The remainder of the tire is built up ply at a time under hydraulic pressure, so that any tendency there might be to crack or break is overcome.

SLIGHT KNOWLEDGE WITH THE BATTERY.

SURPRISING PERFORMANCE OF ONE OWNER IS CITED AS AN EXAMPLE.

Service men identified with the motor trade of Los Angeles encounter many incidents, which illustrate an astonishing lack of understanding on the part of motorists concerning various mechanical features of their cars, but none quite as pronounced as that which last week came to the notice of the Kay and Burbank Company, distributors of Exide batteries.

"I guess there must be something wrong with my battery," a voice on the telephone informed one of the Kay and Burbank Company service men, "because I can't make the starter work, turn on the lights or anything. It ought to be all right, because I cleaned out the battery and put fresh water in it."

This was enough information for the service man, who, however, wanted to make sure that he had divined the real trouble. "You mean that you cleaned it out thoroughly?" he inquired.

"You bet I did," the troubled motorist declared, "I flushed it good and let it drain before filling it up again."

"Well," the service expert responded, "you must have made a good job of it all right, and there's only one remedy now and that is to empty it again and let us fill it up with the right mixture of sulphuric acid and water."

"Why I didn't know a battery had sulphuric acid in it," the surprised automobilist remarked, adding, "I expect you had better call right away for the battery."

RUST PREVENTERS.

Vaseline to which a little powdered gum camphor has been added, the whole being heated over a slow fire, will prevent the formation of rust on tools. A mixture of one pound of lard, an ounce of gum camphor and a little lampblack melted together will protect bright metal work from rust.

A Bear on Hills

KISSEL

I have owned and driven automobiles for over nine years. I bought my first Kissel a few months ago. I have driven it practically every day since I got it. We have taken a few long, hard trips and have done a good deal of hill-climbing. I have never spared the car, nor have I ever let her out to the limit to see what she would do. But I do know that I can take my place in any pinch with any car on the road, whether it is in a hard pull or on steep grades, or on the straight-away, or in crowded traffic.

In lots of cases when other cars are boiling mine will be scarcely warm. I have never known it to get hot, and I have given it lots of tests.

The other day a fellow in a big (see note below) thought he'd show me up on Cahuenga Pass. Just for fun I let him pass me and then I let the Kissel out—and say—I left that fellow behind like he was walking, and you know the (see note below) has all kinds of power and speed. I'll say the Kissel is a bear on hills.

I have never had a single mechanical adjustment on it, which is more than I can say for the first few months' service of the other cars I have owned.

If you publish this please omit my name.

We have omitted the name of the car referred to in the paragraph above in deference to the other car which is known as one of the top-notchers.*

We will be glad to furnish upon request the name and address of the author of the above statement.

LUBRICATION IS OFTEN NEGLECTED.

MECHANISM OF MOTOR CAR SHOULD BE WATCHED AT ALL TIMES.

Anyone who has ever inspected the machinery in a power station, pumping plant, or factory power-house, cannot fail to have been impressed with the great care that is taken to insure the proper lubrication of every moving part of the machinery. Every precaution to see that not a single bearing lacks oil for a single second is part of the daily routine.

"There is a lesson in this that the average automobile owner should take to heart," declares L. V. Starr, manager of J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors. "The machinery of a power station or similar plant operates under far more favorable conditions than does the mechanism of the automobile. It is protected from dust, mud or water, and operates upon rigid foundations. The mechanism of the motor car is apt to be exposed to dirt and water, and does not operate upon what can be termed a very solid foundation.

"It is all the more imperative, therefore, that the lubrication of the automobile should be watched even more carefully than that of the stationary power plant. Certainly the life of the car, and the quality of the service it will give depend largely upon the care with which the car is lubricated.

"It is noticeable that owners today are paying more and more attention to this feature of the care of their car. If a man has not the time or the inclination to regularly lubricate his car for himself according to the charts supplied by the maker, he will find it a very real economy to have the work done regularly by concerns that make a specialty of this sort of work. Oil is far cheaper and more satisfactory than repairs, and repairs are certain to be necessary in time on any car that does not receive proper lubrication."

THE INEVITABLE IRISH BULL.

Judge E. B. Kinkead, who presided at the meeting at the Southern Theater, Wednesday evening at which Eammon De Valera, president of the provisional Irish republic spoke, in introducing the chief of the Gaels, who had come from his island home across the sea to let America hear the cause which he represents and the reasons why he represents it, said:

"President De Valera is the same kind of an Irishman that I am. He was born in this country and I was born in this country. His mother was an Irish lady and his father was not. My mother was an Irish lady and my father was not."

The judge hadn't meant to be funny, but brought forth the first laugh of the evening from the big audience, without any premeditation. He excused himself for the blunder and continued his remarks.—[Columbus Dispatch.

METEORIC GROWTH OF AUTO INDUSTRY.

OWNERS' SATISFACTION PUTS MOTOR CAR GAME IN THIRD PLACE.

Peculiar in many respects is the meteoric growth of the automobile industry in the United States. It had no precedent to follow in the marketing of motor vehicles, and once sales began to pour in, the heavy artillery of manufacturers was unleashed, with the result in that a little more than two decades has found the manufacture of motor cars in third position among America's industries.

Aiding the determination and enthusiasm of the manufacturers and dealers has been the unbounded enthusiasm of satisfied owners, who have exerted probably a more powerful buying influence than in any other line of business. If the average motorist is satisfied with his car, he proceeds to tell all his friends.

Such, in a measure, is the position in which J. G. Heath, Pacific Coast sales manager of the Remington Arms Company, finds himself. He is so enthusiastic over the performance of his Jordan silhouette model motor car that no friend gets away unless he hears about the roadability of his new car. In a letter to Robert S. Weaver, vice-president of the Seager-Clark Company, Mr. Heath mentioned that his Jordan is averaging 200 miles to the quart of oil.

Sales continue to pour in on the Southern California distributors. Among the most recent deliveries was a Jordon town sedan equipped with Disteel wheels to E. B. Giffen, prominent real estate man of this city and well known in athletic club circles. When Mr. Giffen is not inducing people with money to invest in real estate he is galloping around the Los Angeles Athletic Club hand ball courts, or out in his new inclosed Jordan, the second car of that make he has owned.

REMOVING DENTS.

The amateur mechanic is often puzzled as to how to remove a dent from a tank. Solder a tire valve to the filler cap and then pump air into the tank, meanwhile tapping lightly around the edges of the dent with a leather mallet. The pressure of the air in the tank will push the dent out even with the rest of the surface with the help of the mallet taps.

SPRING COMPRESSION.

A convenient dodge for holding a valve spring in compressed position is to compress the part in a vise and then catch it with a fine wire. It is easy now to put the spring into position, after which the wire may be clipped and pulled out.

USING HAND PUMP.

In the use of the hand tire pump the average motorist makes the mistake of pumping in short, quick strokes. The proper method is to pull the handle up all the way and then force it clear down to the bottom of the pump. This gives the benefit of the full volume of air, and the longer strokes are much less tiring than the short, jerky ones.

The most stylish car of the year

KEEPING PACE WITH DEMANDS.

Increased Production Makes Truck Deliveries Possible.

New Models Highly Recommended by French Army.

Power and Stamina Shown Under Trying Conditions.

Fifty years ago, a motor truck was about as remote a possibility as a commercial airplane.

Little did the men who established the small factory for the manufacture of plows and farming implements, and which later developed an international name and reputation—the John Deere Plow Company—foresee that their fifty years of experience would some day help in the solving of the gigantic problem of highway transportation.

But when the gas engine came to displace the horse, the men who were behind the great manufacturing concern diverted a considerable portion of their attention, skill and energy to the creation of a motor truck which would do justice to their reputation.

The Velie truck was the result.

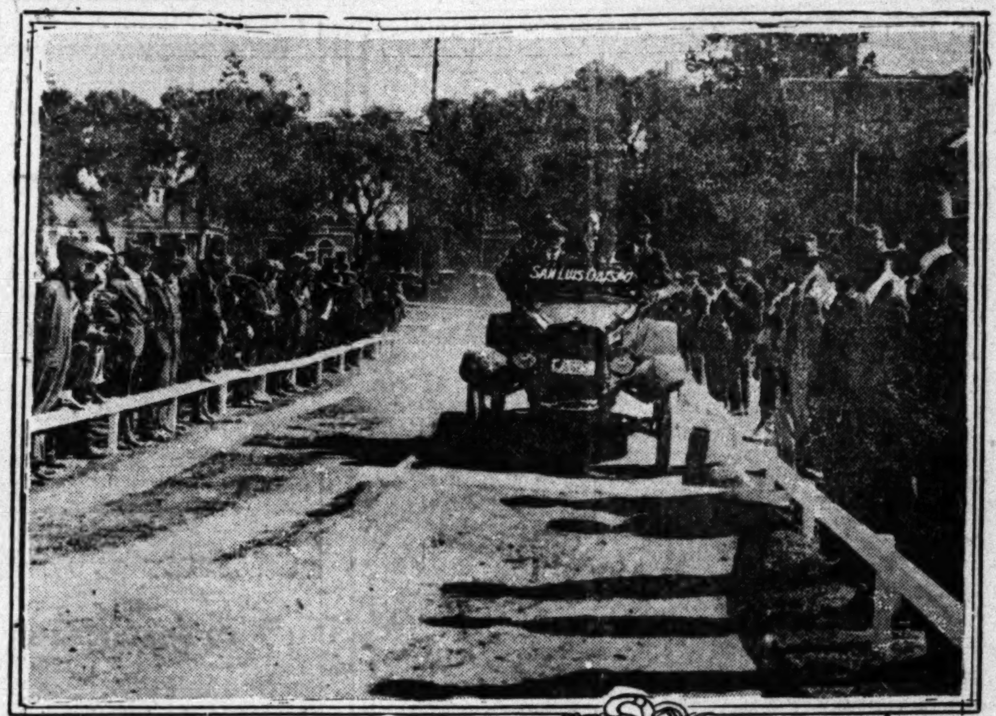
Due largely to war requirements and the consequent stimulated condition of business throughout the East and Middle West, the demand for these trucks has been so great for several years past that the factory has been unable to keep up with it.

Harry Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company of this city, in announcing that he has arranged to take over the full Velie line, which includes three models of trucks—the one and a half ton, two and a half and four-ton capacity—in addition to the Velie passenger car, stated that he had been repeatedly asked why he had not carried Velie trucks before.

"The reason has been," said Mr. Lord, "that the factory was unable to supply these trucks in sufficient quantities to enable us to make deliveries within a reasonable time. Notwithstanding this, several large concerns in Southern California, the Union Oil Company of Los Angeles, for instance, have gradually accumulated fleets of Velie trucks. Not being in a position to give any assurance to prospective purchasers as to when they might expect deliveries, I have been reluctant to handle the trucks.

"Recently, however, the manufacturers have increased the capacity of the plant by the construction of three additional factory buildings at Moline, Ill. This will enable it to keep pace with the demand, and I feel no hesitancy now in offering Velie trucks. The first shipment recently arrived in Los Angeles, and they are on display at the showrooms, Eleventh and Olive streets.

"The new models are equipped with Continental motors, Timken bearings throughout, extra strong brakes, and removable tube radiators. The performance of Velie trucks was highly commended by the officers of the transportation department of the French army."



Still Doing Business Over the Bumps.

The Overland Mystery Four is still the center of attraction in the second week of its demonstration over its own "bad road" at Eleventh and Hope. Several thousand people have ridden the bumps and all have been surprised at the ease with which the Overland traveled its rough course.

NEW SPRINGS GET THOROUGH TRYOUT.

MYSTERY CAR STILL RAMBLING AROUND ITS TRICK ROAD.

The wonderful economy of the Overland four car, resultant from the new type patented spring-chassis, is daily proving itself to the hundreds of Southern California motorists interested in the demonstrations of this car, being given at Eleventh and Hope streets.

"I am averaging twenty-four miles to the gallon of gasoline," said "Cowbody" Rogers, one of the official demonstrators of the car at the local headquarters of the Willys-Overland Pacific Company.

"This statement I will be more than pleased to substantiate to anyone legitimately interested. So far as the oil consumption is concerned it is so incredibly small that, to the average motorist, the consumption would be unbelieveable unless proven."

In discussing the general upkeep of the Overland four, Treasurer J. F. Thomson, of the Willys-Overland Pacific Company, said yesterday: "It is not simply in gasoline and oil that the Overland four is excelling in low cost of maintenance. As a matter of fact the new three-point cantilever spring suspension, built into the chassis itself, makes the car ride so remarkably easy that, combined with light weight, the wear and on the tires and engine will prove least 60 per cent. less than on the ordinary type motor car.

"I am convinced that, as soon as this model becomes proven by the public in general, it will be voted "the most economical car in the world."

LARGER SHIPMENTS LEAVE THE FACTORY.

O. R. FULLER STIRS THINGS UP ON HIS JAUNT TO HEADQUARTERS.

The Stephens sales force of the White Auto Company, distributor of the Stephens salient six, was placed in a much happier frame of mind last Wednesday, when information was received from O. R. Fuller, head of the concern, and who is in the East, that larger Stephens shipments have already been started toward the Coast from the factory. These shipments include roadsters and four and six-passenger models.

"That Mr. Fuller has got favorable action at the Stephens factory in response to his constant appeals for more cars, is one of the best pieces of news the sales force has had for many a long day. From this time on and including the winter months, Stephens cars will be coming to us in something like appreciable quantities, according to Mr. Fuller's last wire," said J. J. Chavan, sales manager.

WAIT

for the Revolutionary Six

ONCE again we council you to wait.

Price, Performance, Economies and Fine Appearance will well justify a little more patience.

At the offices of the Corporation, a great flood of inquiries comes in on the tide of every mail. At the great Elizabeth, N. J. plant, every nerve is being strained to hasten the Day of Big Production—400 to 500 Sixes, day after day.

By this time, all America is realizing that the Six is not merely the most remarkable car of the year, but one of the few Epoch-Making Cars of Automobile History.

Automobile men on all sides are complimenting us for our American spirit in overcoming the many obstacles, which, for years, had made the coming of such a car impossible.

Today the Six is fully developed. Each of the revolutionary forward steps has justified itself during two years of testing, over asphalt and mud, levels and hills, smooth roads and ruts—200,000 miles of it.

Each of the new principles has won the approval of prominent members of the Society of Automotive Engineers. One of them, the new three point Cantilever Spring Suspension, accomplishes a remarkable result—in effect adding a good 30 inches to the 112 inch wheel-base and giving this light economic car (approximately 2,100 pounds) all the road luxury of those ponderous extravagant palaces of 142 inch base. The chassis also is radically simple—eliminating costly material and greatly expediting quantity production.

A car of handsome appearance, that gets you about as only a Six can—averaging 17 to 20 miles per gallon of gasoline throughout the tests

The People's Six—Economic to Buy—Economic to Keep.

Shortly, from Elizabeth, the base of production, great train loads of Sixes will be shipping to the four points of the compass.

And at the other extensive plants of the Willys Corporation—at Toledo, O., Syracuse and Poughkeepsie, N. Y., production of the Auto-Lite, New Process Gears and Willys Light will go on in the never-yet-achieved effort to keep pace with increasing demand. To date over a million and a half Auto-Lite sets have been produced and marketed—New Process Gears are being produced for over 2,000 automotive vehicles per day—the Willys Light is just coming into production, and, in one single month, has booked orders for 20,000 sets.

Each of these industries is a source of supply for the new Six—in fact, practically every item of the new car, from raw material to finished product, is produced by the Willys Corporation, or by controlled and closely allied industries.

Anyone desiring further information about the plans and car program of the Willys Corporation should write for our booklet.

JOCKEY CLUB TO CONTROL RACES.

Registration of All Owners and Horses Planned.

Objectionable Elements to be Kept Out of Events.

Pacific Coast has Assurance of Real Classics.

Standing for the best traditions in the "sport of kings" and for the elimination of those objectionable features that checked horse racing, the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, was formed last week to assume control of the sport in this section. The new turf organization will affiliate with the eastern controlling associations so that rulings will be respected under reciprocal agreements.

That the racing which has been revived here at Ascot and Exposition parks may be kept on the same high plane, it has been found advisable to form a supervisorial body. Without any restraint or governing association, racing might soon fall again into disfavor instead of being welcomed as one of the greatest of all the sports. At present there is no way of deciplining an owner, trainer or jockey for any infringement of clean sportsmanship.

The Pacific Coast Jockey Club will begin its activities by the registration of all horses, owners, trainers and jockeys beginning November 15. Without licenses, no stable or rider will be allowed to compete in the four-day programme which is to be opened Thanksgiving Day in connection with the annual Turkey Day motor event. There will be five feature races Thanksgiving Day in addition to the $5000 auto race—America's all-star sweepstakes—including the Thanksgiving derby at a mile and eighth.

The horse racing, too, will be under assignment of dates by the new jockey club. With affiliation with the Western Jockey Club and the New York Jockey Club, the Pacific Coast body has sent assurance to eastern stables that racing here is not to be of the "outlaw" or "wild-cat" nature without disciplinary supervision.

Within the last week a half dozen eastern owners have telegraphed for information regarding the Ascot racing. The stewards of the jockey club here will be able to answer with a definite programme and guarantees of clean racing.

"If racing, such as is to meet with the popular approval, is to be continued here, it must be conducted without those features which brought deserved disaster to the thoroughbred contests," said an official of the jockey club yesterday. "That is the reason that this organization is taking control. It means fair play for the horsemen and public alike with a keen regard, also, for the legal requirements.

"We will affiliate with the eastern bodies and will respect their rulings. That means that we will have only those who are worthy to maintain the high standard of the sport.

"In the olden days the horsemen could rely upon getting money out of the book makers. The book makers have gone now and the horsemen are racing for the purses solely. It is a return of the sport to the good old times when the owners ran their horses for the sheer joy and sport of it.

"Of course, Ascot will offer sufficient purses to make it well worth while for the owners, the trainers and jockeys."

The stewards of the new organization will be T. H. Dudley, former Mayor of Santa Monica and prominent banker; George Middleton, retired capitalist; J. Myrick, Jr., H. M. Walker, Edward O'Malley, Fane Norton, Harry Brand, Edward Moriarity and Edward R. Smith. M. L. Hayman will be the secretary and handicapper.

Meantime at Ascot the horsemen are gathering from every section. There are more horses now stabled there than even in the old days. The stable room has been almost trebled since the Stampede but is still insufficient. Even a restaurant and boarding-house has been established for the benefit of the horsemen.

While the Thanksgiving Day card will be reduced to five races, owing to the motor event, Friday and Saturday will bring a full programme of six. On Sunday, the closing day, there will be five races because of the motorcycle championship events.

The new horse track at Ascot will be much faster than at the time of the Stampede because it is being worked daily by track experts.

TOPS.

Mohair tops should be cleaned frequently by dusting off and brushing briskly with a stiff brush. On the other hand, Pantasote tops are best cleaned with a soft brush dipped in water, in which a little ammonia has been placed, after which the top should be rubbed dry. Pantasote curtains may be treated in the same way. Do not use gasoline or kerosene to clean the tops.

Ship by Truck

Stimulating Los Angeles Business

There are today in active operation several thousand truck-transportation companies. From every large distributing center, and many small ones, these arteries of express trucking reach out, relieving—even revolutionizing—the older methods of moving freight.

The data collected by the Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau of this city shows that truck lines are in operation all along the roads which radiate in all directions from this center of commerce.

These companies offer you a service you can depend on.

Already the tendency is toward organizations of financial stability and high efficiency of operation.

When you entrust a shipment to one of these forwarders by truck, you have ample assurance of punctual delivery.

The transport company's truck backs up to your shipping platform. Your consignment is loaded and receipt given. The truck rolls out; is shortly moving on its sure, rapid, uninterrupted course to its destination.

Upon its arrival, the truck goes directly to the receiving platform of the consignee.

Your goods are handled only two or three times. Breakage is reduced to the minimum.

By way of contrast, learn from your traffic man the delays and rehandling of the average short haul freight shipment from your plant to a customer. Look into the complications of transfer and redistribution in belt road collections, freight houses, junction points. Consider the many handlings that are necessary, with consequent delay, labor expense and possible damage.

Short haul freight shipments represent a waste both to shipper and the railroad. You probably know these conditions. Correct them. The remedy is at hand:

Ship by Truck.

Get in touch with the Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau, 1165 South Figueroa St. Study the schedules on this page of the truck transportation companies serving this city. You'll discover that short and medium distance freight transportation is being revolutionized through the idea "Ship by Truck."

Every box and case loaded on a truck is not only a matter of better service for you and for your customer, but a contribution to our local and national welfare.

The fact is—over half the truck tonnage of America is carried on Firestone Tires

NEW BUILDINGS PLANNED.

Cadillac Service to be Extended Throughout the Entire State.

Upon his return from the annual conference of Cadillac dealers in Detroit, Don Lee made the important announcement yesterday that plans were being consummated for the erection of six new buildings in California with ample facilities for caring for the needs of Cadillac owners for ten years to come. During the last eleven days the California Cadillac distributor has attended a two-day conference in Detroit and spent a day in New York.

The purpose of the trip was to attend the annual fall conference at the Cadillac factory. Of the 101 distributors in the United States and Canada all but one were present at this conference, which Lee declares was far and away the most enthusiastic gathering of Cadillac dealers he has ever attended, and he has been attending such gatherings for the past fifteen years.

"I have never seen the dealers so confidence of the future Cadillac product as they were in Detroit last week," said the California distributor. "Every distributor has more business than he can take care of and of the hundred dealers at the meeting there was not one who would not have welcomed an increase in his allotment.

"I also learned that a majority of the big dealers are planning new buildings and service plants and work on many has already been started. As fast as possible the work on our new plants in practically all cities in California where we are represented by a branch will be started.

"The first buildings to be erected will be in San Francisco, Sacrament and Los Angeles. We are not ready to announce our plans for Los Angeles in detail, but will state that our plant will be the largest and best equipped in the West. It will be adequate to care for Cadillac service and Cadillac business in general for more than ten years to come.

"The factory has most progressive plans for increased production and we must have a building many times the size of the present one in Los Angeles to keep pace with the factory progress.

"The Cadillac plant has reached normal production again and during the next three months we should have our regular allotment of cars. How long we will be in catching up with the present list of advance orders I am, of course, unable to say, as new orders are being booked daily; but I do know that during the next three months we will be able to deliver as many cars as during any three months during the past four years, and it will place us in a position to give definite information as to future deliveries on all models.

"Business conditions generally seem to be good in the East. There is the greatest activity in all branches of trade, and nowhere was there any indication or thought of a let-up."

PARTS CASE.

An ingenious motorist suggests a way of making old battery parts into a convenient case for holding various small parts. The bottoms of several old battery jars are sawed off so that the wells make individual compartments. A number of these cut off jars are fastened into a shallow box with glue and the case is complete and ready for nuts, bolts, screws, parts of generators, magnetos etc.

ACID PROOF WOOD.

When the storage battery is carried in a wooden box there is always trouble from the acid slopping over and eating the wooden box. Wood may be made proof against acid by painting with a mixture made of six parts wood tar and twelve parts resin. These ingredients are melted together in an iron kettle, after which eight parts of finely powdered brick dust are stirred in. The surfaces are first thoroughly cleaned and then painted with this mixture warm.

STRIKING EXAMPLE OF BUS UTILITY.

One of the most striking examples of the fact that motor-bus transportation today can, with proper equipment, compete with the electric car with complete success is afforded by the motor bus lines that operate between Sawtelle, Santa Monica and Venice. Directly paralleling the lines of the electric cars, eighteen Dodge busses of sixteen-passenger capacity have been in operation, some of them for ten months, and all are operating profitably and furnishing a class of transportation that is proving eminently satisfactory to the patrons of the line.

According to M. L. Culley, Dodge dealer for the Santa Monica territory, who has watched the operation of the Dodge cars with utmost care, the fleet of busses have proved beyond question their ability to operate at a fare of 10 cents where the electric cars charge 15 cents.

"I sold the first Dodge delivery truck chassis for this class of work last January," Culley last week told Fred S. Albertson, Dodge distributor. "Since that time I have sold seventeen more for this class of work. The first car has already covered 70,000 miles, and the entire fleet of eighteen would average at least 40,000 miles. The cars cover 204 miles every day, and maintain a very strict schedule that is laid down for them by the State Railroad Commission."

CARLOAD OF LATE MODELS ON HAND.

SURE OF MOST SUCCESSFUL SEASON FOR OLD ESTABLISHED LINE OF CARS.

The arrival of a carload of the latest series Case models this last week at the headquarters of Spencer, Morris and Mang, distributors here in the Southland for this well-known car, marks the opening of what promises to be a most successful season for this new firm with this one of the old established line of motor cars.

Ever since the days of old J. I. C., the famous trotting horse known to all about three decades, the Case company has been prominently before the public and favorably known as the manufacturing of vehicles and implements built up to a standard—a standard that for years has set the pace.

With the arrival of this carload of Case cars and following the announcement recently that Spencer, Morris and Mang, experienced automobile men had taken over the distribution of this car, there has been a lot of activity around their headquarters which is temporarily located at 231 North Los Angeles street, pending their selection of a permanent home on auto row.

"Coincident with the arrival of this carload," says Mr. Spencer, "came notice of more shipments following and definite word that two carloads a week would follow along regularly, which will enable us to take care of our outside dealers whom we are at the present time selecting."

VARIANCE LIMIT GETTING SMALLER.

ONE THOUSANDTH OF AN INCH EXACTNESS REQUIRED ON MANY PARTS.

How much is one thousandth of an inch? This tiny measurement, so small to be invisible to the human eye, is in reality a working margin set for the mechanics of the Studebaker factory. Not only one operation requires this amazing exactness—620 of them are measured by the one-thousandth of an inch.

"Manufacturing limits" are what they are called in the factory, and that is what they mean. The one-thousandth of an inch is the limit of variance, so marked have become the modern methods of motor-car manufacture. By the manufacture of gauges and dies to the last degree of minute correctness, the automobile mechanics are enabled to work with a certainty and exactness that would have been regarded as impossible at the beginning of the war.

"Nothing is left to chance or guess in the Studebaker factory," said Paul G. Hoffman, of Maxwell & Hoffman, the Studebaker distributors, yesterday. "Each operation has its manufacturing limit. Some parts do not have to be fitted with the exactness that others require. The schedule is established by the engineers and the mechanics must work to that.

"To see that each operation is done with the nicety required, there are 6980 inspections for each motor car before it leaves the factory. This absolutely precludes the possibility of careless assembly. The inspectors are graded with a chief in each department. Before the part is released to go to the next unit in the manufacturing chain, it must be inspected by the chief, who is the super-expert of the department.

"While there are 620 mechanical operations exact to the one-thousandth of an inch, 160 more require perfection, with only one-half thousandth part of an inch variance. So it goes on, through the factory. Each operation has its set scale and there must be no deviation from it.

"In the motor there are operations absolutely baffling in their exactness. Yet these operations are not tedious. Modern methods complete this work in surprisingly fast time. But there is an absolute lack of rush in the Studebaker plant. With the output sold and a call for twice as many more cars, there has been the same careful schedule maintained. That is the reason that owners have been able to take entirely new cars from the factory and drive across the continent without a sign of mechanical trouble."

GARAGE CART.

The car owner who does considerable work in his own garage will find very helpful one of the little two-wheeled carts that he used to make perhaps when he was a youngster. These "vehicles" consist simply of a bottom piece, on the ends of which are two casters a board with an upright at the bottom to hold on whatever is being carried and the handle, which may be as long as desired. For carrying around a battery or a heavy part these little trucks are invaluable.

VULCANIZING BLOCK

A useful aid in vulcanizing tubes is a rubber covered block which may be made in the following manner: A sheet of fabric is tacked to the block and to this is vulcanized a layer of tread stock, cementing and curing in the usual way. This block has the advantage that no tack heads stick up through the rubber top layer.

TO STOP CORNER CUTS.

There will be no more "cutting of corners" on country roads by motorists in Southern California, according to a warning sent out by traffic officers throughout the southern part of the State.

Many and serious accidents have resulted from carelessness in this respect, even on rural highways, says the Automobile Club of Southern California and that organization is now co-operating with the various sheriffs' offices, in trying to curb the practice and to enforce the Motor Vehicle Act, which provides for just such a contingency.

Practically every city in the State maintains a special clause in an ordinance against corner cutting, it is pointed out, but motorists have developed the impression that when in the country they can slew recklessly around corners to their heart's content.

No longer will this be countenanced by traffic officers and motorcycle cops, warns the Auto Club, and arrests will follow wherever a driver is found not making a well-rounded turn at a highway intersection. There is now a state law to this effect, and the law is going to be enforced to the minute, so watch out.

On the other hand, there is a warning issued for urban motorists by the club in regard to lighting tail-lights after coming out of a theater or other place of amusement at night. Many motorists forget that they have shut their lights off when leaving the car, and fail to light them again, thus laying themselves open to arrest.

MAKING A MAGNET.

It is possible to magnetize a file by winding about a dozen turns of a strand of the wire to which a lighted electric bulb is attached. This will give enough magnetism to the file to permit of its use for picking up small parts, screws, nuts, etc., that have fallen into inaccessible places.

EXHAUST PIPE PAINT.

To paint the exhaust pipe requires a compound capable of resisting a high degree of heat. Use two parts of black oxide of manganese, three parts of graphite and nine parts of fuller's earth, thoroughly mixed and added to which is ten parts of sodium silicate, one part of glucose and five parts of water, until it is of the consistency which enables it to be applied with a brush.

Rather Suspicious.

AN AIR-COOLED CAR ANNOUNCED

New Machine Embodies Many Late Improvements.

Develops High Power for Lightweight Motor.

United Corporation to Handle Car in the South.

Several new motor cars have made their appearance in the automobile market since the signing of the armistice. Many of these new machines have shown improvements in construction which can be traced directly to experience gained during the war. Motor vehicles had to function on the front and experts were on hand every minute to see what was the trouble and remedy when they fell down.

The newest member of the automobile industry is the Holmes improved air-cooled car. It is being built by a man who is recognized as an expert on chassis construction, who was for seven years chief engineer of the Franklin Motor Car Company, and who supervised the building of airplane motors for the government during the period of the emergency. And Mr. Holmes has applied many of the factors learned through war experience in the construction of the new air-cooled machine.

The Holmes car will be handled in Los Angeles and surrounding territory by the United Corporation, which has opened temporary quarters at 331 South Los Angeles street. Frank Rea and Henry G. Krohn are at the head of the new concern. Twenty prominent business men of this city are behind the corporation.

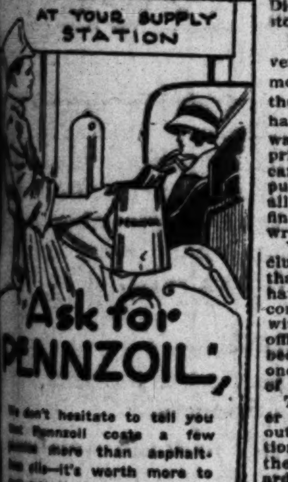
Frank Rea was formerly treasurer of the Home Telephone Company and held the commission of major in the Quartermaster Corps during the war.

Henry G. Krohn has been in the automobile business in Los Angeles for many years and has recently returned as a first lieutenant from the army. Lieut. Krohn was in charge of the Fourth Liberty Loan activities in the army.

Shipments of the new Holmes car left the factory last Friday and the United Corporation hopes to have the machines on display inside of two weeks.

The Holmes car is equipped with a [illegible]-type motor of the dual [illegible] valve pattern. It is a light weight motor, but develops remarkably high horse power. Exhaustive tests have already been made and the Holmes chassis has proved more than satisfactory in every point. The hardest and longest climbs have failed to heat the motor and no test yet attempted has put a severe strain on the power of the car.

The Holmes will be built in seven-passenger touring, roadster, sedan and coupe models. It will have 126 inch wheel base and according to factory claims will average better than twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline.



"Ask for PENNZOIL,"

We don't hesitate to tell you that Pennzoil costs a few cents more than asphalt-base oils—it's worth more to your motor!

Those few cents' difference in oil cost means a difference of years in the life of your motor.

If you think that several years more service from your car is worth a few pennies, ask for a pure Pennsylvania paraffine base oil.

Giving the Auburn Beauty Six a Real Tryout.

Mrs. George Renwilk, Mrs. Salter and Mrs. Peterson recently completed a 5300-mile jaunt in their Auburn car and returned with nothing but praise for its performance. They claimed that motor camping was the best sport in the world and informed W. J. Burt of the W. J. Burt Motor Car Company that they would like nothing better than to load up the car and start for New York.

"3" to an "8" and changed the "8" to a "9" by a process of glazing for which they had built special machinery. A Massachusetts license plate was their masterpiece, and this is being held as evidence for the trial. They met their fate when they tried to drive around the San Diego business district in a car stolen in Los Angeles.

Having played the field in Denver, C. L. Adams and H. A. Richmond came to Los Angeles to try their luck at automobile stealing, having heard, apparently, that this was rich pickings. They rented a private garage and took the first car they stole there for dissecting purposes. They dissected it, removed all identification marks they could find, and tried to sell the parts to wrecking houses here.

When they were arrested by the club's theft bureau, it developed that they were wanted in Denver for having stolen 100 automobiles. Their confessions were secured, and it is with some gratification that club officials announce that sentence has been passed upon them for from one to ten years on the rusty side of a cell door "up north."

The fate of a public garage owner who takes his customers' cars out for an airing without the sanction of the owner is now hanging in the balance with the arrest of Richard A. Koehler, a garage proprietor of Long Beach. He took out a big machine belonging to H. Mahessa of that city without Mr Mahessa's permission, and proceeded to wreck it. The theft bureau arrested him and he has confessed and is now awaiting trial.

FOXY SCHEME.

A foxy scheme was tried without ultimate success by two youths giving the names of James Colton and Clyde Morrison, who stole a certificate out of an automobile in Sacramento, hurried over to the Motor Vehicle Department and secured a license plate which they carried with them to San Francisco. In San Francisco they stole a car, put the stolen license plate on it, and drove to Los Angeles, happy in the mistaken idea that they could sell the car here and get away with the deal. They were arrested by the auto club when they tried it.

These are instances recited in the club's report showing the style of activities indulged in by the "professional" thief. Club officers state that the activities of the youthful adventurers arriving from the East following demobilization and their own wanderlust are as pernicious. But they succumb to the temptation of the unlocked machine.

Los Angeles motor-car owners put temptation in the way of youths of from 16 to 20 years of age by not locking their cars, say the authorities.

There have been 1356 automobiles stolen in Los Angeles this year to date, having a valuation of more than $1,000,000. Of these 1118 have been recovered for their owners, and there are many yet outstanding. The auto club's bureau recovered thirty-seven machines in October, and is planning a special campaign for November.

STUTZ FACTORY IS ENLARGING AGAIN.

Word has been received from Indianapolis by Walter M. Brown, local Stutz distributor, that the new buildings for the Stutz Motor Car Company in that city are nearing completion. When the new additions to the plant are finished, the size of the factory will be about doubled and within time the output the Stutz car all over the country. ly. When completed the new Stutz factory will present practically a solid block of brick and concrete structure.

The announcement of the plans for enlarging the Stutz factory was made some time ago and came as a result of the tremendous demand for the Stutz cad all over the country. Dealers everywhere were clamoring for more cars and deliveries were lagging away behind sales. The factory was unable to cope with the situation despite the fact that the plant was running night and day. The increase in the size and output resulted.

CARBON SCRAPER.

A putty knife may be made into an excellent carbon scraper by grinding down the blade in two different curves, one a wider curve than the other. In this way practically every nook and cranny of the cylinder head can be reached with one curved edge or the other.

LIKES OUTDOOR LIFE.

"Motoring is the best sport in the world," said Mrs. George R. Renwick of 1625 Fifth avenue, as she, with her sister, Mrs. Salter, and their mother, Mrs. Peterson, returned from a 5300-mile trip in her Auburn Beauty six, covering the whole Palific Coast as far north as Canada. "We certainly had a most wonderful trip. It was one continuous round of pleasure, with scenery such as no words can describe.

"We left Los Angeles without a schedule of where we should stop at any time, and our home was wherever we found a good camping spot. We carried a full camping outfit, including a gasoline stove, and we used gas from our car for cooking."

Mrs. Renwick was the driver and made all her own adjustments, tire changes, etc., and never at any time during her entire trip called on any garage or any man for assistance in caring for the oiling and adjustments of her car. Mrs. Salter and Mrs. Peterson did all the camp duties. During their entire camping trip of eight weeks, they only slept under a roof seven nights.' One night on account of a heavy rain and six nights when they were visiting friends and relatives.

"We had all kinds of weather, from rain to sunshine, and for days we traveled in the high mountains and drove through the big timber of Northern California and Oregon, when it was perfectly clear, but we could not see the sun on account of the big timber and high mountains. While traveling in these mountains we were never less than 3000 feet elevation and climbed as high as 14,000 feet and never made a carburetor adjustment during our entire trip.

"At one place, on Snoqualmie Pass, the snow beside the road was thirty inches deep, left over from last winter, and the water lilies were growing right at its very edge, with the blossoms touching the snow. We did encounter some very bad roads and steep grades, but had full confidence in the Auburn, so never experienced the least bit of nervousness. We crossed fourteen different ferries at costs ranging from nothing to $1 each.

"Among other interesting incidents of the trip was, one night while camping near the foot of Mt. Shasta, the mountain lions came so close to our camp that we were compelled to break camp at 11 o'clock and drive fifteen miles farther north, where we camped in a spot which we felt was free from these unwelcome visitors.

"From every viewpoint of pleasure and health our trip was a grand success and I gained twenty pounds during the trip. Although it was strictly camp life, we lived on the best of everything and we all had the most wonderful time of our lives, and I should like to fill my Auburn car and start for New York City right away."

TRAP GUN AND ROD

BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the third of a series of articles dealing with trapshooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, who is a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

The laws of nature are the thoughts of God! When Jack Frost injects his presence, takes a bite at the green leaves and blades of grass, they assume autumn tints, to wither and fall, carpeting the ground with a golden plush, leaving the limbs denuded, silent sentinels, until the ensuing year. With this transformation comes that irresistible "call of the wild." Red Gods are beckoning, urging your presence afield, astream or to the open. You are stung by the November microbe of restlessness, which creates an urgent desire for travel. Migratory birds are departing from northern zones, avoiding winter's rigors, they are headed for the sunny south, land of continuous sunshine.

Sea and yellow leaves volplane down, alighting upon the water, then sink, forming a carpet upon the bottom of the lakes and streams. Muscallonge, those yellow, green and bronzed scaled beauties, whose chameleon shadings blend with submerged moss, reeds, leaves and brush, have entered shoal water where they are now introducing the rush method of feeding as they issue from the lotus beds in pursuit of their prey. You find them during the summer months, in deep water, where the ice cold waters of the gushing geysers, form the intake of many lakes.

Lily leaves now afloat upon the surface with curled edges admitting just enough sunlight to make their shade and protection alluring to those "Scaled Wolves" of the inland waters who have developed a voracious appetite, ready to do battle for any culinary delicacy appearing near their lairs. Have you ever been hooked to a "lunge," the fighting tiger of fresh water? They are the scaled dynamos who will give a remembrance battle. When they strike, it is with a double tug.

They commence fighting at the "drop of the hat" and remain scrappy just as long as your hat remains in the ring. With my Indian guide, who was an artist in a "dugout," I was fishing the waters of the Flambeau River in Wisconsin, turtles were frequenting sand bars, depositing and covering their eggs in the sand. Indian folk lore claim turtle time excellent for catching "muskies" as they are then "on feed." A strike! A geyser of glittering water followed the body of a dark green muskie. We fought. Mid-air leaps, current rushes, submerged sulking. This twenty-eight pound wolf introduced all his modern tactics. My Indian "gaff artist," rolling the canoe, slipped him in over the gunwale.

QUESTIONS.

What are the reports from Canada on migratory birds? Will there be a goodly number of birds? Where would you suggest that I go for a few days hunt, as I am not a member of any shooting clubs? St. Louis, Mo. Archibald Blandon.

A.: Reports show the destruction of thousands of nests and eggs by an overnormal rainfall. It also is claimed that there will be the usual flight. If this is true there must have been an increase under the Canadian-United States treaty. Am at a loss to advise you where to go for open shooting. The most desirable tracts have been purchased and lease for shooting and preserves, by the different clubs. Most of the desirable shooting grounds have been "posted" and privileges to shoot are being sold to individuals. Your one best bet, would be some isolated spot in Arkansas, arranging to board with the land owner.

Q. Will sportsmen of America stand by the Migratory game law as it now stands? We have a treaty between Canada and the United States, why not extend this agreement on to Mexico, thus protecting at both ends of the line as well as the middle. If game is to be protected it ought to be everywhere and not in a few selected spots. Memphis, Tenn. Vernon Snooks.

A.: The major portion of the sportsmen, will stand by and support the Federal Migratory bird law. Those who do not, are taking a long chance on a heavy fine and imprisonment, as Federal wardens are now in a position to prosecute. There is continuous effort being made to extend the migratory treaty in Old Mexico. This will eventually be done. In their present chaotic condition it is difficult to perfect agreements which will be enforced or respected. Your suggestions will all be perfected later.

A FINE DISPLAY.

With five Templars on exhibition, including the new sporting model just shipped from the factory, roadsters and a touring job, the Boulevard Motors Corporation, distributor of the Templar in Southern California and Arizona, will have one of the largest and most attractive displays in the automobile department of the State Fair a Phoenix, which starts November 2.

Two of the cars were driven from Los Angeles last week by Albert J. Russell, head of the concern and an assistant. The trip was made in two days and without any difficulty of any sort, according to a telegram received from Russell. Before leaving he said:

"The great power developed by the exclusive Templar engine and the comparative light weight of the car, particularly adapts it to service in Arizona or a like country. Its engine has superior cooling qualities and the car being light when compared with others in its class, is exceptionally easy on tires. Its excellent construction which embodies the last word in sturdiness enables it to withstand hard work over rough and rocky roads."

The New Motor Car

Overland

TRADE MARK REG.

The Greatest Improvement In Riding Comfort Since The Introduction of Pneumatic Tires

HERE is a brand new type of car. It solves the problem which has baffled automotive engineers—how to combine riding comfort with light weight and economy.

Our new Three-Point Suspension Springs make this possible.

These are the first springs of their kind and they are made of chrome vanadium steel. They are exclusive with Overland.

Because of these springs, Overland 4 combines the riding qualities of large heavy, expensive, long wheelbase cars, together with the advantages and economy of small light cars.

With 100-inch wheelbase, Overland 4 has the luxurious riding ease of 130-inch Springbase.

The exclusive, Three-Point Suspension Springs cushion the car so that it rides well on all roads: they reduce choppy rebounds and side swaying, protect the car from road shocks and prolong its life, minimize twisting or racking of frame and body, enable the car to hold the road better.

The car and passengers ride smoothly as though floating, free from road shocks that the springs ward off.

But this new riding comfort, possible only with these Three-Point Suspension Springs, is but one of the advantages of Overland 4.

Its light weight makes possible great economy of gasoline and tires.

High quality materials insure durability. All vital parts of the front axle and steering gear and all highly stressed gears and shafts for driving the car are made of alloy steel.

The equipment list of Overland 4 is nigh grade, including Auto-Lite Starter and Lighting System—Electric Horn—Marshall Divan Upholstery Springs—Demountable Rims—Three Speed Transmission—Slanting Rain Vision Windshield—Tillotson Carburetor—U. S. L. Batteries and many other high quality conveniences.

In every respect Overland 4 is a quality car. The body is all steel, all enamel, the brightest, hardest, most lasting finish.

Your Complexion tells a story to the World

HOW fearlessly, how confidently the girl with a fresh, soft, lovely skin meets the eyes of the world! Nothing to conceal! For almost always a clear, radiant complexion is an indication of a buoyant, well poised nature, healthful living and fastidious habits.

Nothing so quickly creates an impression of your personality as your skin. By keeping it soft, clear, radiant—you can make it speak instantly, unmistakably, of fastidious freshness and charm, of dainty care.

Don't let your skin tell a story of neglect—of unhygienic or thoughtless habits. Even if through the wrong kind of treatment your complexion has lost the smoothness and freshness it should have—if it has become pale and sallow—if it is spoiled by disfiguring little blackheads—you can give it back the color and clearness that make other girls' complexions so attractive.

For your skin is constantly changing—it changes every day in spite of you. Each day old skin dies and new skin takes its place. And you will find that this new skin, if given the care its particular need demands, will respond instantly and gratifyingly.

Perhaps you long for more color. Your skin has always looked so pale and sallow beside that of other girls! This condition of your skin tells clearly that it is not doing its work properly. The tiny bloodvessels have become inactive—the pores are not working freely enough.

The new steam treatment for pale, sallow skins

Even if your skin has suffered from this condition for some time—you can correct it. By stimulating the inactive bloodvessels—thoroughly clensing the pores—you can give the new skin as it forms life and color.

One or two nights a week fill your washbowl full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the bowl and cover your head and the bowl with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds.

Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The other nights of the week, cleanse your face thoroughly, in the Woodbury way, with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with cold.

If you carry out this treatment with careful attention to each detail, you will be surprised, delighted at the change it will make in your appearance. Your skin will gradually take on the soft color, the freshness it should have.

Blackheads are a confession

Perhaps you feel at a disadvantage in meeting people because your skin is constantly marred by disfiguring blackheads. Blackheads are a confession that you are using the wrong kind of cleansing for your type of skin. Oil and foreign matter have solidified in the pores—and if neglected this condition may lead to serious irritation.

The only way in which you can guard against blackheads is to keep the pores exquisitely clean and sufficiently stimulated to do their work thoroughly and carry away any waste matter before it hardens.

Every night use this treatment and see how easily you can keep your skin free from this trouble.

Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a lump of ice. Dry carefully. To remove the blackheads already formed substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in the treatment given above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

After using this treatment regularly for a few weeks, you will be surprised to see how your skin has imprvoed—how much clearer, more attractive it has become.

Each one of the famous Woodbury treatments is worked out with reference to the special needs of different types of skin. By giving a few minutes every day to the special treatment your skin demands—you can make it tell of health and dainty care.

The booklet containing full directions for all the famous Woodbury treatments is wrapped around each cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Get a cake today—begin your special treatment tonight. Woodbury's Facial Soap is on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Would you like us to send you a trial size free?

For six cents we will send you a trial size cake (enough for a week of any Woodbury facial treatment,) together with the booklet of treatments. Or for 15 cents we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. Address the Andrew Jergens Company, 9911 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address the Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, 9911 Sherbrooke Street, Perth, Ontario.

FIRMOLA stimulates and revitalizes the relaxed tissues of the THROAT, NECK and BUST. It rejuvenates the skin of the neck, which usually becomes wrinkled, brown and leathery-looking early in life.

As soon as FIRMOLA is applied it begins to act. It revivifies and builds up the atrophied muscles and tissues, thus restoring the youthful contour. The wrinkles vanish under and back of the ears, while the skin becomes soft, white and velvety.

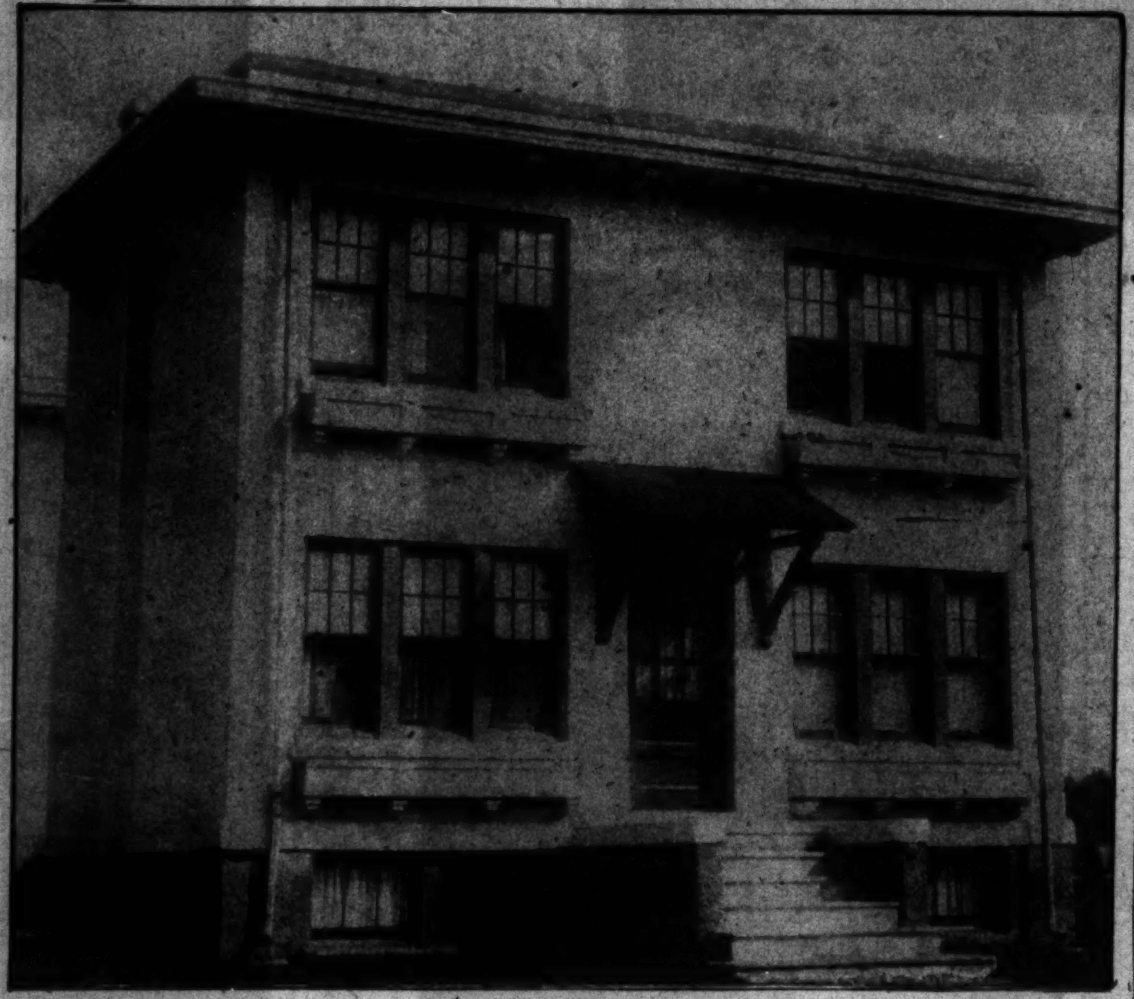
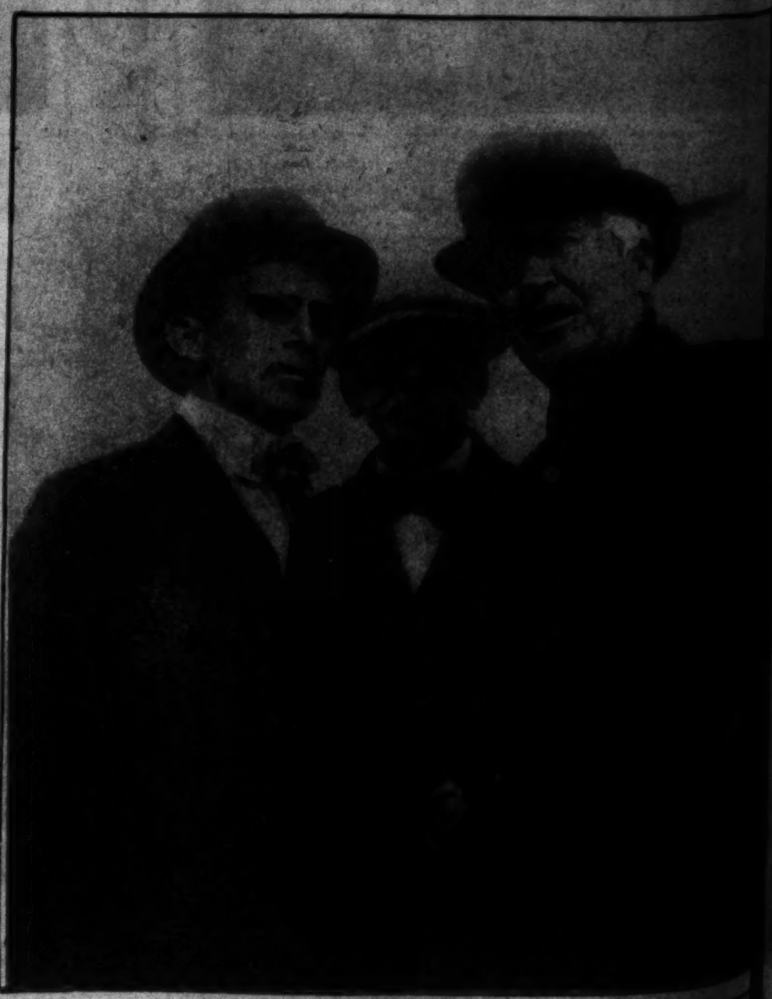
Efflorance de Marant





Rent profiteers might take warning from the building operations now going on at Union, N. J., where Robert Ingersoll, watch manufacturer, and Thomas Edison, world-famous inventor, are supervising the erection of cement houses. Speed is the watchword and it has been successfully demonstrated that houses can be completed, inside and out, within ten days. Low cost of building will bring the rent of these houses far below the high prices of today. The gentlemen in the photograph are F. C. Fowler, Mr. Ingersoll and Mr. Edison.

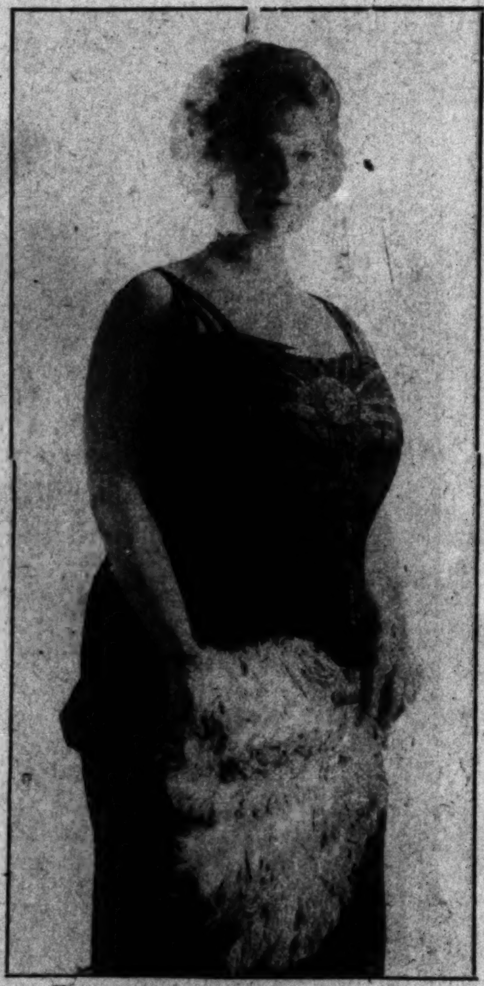
Only magic, could accomplish more than

Stylish Stout Corsets



—in slenderizing and giving youthful lines to the stout figure! Just imagine, looking and feeling from ten to twenty pounds lighter and all on account of a corset.

—If you have any doubts that such a remarkable thing can be accomplished, come see these much talked of new—

Stylish Stout (Sveltline System) Corsets

—and let our expert corsetieres demonstrate on your own figure just what wonders they will work—

—and remember, that while this corset is primarily a "style" corset—it is just as emphatically a "comfort" corset! Nearly every woman's first comment is "It's the most comfortable corset I've ever had on."

—The beauty of her figure is hid under a clumsy corset!

Stylish Stout
SVELTLINE SYSTEM

—Is it any wonder that rolls of fat are forced to the top—that hips look larger than they really are—and waists are pinched without being made a whit smaller?

—Make a careful comparison of the two pictures.

—That these two pictures could be taken on the very same day—is indeed difficult to realize! The only thing that is not shown, is the way the dress in the second picture is "pinned over" in the back.

Madame Davidson will give a special demonstration of these wonder working Stylish Stout Corsets all this week!

YOSEMITE

In inspirational silence, the lofty, barren cliffs stand
As the Gray Guardsmen of the Centuries,
Grim Sentinels, majestic, everlasting.
Even the strident voices of men,
Hurled aloft in a test of vocal strength
Cannot avail against them,
And though their challenges are re-echoed far
From the mighty walls of stone,
They are pitiful in their reproachful weakness.
The fire kindled by human hands on the mountain tops,
Gleaming in the shades of the night,
Fall from the heights in flashing light,
Scintillating down and down, only to fade away
And finally to expire in the abysmal darkness,
As into a pall never to be lifted again.
The tessellated floor of the valley,
A beautiful mosaic of Nature's craftsmanship,
Is seamed by silvery mountain streams,
Which wind in and out the granite rocks,
Long since fallen from the gigantic ledges above.
They are fed by the falls dashing from clefted peaks,
Dazzling and brilliant in watery splendor,
Whose mists, like the dews of heaven,
Float softly down the canyons
And spread over the pine trees and vegetation.
The resonant music of the waters
In roaring and crashing volume
Reflect the symphony of the ages gone.
Awesome and grand; God has walked
Here upon the face of His Earth,
And these mark His wonderful footsteps.

ORRA EUGENE MONNETTE.

At Last.

WE DO not know which side of it to regard with the greatest wonder—this visit that Cardinal Mercier made to the Episcopalian church convention in Detroit—whether to wonder most at the fact that the cardinal was invited to attend, or whether to wonder most that he did attend after he was invited.

And yet, how pathetic it is that an incident of this nature should be the cause of wonder at all.

But it isn't long ago since it would have been absolutely out of the question for any branch of the Protestant church to invite a Roman Catholic prelate to sit with it. And it isn't so long ago that the prelates would not sit with it, no matter how warm the invitation might be.

Came then the war—that dark and bloody struggle which laid the bigotries and the narrowness and the meanness of the whole world low. It seems that God had to do that to us to make us understand.

It may be, though, that we shall still have bigots among us. And, if so, we must be sorry for them. They are entitled to our deepest pity, because they are so blind, so narrow of nature, so small and mean of soul.

It will be hard, we know, for some people to get bigotry out of their hearts, but they would better make the effort if they hope to keep in tune with the temper of the world. There can be no respect for the bigot any more; there can be no patience with him any more.

To attack any man because of his belief is essentially wrong. It is a thing that every man has a right to—his belief. And, what is it to you—your neighbor's conscience? You have no more right to disturb him in it than you would have to disturb him in his house.

We have often wondered why Cardinal Mercier came to America. Perhaps it was to strip the scales from our eyes and to join our hands in brotherly love.

Holidays.

A FRIEND who does not sign his name—and that's all right, for, what's in a name, as Shakespeare said—writes to say that we have too many holidays and that an editorial should be written for this page in order that a lot of holidays be abandoned.

Now, we don't intend to write any such kind of an editorial. We are not only in favor of all the holidays we have now, but also think we should have more.

Consider for a moment the great people who preceded us here in California. Their great, strong hands it was that laid the corner-stones of the State. They reared the rafters of the roof tree that shelters us. They were empire-builders. Yet, for every day they worked they spent a day in play.

You can see what all work and no play does to a man if you will consider the plight of President Wilson. And think of the thousands of American business men who become nervous wrecks or are dead before half of their natural spans of life are spent. All work and no play makes Jack not only a dull boy, but it makes a failure of his very life.

We are to remember, dearly beloved, that we have only this one life to live on earth. And we must make the best of it. And it is not making the best of it to slave away our days, never taking the time to play.

Someone has pointed out the solemn fact that when we are dead we shall stay that way a long time. Make a note of that!

Hurrah.

YOURS truly, the unworthy and most humble conductor of this first page of this blessed Sunday magazine, numbers among his dearest friends a whole raft of hard-headed and soft-hearted business men who can make dollars almost to grow on trees and who cry like babies when you tell them of someone who has had sorrow to come knocking at the door.

And just the other day we went into one of these men's office to bother him and take up his valuable time just talking about gray squirrels and cotton-tail rabbits and birds and things, and we saw on his desk a trade letter from a firm that puts business men wise as to when they should buy and sell, and all that sort of dreary stuff.

It was a queer little pamphlet, and it said that this is to be a great winter for prosperity. It said that there is plenty of money all over the United States. But, it said a greater thing than that, too. It said that the desire of all the people is to spend the money they have, and that almost all of them want to come to California to spend it.

You can't imagine how good that little, old, crusty, hard-boiled pamphlet made us feel.

Spend it? And, why not? What is money made for but to spend? As Bob Ingersoll said: "It's only a dollar, and spend it like a lord; spend it as though it were a leaf on the tree and you were the owner of unbounded forests. I would rather be a beggar and spend my money like a king, than be a king and spend it like a beggar."

Money isn't worth anything unless one can buy happiness with it. So, let it fly. Cheat the rust and the moth. Clothe the naked and feed the hungry. Clothe and feed yourself and your wife and your children. Fatten the very dogs of the streets. Raise the preacher's salary. Put a dollar instead of a penny in the collection box at church.

If you do this you will wonder why the sun is so much brighter than it ever was before, and why the stars have such a new glisten.

Cricket.

WE HAVE been trying to run down in our books of quotations just exactly the words that someone once said about England having won her battles on the cricket fields. What the gentleman was trying to get at was that the boys who played cricket in England came to be good fighting men when they were afterward sent to war. In fine, the idea was to have us believe that the best way to bring up soldiers is to make them play cricket when they are boys.

We don't see the point. We have seen cricket played. It took all day to play one game and the batters scored hundreds and hundreds of runs each. In the middle of the day all the players stopped and drank tea. If soldiers are made out of that kind of a game, it must forever remain a mystery to us.

We wonder what England would have accomplished on battlefields if her boys had played baseball? If she could conquer half the world on a cricket training, it seems to us that she would have also conquered the other half on a baseball education.

Only a Dream.

ONE would think that all this busy talk about putting the government of the nations and all the industries of the nations into the hands of the people actually as well as in theory, is something new.

But, it is not new. It is "old stuff" and the very oldest kind of stuff at that. The same talk was going the rounds in the days of Abraham, and if you had lived 6000 years ago you would have heard it just the same as you are hearing it now.

We might as well put it aside with many another dream just as beautiful but as wholly impracticable. It simply can't be done.

Some one has said that the ideal form of government would be an oligarchy if we could only always have the right kind of a despot. An amiable despot who had all the say, who could settle everything, and under whose loving and just reign we would abolish all legislatures—why, that would be ideal.

Anyway, it would be a great relief if only the legislatures could be abolished.

A man up in Walla Walla—you never can tell the place where a prophet will rise—has written a book in which he declares that "the essence of industrial and governmental efficiency alike lies in the rule of the many by the few," and that "the best job of democracy is to teach us how to pick good rulers."

Here is a fellow who has struck the nail on the head. You can study it all over till your head aches and this is the conclusion you are bound to arrive at in the end.

We do too much talking, and not enough digging. And the way things are now is not so bad but it could be a whole lot worse.

Queer Persons.

THERE is a class of queer persons in this world who seem to be mad at somebody or something all the time. We call them queer persons, and they are certainly that, if not more.

We used to think that it was a disease with them—a lateral disease drained from bad stomachs or dried-up livers. But, we feel sure now that it is merely a habit, and therefore something that is curable. And we are glad to feel that it is curable, for it would depress us unspeakably to think that any living human being must go through life with a chronic grouch.

Now, folks, we must organize another society in addition to the ten thousand and one that are already organized, and this society is to be called the Society for the Cure of Grouches. We will call it the "S. C.G." for short. And don't think for a minute that there are too many societies now, for such is not the case. The fact is that there are not half enough.

Well, when you join the S.C.G. you must take an oath and ride a goat and swear that you will effect the cure of at least one grouch in this world before you die. If you fail to do so the penalty will be that you shall not have a band at your funeral.

You must pick out a grouch—and that's easy, because there are so many—and you must teach that person to get the vinegar out of his system. You must teach him to know that every time he sours he cheats himself out of the only happiness there is in this world, which is to make other folks happy.

It is such a little life; it runs away so fast and ends so soon. There is only just time enough in it to make someone's heart a little lighter; just time enough to pour a little balm on someone's wound

Charm.

IF YOU do not possess that wonderful thing called charm, you should lose no time in acquiring it. We are speaking now to both men and women alike. And isn't it wonderful, also, that we can all be charming if we try?

Of course, everybody can't smile like Mary Pickford, and everybody can't write like Maeterlinck, or tell negro stories like Mrs. Matthew Robertson tells them, but there is one sure way for the least of us to be charming, and that is to be charming listeners.

We were at a "doings" not long ago where the entire assemblage consisted of geniuses, except one woman. At least she made no pretensions to genius. She didn't speak a piece, nor sing a song, nor dance, nor do anything but just sit and listen. But, oh, what a wonderful art she made of that!

We are going to send secret postal cards to everyone who was at that party, and we are willing to bet that when the answers are all in, the woman who sat still and just listened will be unanimously voted the most charming person who was there.

A Great Example.

LAST summer, during a long vacation spent among the great mountains, we learned that the Indians never inflict corporal punishment on their children. An Indian child is never switched, or slapped, or spanked. And they are the best-behaved children we have ever seen anywhere.

Here is a lesson for us. We desire our children to behave well, and they would be well-behaved, only we don't give them a chance; because we are everlastingly threatening them with punishment and carrying the threats into execution.

and covered her with both their steamer rugs.

"All right now?" as he tucked the rugs about her.

"Oh, yes, it's wonderful here! But what about you? I can't bear to think of your sleeping down there."

"Don't worry about me. If it gets too thick I can sleep in the smoking-room. A lot of fellows are sleeping there tonight."

"Wait, dear," wistfully, as he started off. She tried to draw him down for a good-night kiss, but he drew back sharply. Even the dark, deserted lounge was too public for him to unbend to a caress.

"Now go to sleep! We'll have it smooth tomorrow," giving the rug a semi-affectionate pat. "The purser says we'll run out of this by morning."

The hermit thrush is declared to be the most talented and brilliant singer in the world, not even excepting the nightingale. As musicians all the thrushes are gifted but the hermit thrush is the prize singer of the tribe. The tail of this little bird is of a reddish brown, much brighter than the back and head, while the breast is quite heavily spotted with black. It winters in the Gulf States.

Italy's Rebel Poet.

conceived and executed the first of those great spectacular screen dramas that have since become a leading feature of the modern theater. Many people still remember the tremendous sensation his "Cabiria" produced when it was first thrown onto an American screen—and those who recall the picture with its exaltation of brute force and its depiction of cruelty and torture, will understand better why today the rebel who occupies Fiume is a standing danger to world peace.

For this strange poet-warrior, with a face like a 2¾ per cent. substitute for Shakespeare's death mask, a figure framed for demonstrating pink socks and silk parasols, fastidious tastes in art that demand the unintelligible rather than the beautiful; this apostle of the rude and unconventional in conduct and the classical and correct in diction, this crusader who uses the sword and the pen indiscriminately to glorify his country through himself and himself through his country, this most medieval and mystical of modernists, has for all his grandiloquent and perfervid patriotism, a spirit filled with ruthless cruelty, lacking in all sympathy for suffering and weakness and finding intense pleasure in the seamy side of war.

Gabriele D'Annunzio compels a certain sort of admiration. Yet he may prove as dnagerous to Italy as Nietsche did to Prussia.

Tongue-Twisters.

Few of us resent those tongue-tripping personages, Peter Piper picking peppers, Oliver Opdyke opening oysters, or the twister who twisteth untwisting the twine; they have filled too many awkward moments and bridged too many social chasms in our youth. Very different are the feelings of a public speaker who is caught in a lingual trap of his own setting.

It is told of a distinguished professor of history that in an address before a woman's club on "Obscure Heroes of the French Revolution," he had reached the point where one of them, nobly resolved to essay the rescue of a friend doomed to the guillotine, sought a parting interview with his sweetheart before making the almost hopeless attempt. The professor had a moving voice, and was eloquent; the assembly of women, many of them already near tears, hung breathless upon his words.

"Biddy diddy," said he pathetically; then coughed slightly and went back. "Hiddy biddy—" Something was evidently amiss. He tried again:

"Biddy hiddy diddy doo."

By this time the ladies looked puzzled, and the orator desperate. Drawing a long breath and speaking with painful deliberation, he at length conquered the elusive syllables, and said:

"Did he bid adieu?"

A speaker in the interest of foreign missions had not long ago a similar experience. He had related the conversion of two natives in a savage island, and after narrating the acts by which they signalized their abandonment of their old religion, he tried to conclude a sentence with the words, "thus totally repudiating their two tutelary deities."

It was a simple enough phrase to the understanding; it proved otherwise to the tongue. Two, tutelary, and totally together were quite too much for him.

"Thus tutelly repudiating their toe toe—" he began, confidently, when a titter in the audience checked him, and threw him into such confusion that his second effort only made matters worse.

"Thus tutelary perudiating their toe-totallary deities," he blundered; and the laughter increased. With the perspiration starting on his forehead, he dashed once more wildly at the obstacle, but failed to clear it:

"Thus teetelly terupiating their too-too-too-toot—"

"Toot! toot! toot!" cried a voice in the gallery. "Three warning whistles and now she comes!"

"She came," indeed, as the burst of hilarity, under cover of which the speaker had time to collect himself, subsided; and he was enabled intelligibly to repudiate those two tutelary deities at last.

Wee Bessie on being told that she would have to eat condensed milk on her oatmeal, exclaimed, "I wish that old condensed cow would die."—[Boston Transcript.

D'Annunzio, Knight of the Sword and Pen.

BYHARRY BOWLING.

A BEGGARLY scribe dragged from the gutters of New York to the overlordship of a disrupted empire—a potentate, once greedy for adulation, now glad for the privilege of sawing logs in a moldy Dutch garden—an obscure Welsh attorney, squeezing like putty between amiable fingers the hardest conventions of a stiff-necked and stubborn people—a silk-stockinged and pink-parasoled poet, committing acts of sabotage no democracy's peace factory—a Yankee pedagogue stepping from the college rostrum to model on a better plan the destinies of the whole human race.

Certainly the life stories of Trotzky, the Slav, Wilhelm the Prussian, Lloyd George of England, D'Annunzio of Italy and Wilson of America are bizarre enough to satisfy the hungriest craving for the sensational.

The war has played fantastic tricks with many names and hopes and ambitions. But from the kaleidoscopic drama of the last five years no figure has been projected on the screen of public life and more sublimely ridiculous or dangerously extravagant than that of Gabriele d'Annunzio, the fire-brand poet of Southern Europe.

A Man Who Lived His Poems and Confounded the Critics.

IMAGINE an airplane with engines so powerful and planes so small that once launched in headlong flight it can never come to earth again except as a crashing wreck . . . there you have a fair symbol of the relation between body and soul in Italy's patriot poet. The war drove this spirit, long struggling for realistic expression, into the storm of practical events, and the world today stands gaping in open-mouthed amazement to follow the flight of this oddly constructed and crazily balanced machine.

For it is not the flight of a poet to end in a rhymed stanza, or a bird man to end in a recreation park, that has set D'Annunzio's name on the first page of the daily newspapers. Paragraphers feel sore. It is not what they expected from his past record. Publicity often wishes it had been a little more attentive to the spot-light actors while they were still playing minor roles.

In the fateful year of 1914 D'Annunzio had passed his fiftieth birthday, and by that time a man's possibilities are supposed to be pretty well prospected and tabulated. And at that time D'Annunzio was accepted as the closest dramatist of strong emotions, the hectic inditer of passionate apostrophes to death and war, a leader in the strange uncipherable by-ways of futurist art, an inveterate provoker of patriotic teacup tempests, whose life work would eventually be tucked away on library shelves in handsome half-morocco bindings.

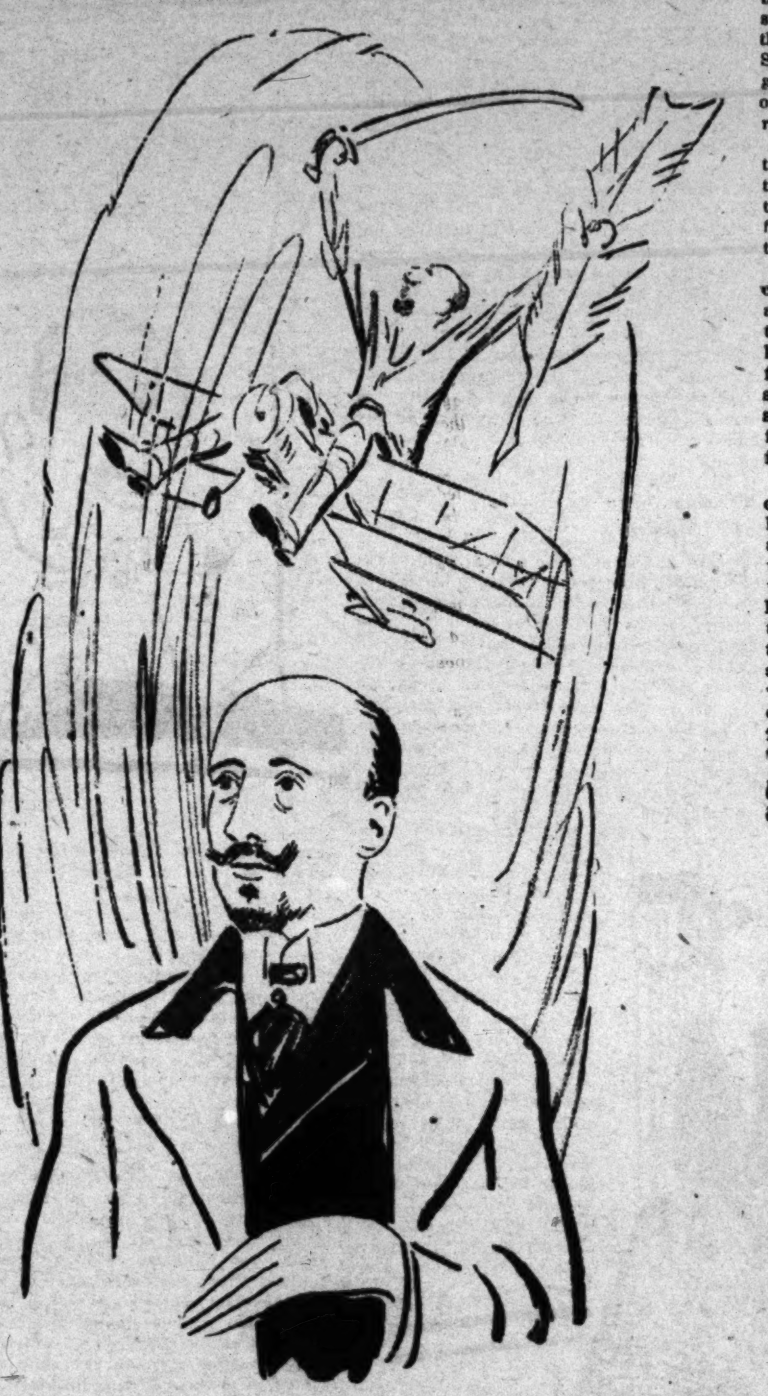
But there are two classes of poets, those who write for their living and those who live for their writing—and D'Annunzio belonged to the second class. So when at last the opportunity came to express in deeds what he had hitherto only expressed in words, he relinquished the pursuit of soul-dabbling among the worms and offal and became the heroic man of action.

As successor to Carduzzi, D'Annunzio had assumed the role of Italy's national poet. Having assumed that role, he made patriotism a cult, and thinking or writing a thing with him meant living it also. He must live patriotism as he had written and thought it. Italy to him, however, was not a father or mother, but a child. This child must be D'Annunzio's Italy, as he had 'imagined and pictured and painted it, charmed, coaxed and exercised it through the intense years of youth and early manhood.

With the breaking of the world war he saw a chance to win for this child of his the wild heritage of land and sea and sky where in visions he had so often beheld the soul of fair Italia. At whatever cost to himself, to his countrymen, to the whole world, he would fight to the death for the salvation of his dream.

This is one of the drawbacks of being a poet who lives his poems—those he loves and those he hates must live them with him, and after his own prescription. Italy was to live through D'Annunzio and earth was to bathe in the dual effulgence.

Next to his bellicose love for his native land — indeed, almost before it — he was obsessed with an intoxicating adoration for the naked horrors of war. He vociferously extolled war, not for any object to be gained thereby, but for its own sake alone. His writings reek with the essence of this worship.



Gabriele D'Annunzio, Italy's Rebel Poet.

Frederick Neitsche once said, "You say unto me that a good cause justifies any war; but I say unto you a good war justifies any cause." This has often been quoted against him as the text from which German professors preached their doctrine of militarism.

So much for the national philosopher of Prussia. Now listen to the national poet of Italy. And remember that D'Annunzio is a stronger national influence in Italy today than Neitsche ever was in Germany. In October, 1914, D'Annunzio's thus gloried in the prospect of the grim fate ahead of humanity:

"This continuous sense of the work of death kills all our habitual thoughts. Every moment the creatures are leveled to earth which refreshes itself with their hot blood before engulfing them and converting them into a rich tranquil fertilizer.

"Thus we understand that earth and war are one and the other of divine essence, being bound together forever in an inviolate pact."

War, a divine essence!—did Neitsche ever go so far as this to bolster his theory that might is right? Could a man who thought and lived this sentiment ever concur in a peace that denied the victor the spoils? If the world had studied at all this weaver of words, before he sprang into the limelight of world politics, might it not have counted confidently on just what he would do about the gentle precepts that a sober scholar would write into the new charter of human ethics.

would do about the gentle precepts that a sober scholar would write into the new charter of human ethics.

"War!" cried D'Annunzio, when Italy broke the peace in May, 1915. "A nation leaps from death, arms itself, absolves itself in the Eucharist of the sea, and bounds forward to its fate!"

D'Annunzio was Always a Stormy Petrel.

HIS "Canzone del Dardanelli," written while the diplomats of Europe were at their wits' ends to preserve the peace, was a direct attempt to set a match to the inflammable international tinder. His abuse of Austria was so violent that portions of the poem were suppressed by the Italian gvernoment. Yet in the printed text the passage still stands where he described Austria as "a vast cancer which stinks in the wind between the Ionian Sea and the Propontis."

England, too, for being lukewarm toward the aspirations of the "Italia Irredente" party was described as "the sober sharp-toothed lord of the seas, the prudish pastor of the five meals, who washes his Pilate hands, unmindful of his holy and unholy days of blod."

A strange mixture of ecclesiastism and barbarity marks his prayer for the Italian sailors when they sailed against Tripoli in the Turkish war. "The cross on the stern, San Giovanni at the bows, our Lady the Virgin at the masthead and God's curses upon our foes. Hatred, thou are the marrow of revenge, I summon thee!"

Was it not inevitable that the ideals of this man who gloried in aggression—if they ever came together—must clash with the ideals of the sober scholar "too proud to fight" except for one high object, "to make the world safe for democracy?"

Those ideals have finally come to the clash in the Adriatic seaport of Fiume—and while prudent American Senators were thumbing over the pages of the treaty to kill time, the fiery Italian took time by the forelock to kill the treaty. Indeed by his swiftness of action D'Annunzio proved himself a better politician than either his friends or his enemies had given him credit for.

In fact when in the year 1898 he was elected a member of the Italian Chamber he was the despair of his political associates and the delight of their opponents. Always a non-conformist, a despiser of conventions, a rebel at heart, he could generally be relied upon to take the exact course that a wise politician would be certain not to take under the circumstances. He would abuse the opposite party in the chamber with the same power of invective that he employed against all antagonists and so effectively as to lose votes for the cause he was espousing.

D'Annunzio Made Himself a Popular Idol.

BUT if among the grave signors in the council chamber he was a cloud by day, to the populace of Rome and Naples he was a pillar of fire by night. Possibly that was all he desired. Perhaps he really cared nothing for the respect of the toga and everything for the adulation of the smock. Or again there may have been method in his madness.

At least he established himself firmly in the imagination of the mob. And this was no small feat. For D'Annunzio was no evangel of the gutter, no angel of the proletariat, but an aristocrat of aristocrats, ready to sacrifice the common people for the ambitions of Italy as recklessly as any Jrussian Junker for the glorification of Germany. This success was a practical tribute to the uncanny powers of the poet, a success that has since stood him in better stead than any triumph could have done in the Chamber of Deputies. For the influence he wields over the impressionable masses of an excitable nation has driven a sword through the center of the peace treaty and rendered his wild escapade at Fiume a menace to the carefully laid plans of the massed statesmanship of the world.

In this connection one recalls those portentous days in May, 1915, when solid business, conservative diplomacy and pacifist socialism were striving desperately to clamp down the lid of neutrality on the struggling figure of Italia—and when the fastenings broke and the Irredente party cut away the last rivets, the cry that went up from millions of Latin throats was "Viva Italia! Viva D'Annunzio!" It was now the Italy of D'Annunzio that "absolved itself in the Eucharist of the sea and bounded forward to its fate."

It is the Italy of D'Annunzio that is holding the fortress of Fiume against all constituted authority.

Were His Sentiments More Prussian than Latin?

CERTAINLY few human figures have abounded in more apparently paradoxical contrasts. Yet one permanent characteristic has marked his every action, private and public, and galloped between the lines of every page he has written—a monstrous ego-mania.

It was this that in his callow and somewhat anaemic youth caused him to delight in a peacock variety of wearing apparel so that his pink parasol and brilliant silk socks made him the laughing stock of many foreign cities. Eighteen trunks were required to carry the proper variety of clothing for this magnificent dandy when he took a short trip to Egypt. Later on his extravagance took different forms. Through it he

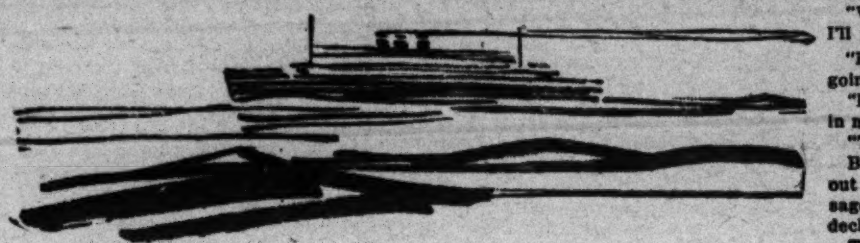
MARRIED LIFE OF HELEN AND WARREN

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.



A Stifling Lower-Deck Cabin Forces Helen to Sleep in the Public Lounge.

A STEALTHY step! Cautious, furtive sounds.

Half awake Helen stared down from the upper berth. A white-coated steward was closing the porthole.

"Oh, must you close that? We can't stand it in here without air!"

"Sorry, miss, but it's blowing up. We just shipped a sea in the next cabin."

He was still screwing it down when a swelling wave lashed the glass.

As he hurried out to attend to other portholes, Helen lay back in weak dismay. Without fresh air this lower deck room would be unendurable.

"What's the matter?" growled Warren from the under berth, when she awoke him by climbing down

"I'm going to dress and go up on deck. I can't stand it here with the porthole closed."

"Half-past six!" drawing his watch from under his pillow. "Go back to bed."

"Dear, I must get out of here! This ship odor makes me deathly sick!"

"Just your blamed imagination. That ventilator gives plenty of air."

But Helen, too sick to argue, was dressing as fast as the rolling ship would permit.

Her hasty toilette concealed by her long steamer coat and veil, she made her way out through the suffocating corridor, up there flights of swaying stairs, to the airy crispness of the upper deck.

Its chair-lined length was deserted save for a deck steward, who was bringing out the steamer rugs, and a solitary passenger, a bath-robed Englishman, having his "early cup of tea."

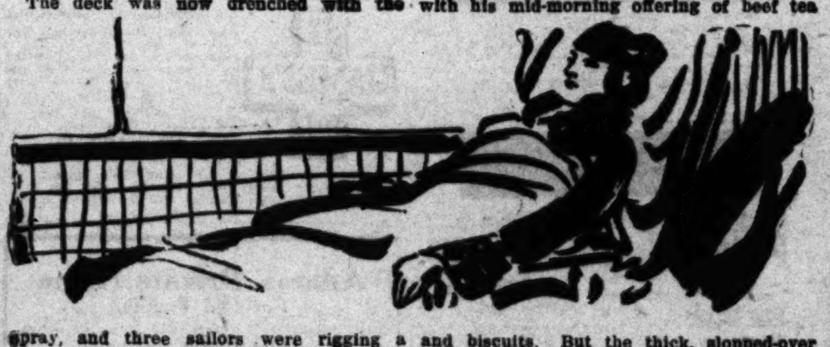
Sinking into her chair, Helen scanned the gray, roughened sea. Dark, rain-weighted clouds menaced the sky and a vindictive wind sprayed the waves.

"Getting a bit rough," observed the deck steward as he brought her rug.

"I wouldn't mind if we had an upper deck room—but we're down in "D."

That they had not taken passage until the last moment and were fortunate to have secured anything at all was now forgotten in her extreme discomfort.

A deeper shuddering pitch increased her inward disquietude. Was she going to be really seasick? And with only that airless cabin for refuge?



The deck was now drenched with the spray, and three sailors were rigging a storm canvas—an ominous sign.

For the next hour she struggled with an increasing sense of nausea.

"How're you making out?" Warren freshly tubbed and briskly alert was standing by her chair. "Want to take a few turns before breakfast?"

"Oh, no, I couldn't walk! I don't want any breakfast."

"Now don't coddle yourself. If you feel wobbly—you want to stir around and have a good breakfast."

But to Helen the very thought of food and that crowded dining-saloon was revolting. Warren urged and scolded and finally strode off alone.

When he returned he radiated the physical well-being of a hearty relished meal.

"Feel better?" with aggravating briskness. "Want the deck steward to bring you something? Bacon and eggs? They've some fine Wiltshire bacon."

"No—no," with a shudder of revulsion. "It's this sickening pitch—it's getting rougher every minute."

"Rough? You don't call this rough? What d'you expect in midocean?"

As she lay back claimed by a fresh rush of dizziness, with an intolerant, dismissing shrug he swung off for his morning walk.

The still deserted deck implied a general disposition. But there was slight consolation in others sharing her discomfort. She knew Warren's contempt for a poor sailor—for anyone who gave into seasickness. She had fought it off yesterday, but today it was overwhelming.

Twice he encircled the deck, passing her chair without a glance. The third time he paused and she ventured a faint,

"Dear, I dressed so hurriedly—and I dread going down to that room. Couldn't you bring me up some things?"

"What d'you want?" curtly.

"A handkerchief, that bottle of cologne, here in this dressing-room. And wait—just a little powder on this," taking out her pocket puff.

"Huh, not too sick to primp up! Where'll I find all this truck?"

"On the washstand—and, in my dressing case. And a safety pin, too."

"Hold on, I can't bring up the whole stateroom!" stalking off before she could add to her needs.

Helen lay back, her nausea increased by the exertion of talking. A black ship's cat rubbed by her chair, but she did not even stoop to pet it—a convincing proof of her very real distress.

"Here you are! Couldn't find those blamed hairpins."

It was the hairpins she need most, but she murmured a faint, "thank you," as he flung the things in her lap and disappeared toward the smoking-room.

The long morning dragged on. Dizzily she watched the frothing violence of the waves. If it did not calm down before night, the portholes could not be opened. To sleep in that room without air—it was unthinkable!

At 11 o'clock the deck steward passed with his mid-morning offering of beef tea and biscuits. But the thick, slopped-over cups were not inviting, and she shook her head as he paused before her chair with his tray.

At 1 o'clock Warren reappeared to urge that she brace up and go down for a "good feed." Her insistence that she could not eat only exasperated him, and he strode off without a word of sympathy.

The afternoon dragged more painfully than the morning. As it was only the third day out she knew none of the passengers, though she exchanged an occasional remark with a languid Englishwoman in the chair beside her.

It was not until the dinner gong sounded that she again saw Warren.

"How goes it? Ready for a good dinner? What's that?" sharply. "Well, you'll not feel any better till you get something to eat. If you're trying to make yourself sick—I've nothing to say."

Once more she watched him stride off, the very swing of his shoulders expressing his wrathful impatience. She wondered bitterly why her weakness always antagonized him. An utter depression contributed to her wretchedness.

The darkening deck was now almost deserted. Only a few rug-covered passengers remained in their chairs. A sailor was tightening the wind-flapped canvas, another hurried by with a coil of rope—ominous preparations for a stormy night.

How could she endure the night in that airless room? The mere thought of that noxious ship odor brought a wave of nausea.

She was lying back, her eyes half-closed, when Warren came by with his after-dinner cigar. Apparently thinking her asleep, he passed on.

To Helen, sick, depressed and achingly lonely, the next two hours seemed a black eternity. Then at last she saw him swinging down the dimly-lit deck.

"Well, you've stuck it out here all day. Ready to go to bed? It's after 10."

"Warren, won't you ask the purser if there isn't some other cabin I could sleep in just for tonight? I can't go down there!"

"If there were another room to be had—we wouldn't be in that one. Now what's the use thrashing all that over again? Come on, buck up," as he dragged off the rug and helped her to her feet. "Other people sleep down there—why can't you? It won't kill you."

Down through the airy whiteness of Deck A and B, on through the less desirable "C" to the noxious depths of "D."

As Warren switched on the lights in their cabin, she dropped weakly into the lower berth. The steamy heat and rank ship door clutched at her throat. Desperately she fought the sickening nausea that swept over her.

"Warren, I—I can't stand it down here! I'll be deathly sick!"

"Hold on!" wrathfully. "Where're you going?"

"Back on deck! I must have air—I'll stay in my chair all night!"

"The devil you will!"

But before he could prevent her, she was out in the corridor stumbling down the passage, up the lurching stairs to the upper-deck haven of her chair.

The clean reviving air whipped her face. Huddling down under the rug, she waited for Warren's wrathful appearance. He would storm—threaten, but he could not force her back to that room.

Above the roar of the sea came the nearing sound of spraying hose. Two sailors were washing the deck. She drew up her rug as the water swept under her chair. They had not seen her. What if she should be ordered down?

Was that Warren striding toward her? She braced herself for an explosion.

"Well, I've just seen the purser. Everything's full up—but he suggested the couch in the lounge. How about it? Plenty of air there."

"Oh, yes—yes!" dazed at this unexpected capitualation.

"All right, I'll fix you up. The lounge steward said bring you right in—everybody's out of there now."

Another ten minutes and Helen was settled in the red velvet depths of a couch in the now darkened lounge saloon. Warren had brought a pillow from their stateroom

The Unappeasable Curiosity of Love.

BY FRANK R. ARNOLD.

IN THE old polygamous days in Utah a certain husband took a second wife. Even though the first wife had given her consent to the second marriage, even though she was convinced that his heavenly crown would be the more glorious because of his many earthly children, yet she was not happy. She could live her religion, but she could not share her husband with another woman. Flesh and blood wouldn't stand it. Her husband moved with his new wife to another town 150 miles away.

The first wife would take no financial help from her husband. She would have nothing more to do with him. She devoted herself to bringing up her children, but every few months she would take the train to the town where her husband lived, arrive in the evening, go to the yard beside his house, hide behind a tree, and watch him through the window. She had to feast her eyes on him now and then or she would have gone crazy.

Enoch Arden was not more forlorn than she, for though she still had her children, she had lost her husband, and to a woman a husband is more than a husband. He is her oldest son, her closest friend, her first child that never should leave her, her raison d'etre, her prop. And yet after an hour of watching she would go home apparently calm and satisfied for the time being.

Love is Never Satisfied, But Always Hungry.

THE visits, however, had to be repeated about every so often, for the appetite, the curiosity, of love is unappeasable. Just as when we get one compliment we immediately hope for another or wish to hear it repeated, so one caress, one love token must be followed by another. The food of love is as various as the world. It is not only music, but everything the loved object has touched. Her father, her baby pictures and playthings, his baby curls, his little slipper, his old school books, all have halos.

The fondly foolish treasures that mothers keep till the boys and girls grow up are treasured a second time by wives and husbands of the grown-up children. The most acceptable present to a young wife is her husband's christening robe. "Ye shall be as gods" is treu only of lovers and the love offerings on their shrines are mutual personal memories and revelations which enrichen the love relationship. Christmas, birthdays and surgical operations were invented only to draw us closer in the bonds of love, to give us ever-renewed evidences that love is not dead, though it might have starved, had not new food arrived in time.

One of the most wonderful dishes ever devised for love's feasting is the eugenic diary, what Sir Francis Galton called the Life History. In his desire to convince the world that it is within our power to mold our children, the future torch bearers of civilization, he maintained that our race ideals must be grounded on a scientific basis of ascertained fact.

We in America have always shown an extraordinary indifference to our ancestors, unless they came over in the Mayflower or fought in the Revolution. All we knew about them was the meager record of the family Bible, and even that is vanishing from our homes. The homes that still have family Bibles use them as a safety deposit vault in which to hide their Liberty bonds, thinking shrewdly and naively that no thief in the night would ever consider that uninviting volume as a source of wealth. Hence Galton suggested that parents should keep detailed and varied records of their children in order to establish the respective values of faimlies from the point of eugenics. The accumulated histories of individual families would in time furnish a clear picture of the probable results on the offspring of unions between various kinds of people and would be a guide as to those persons who are most fit to carry on the race.

Details so Loved by Lovers, All Recorded.

FULL and frank these records would have to be in order to render service of value. Each would be a dossier of physical characteristics and mental traits by which men and women could prove themselves good specimens of humanity in mind, character and physique, and, when exchanged by lovers, they would prove the most precious book of souvenirs in existence. In them love would find recorded the intimate details in which love delights. Love with such pasturage would never lack for sustaining food.

A young city wife when visiting her rural mother-in-law for the first time had many happy hours in brooding over a "log cabin" quilt which contained many remnants of her husband's neckties. In them she could trace the development of his taste from flamboyant to quiet colors, could match them with his eyes and his hair and link them in memory with certain of his suits of clothes with which she was on intimate terms. She loved that quilt dearly and now and then would kiss tenderly the beloved fabrics. If a crazy quilt can call up so many happy thoughts, how much richer in reminiscent and revealing material would be a eugenic diary!

It would all depend on how much was put into that diary. The word, eugenic sounds cold, harsh and scientific to the ears of love. But the life history or eugenic diary is not purely physical. It is full of many straws that show the drift of character. Not only photographs, ill health and childish pranks are recorded, but also favorite books, games and friends.

Such a book is a Wonderful Life History.

"I STARTED a life history album for each of my children," writes one enthusiastic Galtonian, "as soon as they were born; and by the time they arrive at man's and woman's estate they will have valuable records of their own physical, mental and moral development, which should be of great service to them when they come to have children of their own, whilst the physical records may at any time be of great value to their own medical advisers."

Another writes, "The book should not be a mere dry rigmarole, but include a certain appeal to sentiment. The subject should begin to make entries himself when old enough to do so properly. From a graphological point of view the evolution of the handwriting will be of interest. The subject should be led to regard the book as a witness and to perceive in it an additional reason for avoiding every act the mention of which would be a disfigurement of the history. The presence of the idea that the book would some day be read by others should restrain the tendency of some persons to inordinate self-revelation and gush, that bane of the ordinary diary which makes us cringe on rereading records that show our youthful crudeness."

Another writer suggests, "The book might have several volumes, and that for the periods of infancy and childhood might need to be less private than the one for puberty. Sir Thomas More, in his 'Utopia,' demands that lovers shall learn to know each other as they really are, i.e., naked. That is now the most Utopian thing in More's 'Utopia.' But the lovers might communicate their life histories to each other as a preliminary."

Too Much Should Not be Told Before Marriage.

MUCH better communicate them after marriage than before. If the lovers are intelligent enough to write out life histories, they are intelligent enough to pick out eugenic mates without the help of records. We all have eugenic instincts and naturally avoid the sickly and diseased as well as the selfish the ill natured, and the unreasonable. The exchanging before marriage of eugenic diaries between lovers would take the halo off the honeymoon. The honeymoon is the period of mutual adaptation and intimate love.

Much that is sacred after marriage is profane before, and the exchange of histories is more for the safe security of early married life than for the hesitating uncertainty and indefinite longings that precede. We have even heard such prosaic honeymoon reports as "seems as though I should go crazy with Herbert pickin' his nose all the time," and "Jessie why will you leave hairs in the washbowl!"

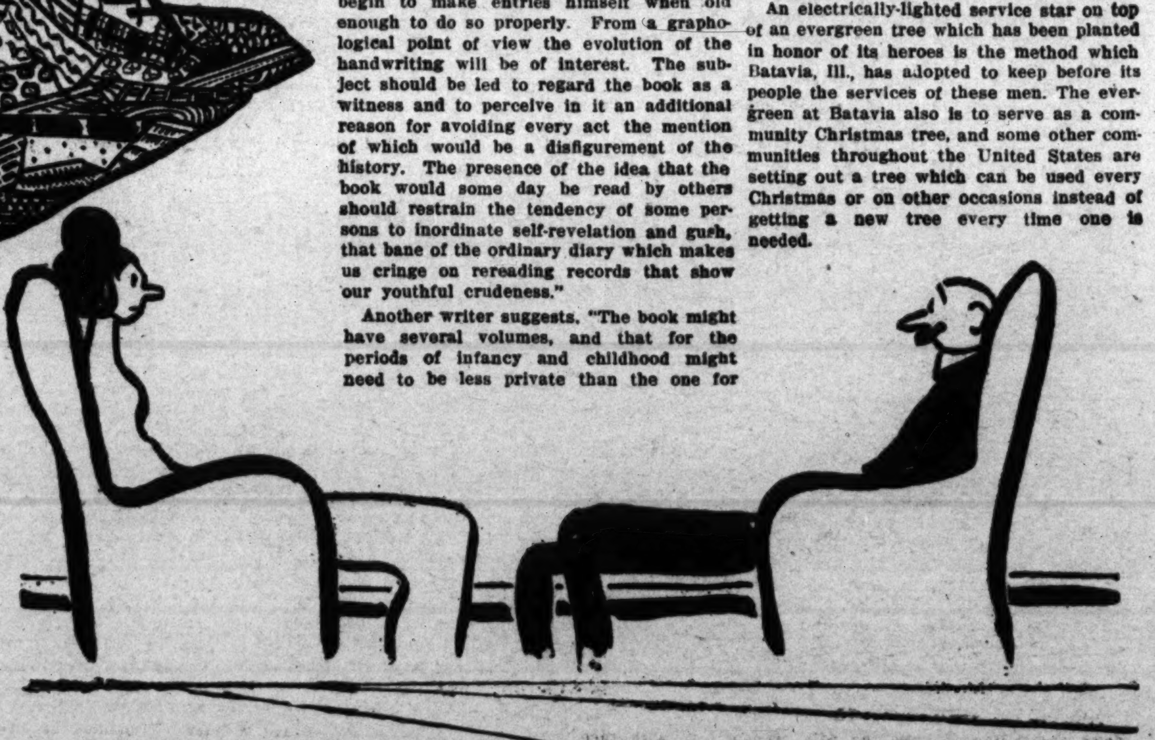
Such remarks are merely rumblings of the incipient frankness that sooner or later has to spring up between married people. Then is the moment when the eugenic history will take on a more than sentimental value. It will show how each may find in the other traits that transcend all unlovely mannerisms and perhaps explain to what these mannerisms owe their existence. Thus will be brought about that perfect understanding of each other that is rarer than love and that ensures mutual forbearance. Eugenic diaries may thus not only be the sentimental food of love. They may even furnish the very foundation stones of its permanent existence.

Gets 'Em on the Fly.

The Wilson warbler is the champion flycatcher of the United States. His method of getting most of his food is to dash out from the limb of a tree and snatch passing insects on the wing. They catch other insects which are flitting about or sitting on the foliage or blossoms of the trees. You will often find these little birds in apple trees when in bloom. Their olive green and yellow plumage harmonizes with the green leaves of the trees. The male bird has a black crown patch on the top of its head, while on the female this cap is greenish like the back. This bird is found throughout the Eastern United States but winters in Central America.

Make Service Star Perennial.

An electrically-lighted service star on top of an evergreen tree which has been planted in honor of its heroes is the method which Batavia, Ill., has adopted to keep before its people the services of these men. The evergreen at Batavia also is to serve as a community Christmas tree, and some other communities throughout the United States are setting out a tree which can be used every Christmas or on other occasions instead of getting a new tree every time one is needed.



not give much heat. The same thing holds good with the human body. If you eat clean easily digestible food, eat slowly, enjoy your food when you eat it, and sit straight so that your stomach and other vital organs can properly work, then your food will not distress you, but will finally give you the necessary strength. You should never eat when you are tired, excited, angry or not really hungry, and you should rest before and after each meal.

"The food you eat will affect the liver, kidneys, bowels and other organs, and you all know that these organs play an important part in your health. The bowels carry off the compact waste matter, the kidneys and bladder the liquid waste matter, but these organs are not the only ones which carry off waste matter. The pores of the skin carry off more poison than all the other organs. The perspiration from the body contains more poison than the urine. With a small quantity of human perspiration you may kill a dog. This shows how important it is that your skin should act properly. In Rome, at a church festival a child was chosen to represent an angel; its body was covered with a kind of gold varnish and wings fastened on its shoulders. A few minutes after the varnishing the child died, because the pores had been closed. This should prove to you the value of keeping the pores open.

"Air is absolutely necessary to life, pure air. Without food you may go many weeks, as Dr. Tanner and others have proven, but nobody can live without air, and the deeper you breathe and the fresher and purer the air, the better and healthier will you be. Air is just as much food for the body as the food you eat, and more so. You should breathe deep and exhale slowly. Make it a practice always to breathe deep—the deeper the better.

"If your stomach is able to digest, if your pores are open, the liver, kidneys and bowels in perfect working order; and you do not overwork, overeat, especially of unwholesome food, and do not drink too much, especially alcoholic beverages, coffee and tea, and you sleep well, and go to bed in good time and rise early, then you will not get sick. Of course pure and healthy thoughts and actions are essential to good health.

"To understand how a disease commences and how the equilibrium in the body is disturbed, you must know something about the normal working of your system. You can only become sick when the equilibrium of your system is disturbed, either in the kidneys, the liver, the skin, the bowels, or the lungs. We know how delicate and complicated those organs are. It does not take much to disturb this fine and delicate mechanism. A grain of sand will stop a watch or even a clock. Much more easily are the functions of our organs interfered with, because the mechanism of the human system is more delicate and complicated than that of a watch. What then must be the effect of foreign animal matter injected into the blood?

"We have many diseases—more than the majority of people have any idea of—but all those diseases have only one cause. That is disturbance of the vital, secretive and excretive organs. As long as these organs act perfectly no one can become sick. We talk of bacilli, or germs, and 'colds' as the foundation of disease. They only give occasion for the slumbering disease to break out. Long before the disease comes, there was something wrong in the vital, secretive or excretive organs—disturbances and disorder.

"One of our greatest healers said once: 'All disease comes from bad blood.' This is generally speaking correct, but bad blood in itself is already a disease, and comes from disturbances of the vital, secretive and excretive organs. Bad blood comes only when there are substances in it which do not belong there, and the cause is such as I mentioned before. These substances are formed everyday in our body—every hour and every minute. It is the object of the vital organs and the organs of secretion and excretion to get rid of these substances—this foreign or morbid matter. If the organs become overworked or diseased they are unable to carry off the morbid matter. A part of this poison stays in the system and makes trouble. This is true in regard to the lungs, kidneys, bowels and skin. If the lungs do not do their work, too much carbonic acid accumulates in the system. If the kidneys do not work, they do not carry off the urea and uric acid. If you neglect your skin, the pores will be clogged up and the toxins will stay in the system and poison the blood. If the bowels do not work properly the waste matter, or that part of your food which is not a nourishment to your body, remains too long in the bowels, and of course it is plain that under such conditions the blood and the system fill up with poison, and the body, loaded with such poison, must become diseased.

"How foolish to try to cure such a condition by injecting more poison into the blood."

A Philosophical Tramp.

ROGER PAYNE of the Fellowship Farm, Puente, Cal., sends me a booklet entitled "The Hobo Philosopher" (published by the author, paper 25 cents, cloth 50 cents.) During the past five years Mr. Payne has been traveling on foot throughout the United States, leading the simple life, working only when necessary to buy food, which costs little, as he cooks it himself. His idea is that it is not necessary for men to spend all their time working for the means of existence. He says:

"If the industries were organized primarily for the production of the necessities of life, instead of for the making of profits for the few who own and control them, sufficient food, clothing and shelter could be produced by working one or two hours a week.

"Even under the present system of industry, if a man is willing to give up most of the luxuries of life and lead a simple life upon the road, he can earn enough to pay his way by working about one day a week."

I regard the life of Mr. Payne as selfish and useless. When he dies, what will he have accomplished for the good of the race?

You may lead the simple life without being either a bachelor, a hobo, or a hermit. Although, in these days of rush and unrest I can understand how some may selfishly seek to evade their responsibilities, and "take to the woods."

Prohibi and Crime.

FOLLOWING the advent of prohibition of alcoholic beverages, we read of decreased arrests for crime.

There are, of course, decreased arrests for drunkenness, and for misdemeanors attending drunkenness, which normally form a large percentage of all arrests. On the other hand, serious crimes have not decreased, but have actually increased, as you may easily see, by looking over the papers. Unrest is more marked than it was before prohibition went into effect.

in a dry town. "In Pittsburgh the main thing of which the men complained was their being deprived of their beer.

There has been a marked increase in sex crime. This is quite natural, for alcohol and nicotine inhibit such crimes, by deadening the faculties. A few drinks stimulate sexual power, but prolonged indulgence leads to impotence.

This is not a defense of alcohol and tobacco, but a statement of the fact that so long as men overeat of phosphate foods, that overstimulate the nervous organs, alcohol and tobacco are a safeguard to society.

Thus you have a choice of two evils. It is scarcely necessary to say that neither is necessary.

Teach people to eat less stimulating food and they will lose their craving for narcotics.

State Medicine and State Religion.

HERE is a close resemblance between State medicine and State religion. Both depend on the arm of the law to make people do what they don't want to do. Both prosecute and persecute those who do not agree with them. Both seek to catch them young, and train the child mind in their particular doctrines.

We would not today accept State religion, but we have already State medicine in cities, in counties, in States and in the Federal government.

The Dog.

DID you ever read Maeterlinck's essay on the dog? In brief, it points out that man lives in a world of creatures that hate or fear or ignore him. His crops, if left to themselves, go back on their wild state and desert him. His horse can be ridden away by any stranger. His cattle care only for the feed he gives them. His cat will leave his hearth for a warmer one. The jungle animals seek to kill him. Continuing, Maeterlinck says:

"Thus, man stood alone in a hostile world until the dog leaped across the chasm of aloofness, and made man his god. Of all the world's animals, the dog alone loves man and serves him to the death, and even hunts down other four-footed animals in mans' service. The dog alone has formed a deathless alliance with man, and has made himself man's willing and worshiping slave."

Yet this is the animal selected, by preference, for cruel tortures that do not help humanity but lead to false conclusions, and the use of unnatural and harmful methods of treatment.

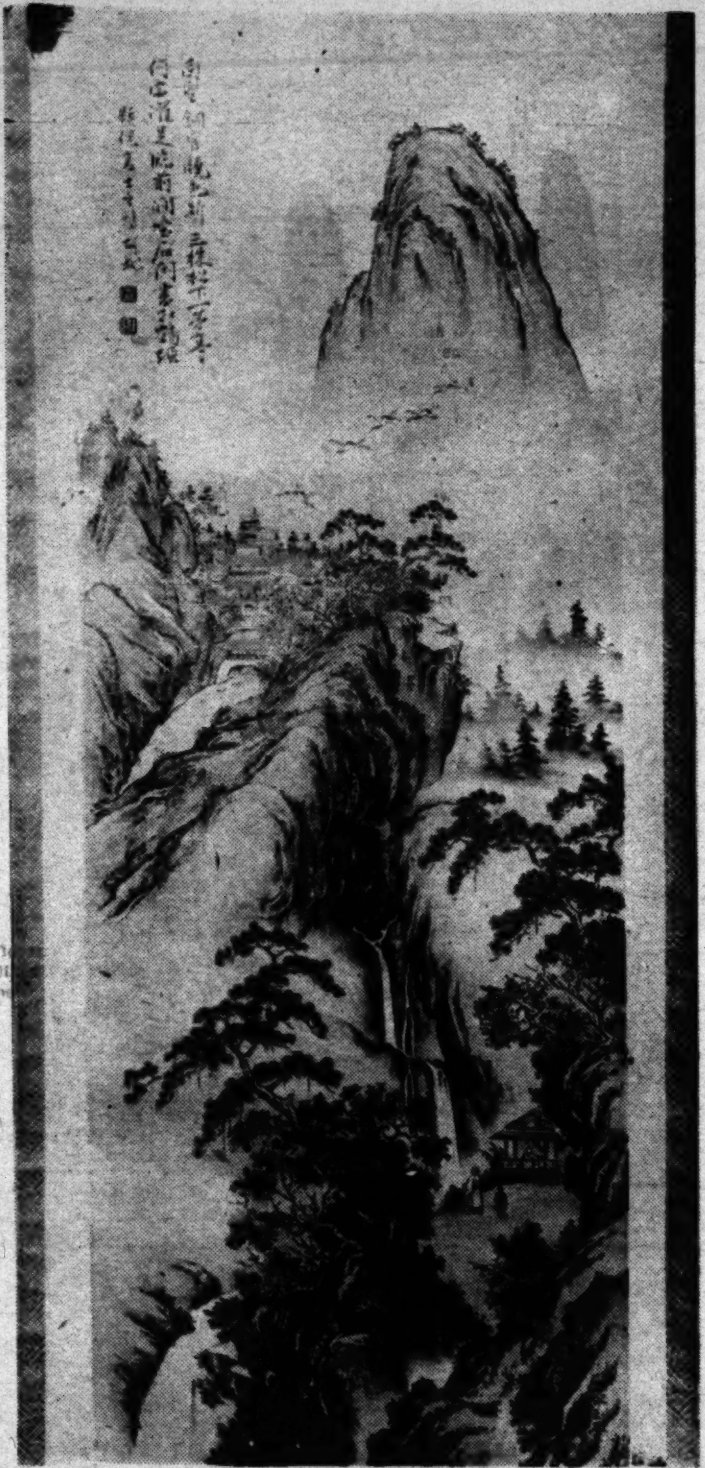
A ROMANTIC IDYLL OF OLD CHINA.

BY MOON KWAN.



HOW do we know that life after all is not an illusion? That birth is not a beginning; death not an end, that the soul of man is also the soul of all; that everything is as real as man. . . . Do you know? . . . Do you not? Then listen!

At the foot of the Lou Mountain there is a temple, one of the most remote of China. It is a home of desireless men—the men who find in life only illusion, and the world but mortal. Hence here they dwell and study the Buddha's "Law of the Golden Lotus," that they may rest their souls in Tranquil Bliss.

By the temple grow two most beautiful plants, a cinnamon and a peony. The cinnamon rivals the pine trees' height and its trunk is as big as the largest column of the temple. The peony is smaller with slim, delicate boughs. In time of blooming, the flowers of the two flourish like jewels. Yet there was never anyone affectionate enough to take notice of them; none to sing or admire their graceful beauty; none ever to grieve or weep for the fallen petals, save occasionally a visitor with a wistful glance. The passionless monks only regard them as illusion and cast them into the lot of infinite sorrow.

Now there comes a wandering poet, Wang San. He has mounted many a hill and entered many a temple in seeking a place where he may live nigh to nature. However, naught has yet accepted him or he accepted it. Hither he comes and finds the white peak of the Lou Mountain is gleaming remotely against the faint sky; the limpid stream is flowing harmoniously with the songs of the mocking-birds; and the monks are chanting rhythmically with the whispering of the old pines.

The cinnamon is standing aloft in drapery of crimson gems; and the more exotic peony with slender branches waving in the breeze and snowy blossoms glimmering in the sun like the fragments of white jade, beckons like a lover. Wang is fascinated. His exotic fancies carry him away and enchant him into the infinite region of ecstasy.

He enters the temple, salutes the Buddha and then consults with the head-priest, expressing his desire to stay. The priest grants him a room, and there he settles. Every moonlit night he sits beneath the peony and chants his books or weaves his verses. Delight and content are his companions.

Days go by, and now a warm wind is mingling with the spring breeze; the last moon of the first season is fading; and the flowers about the temple—ah the peony, the fairest of all—are falling—falling heedlessly like the raining of tears Wang has been capturing every bright moment and all the enchanted sights, and singing many songs for sheer delight. Yet his desire wishes to arrest the spring and cage the moon and change the law of nature.

The night is deep. The temple is quiet. Wang lies wakefully in his lonely bed. Many poetic lines and sorrowful thoughts pass through his mind. As he gazes out the window into the distance of faint and hazy light, suddenly, a white figure appears and dances among the shadowy trees! He jumps up from his bed and looks intently into space, but the figure has vanished. Only the silhouettes of the pines stand dimly in the starlit night.

"What is it?" Wang wonders, "Angel? Ghost? Or a mere vision?" Curiosity now moves him. He would go out and solve the mystery. He puts on his robe decidedly and goes out into the garden. He glances around but finds no trace. He pauses under the peony tree and ponders. A faint breath of strange perfume blows into his nostrils. A petal drops upon his robe and stirs his thought. He picks it up tenderly with his slender fingers and rests it upon his palm He beholds the ground, in the darkness gleam the snow whites pall-tears from the peony! He kneels down and gathers them one by one, then tears a piece of silken cloth from his garment, wraps them tenderly, digs a little tomb and buries them sadly. He mourns softly:

"So beautiful art thou,
Alas so short thy life.
Deep, oh, so deep my grief. . . .
I cover thee with a handful of scented clay,
I moisten thy grave with my lonely tears,
I sing a lament for thy soul,
I wait for thy rebirth in tomorrow's spring."

A soft murmur from the mournful leaves breaks the monotone. Now heavily, the dews are falling; slowly, the pale, waned moon climbing. Wang rises, and lo! the white figure twinkles amid the pine-shadows again! He hardly believes his eyes. Astonished he watches. Then like under the power of magic he steps lightly towards the visioned spot. But naught does he find. He embraces a pine-tree and trying to regain his senses, mutters weakly: "Strange! strange!" and in a daze he returns to the temple.

Wang enters his chamber, and there—there he beholds a beautiful damsel in a white silken gown! He falls back in dismay. His sense goes blank from a feeling of unreality, not a thought in his mind, not a word from his tongue. He stands dumbly while the maiden nods at him with a gracious smile and speaks thus: "Ah, thou, returnst at last, poet. Why waste thy affection on the faded flowers?" and her perfumelike breath thrills him into rapture.

"Who art thou?" Wang asks at last in low timid tone.

"Fear not, my gentle host," she answers and her crescent eyes gleam with affection, "Thou art lonesome, art thou not? I too, am lonely. Hence I come to share the solitude with thee."

She is real! Neither ghost nor illusion. The more he looks at her the more beautiful she becomes. Wang's fear is now banished by her beauty. "Ah, then—" he stammers and steps toward her, "then who art thou? From whither comest thou?" He timidly touches her hand, frail as a willow bough! His heart is quivering.

"I am Heng Yok," she says, "my birthplace is the Garden of Peace. I was shut up in this mountain by a priest some years ago."

"Who is the priest?" Wang inquires compassionately. "May I take the task to avenge and free thee?"

"Nay, thou needst not," she protests "He did not insult me. And I am now grateful to him. Is it not he who affords me the opportunity to be with thee?" . . . she offers her hand . . . and . . . like the stars of heavenly lovers, the cowherd and spinning-maid who meet on the Milky Way, on the seventh moon and seventh day; with a fragrant wind from a fair far sky . . they embrace. . . .

When the golden tone of the temple bell greets the rising sun, and the chirping chorus of birds announces a new day, Wang awakens. He finds his arms empty—the maiden has gone! He glances out the window, the Lou Mountain is floating in a flood of yellow ray, but no trace of the maiden can he see. He closes his eyes and tries to recall. Was it a dream? Nay, it cannot be! The name of Heng Yok is so vivid, even the faint odor of her perfume is still lingering in the air. Then where is she? Who is she? Yes, it was only a dream. How can there be such a fair maiden in this obscure environment? Just as Wang convinces himself to believe that it was a dream, he sees upon his desk a piece of paper on which is written a poem of four lines:

"Short are the hours of beautiful night.
White is the window with dawning light,
Alas! I must depart!
I shall come again, lord of my heart."

Then Heng Yok is a person and last night's romance was real! Wang wanders absently in the mysterious world of fancy. He examines the poem over and over, then again he closes his eyes and tries to recall . . . Ah, yes, yes he remembers now. She said that she was shut up in this mountain by a priest some years ago. He would go to the priest and demand him to free his love! So to the priest he goes, only to find the priests speaks to him with an ironic smile: "My poet, thy mind has been overwhelmed with the illusion of mortal sense. How can there be such a thing in this holy land? What thou hast seen last night is no doubt an illusion."

"Tell me not, holy master. Thou canst not deny this happening as illusion. Seest thou this poem?"

The priest reads the poem carefully and assumes the calm of meditation at once. "Beware! my friend, evil it must be! Beware of the enchanted fox!" he exclaims suddenly

Wang doubtfully retires to his chamber. "She is so sweet, so beautiful—evil?—Nay, it cannot be!" he unconsciously murmurs. She said she was shut up by a priest—ah then, then her dwelling must be within the Lou Mountain. He would go and explore and perchance he may find her.

Determinedly he sets out and roams slope after slope, and mounts peak after peak, but finds no trace of Heng Yok. He travels aimlessly on and on and unaware dusk is drawing near. Lost in the wilderness he knows not whither he should go. The night grows deeper and deeper. He stumbles among the wild bushes in despair, with terrifying howls of beasts echoing from afar into his ears. "Alas! Alas!" he pants desperately, catching at a branch for support and drawing a choking breath. Out of the stillness he suddenly hears a strange sound. Frightened he falls upon the ground fainting. Then a moment later, half unconscious, he hears a soft calling of a voice, then a touch of a warm hand. He wants to speak but cannot. He fails to open his eyes.

"My poor brother!" A lady stands before him and takes his hand. Helps him to his feet and proceeds on the path. He feels her step as swift and light as wind and he follows her as though without existence.

Soon they arrive in front of the temple. And Wang as if awakened from a dream, opens his eyes. The lady's dim figure in the night's deep gloom is kneeling and weeping by an empty tomb. "What does this mean?" he exclaims with astonishment.

"This is the grave of thy dead love and my sister," she wails . . . "and for thee she has ended her life!"

"Ah, what sayest thou? Thy sister? My love? . . . she died for me?" Wang echoes in perplexity. "Then—who is she? . . . Oh, I know now, Heng Yok! alas!" he cries out frantically and falls beside the lady.

"Yes, Heng Yok," the lady affirms, "she was grateful for thy deep affection and sympathized with thy poetic soul and solitude. Therefore, she came to thee and offered her love for thy love. But her destiny was doomed to have no love—" she pauses here and gives a faint sob. "By the jealousy of her fate," she continues, "after thou settst out to seek her this morning, a traveler came and was impressed with her beauty. He paid the priest a thousand in gold and took her away. And when the traveler arrived home he imprisoned her in his garden. She dreaded the solitude of the new dwelling, and dreaded to face the man who had harmed her and taken her away from officer. They told the health officer that there was not enough sickness to keep them busy and therefore he should 'start something going.' They mentioned flu, smallpox, or anything. He replied that he would do what he could. It may be this is one reason why every physician in this part of the country is receiving notices that smallpox is very prevalent, and that inasmuch as 80 per cent. of the school children are not vaccinated, it is now time to impress upon their parents that they should be vaccinated.

"I have often said that if all the independent doctors—those who want to steer clear of the medical union or closed shop crowd—would join and fight with the same independence that the union does, they would be able to dominate. They are all looking for their financial interest and say that inasmuch as the union has the dominating power in politics and in the health boards, they many times can gain favors by being in with them, when otherwise they would be boycotted.

"The American Medical Association, from first to last is run in every particular the same as the Federation of Labor, namely, closed shop, picketing, and boycotting, and their health boards are their great strongholds for iniquity."

And these are the sort of men to whom we are asked to submit our children for medical examination. Instead of being a protection, they are a menace to society.

Preserving Fruit.

HEALTH and money are wasted in preserving fruit with sugar. The sugar neutralizes the healing acids of the fruit and leads to fermentation alcohol and gas.

Much sweetness is an acquired taste. It grows on a person like alcohol, and for the same reason—because it forms alcohol in the stomach.

To can without sugar, simply fill the jars containing the fruit with clean hot water, instead of the usual syrup, and place the jars in a hot water bath.

A dehydrating plant has been established at Pomona, Cal. Wine grapes are now being dried. The water is extracted by a new process.

This is the most wholesome way of preserving fruits. The use of refined cane sugar, which is expensive and unwholesome, is avoided. Tin, crates and freight are saved.

I predict a great future for this industry.

Nuts.

NOTWITHSTANDING increased cost of production, the California Walnut Growers' Association fixed the price for the new crop at about the same as last year, the object being to encourage larger consumption. This is a policy that might well be adopted by some other producers.

Walnut growing is this year the second largest horticultural industry in the State, with 75,000 acres in bearing.

Nuts should not be regarded as a luxury. They are a most valuable food, rich in protein and oil, and lacking in starch, of which Americans eat far too much.

As the population of the world increases, we shall have to depend more on nuts. An acre of walnuts will furnish as much as 15,000 pounds of food, an acre of wheat only about 900 pounds.

Some people say they "cannot eat" nuts. That is because they eat them on top of a meal, when they have already eaten more than they should.

Nuts are a winter food, on account of the oil they contain. In summer eat more fruit and vegetables and less nuts.

When the teeth are bad, nuts should be ground in a small nut mill.

Nuts may be eaten with fruit or cereal food, or raw green stuff. Nuts and fruit make an ideal meal.

The skin of the walnut, containing tannin, is irritating to the lining of a delicate stomach. By soaking in hot water, and leaving for a few hours, you may remove most of the skin.

Pecans have soared in price and have become a luxury for the rich.

A dollar a pound for shelled walnuts is equivalent to 33 cents for a pound for beefsteak, because beefsteak is two-thirds water, while nuts are all food. Therefore, they are cheaper than they appear to be.

California Indians lived largely and attained great age on the pinon. Italian pignolias are larger, and contain more protein.

Brazil nuts are coarse in fiber, and not adapted to weak stomachs.

Almonds should be blanched, then baked in a light brown, when they may readily be ground—or eaten whole.

The cocoanut, as we get it, is tough and indigestible.

Chestnuts are "different." They are mostly starch. In north Italy the poor eat chestnuts, because they are cheaper than wheat. Here they are a luxury.

The peanut is not a nut, but a member of the legume family, containing starch, protein and fat. Ordinary peanut butter is too much roasted, liberating fat acids that irritate the stomach. Get it mildly roasted, or eat the peanuts that way. Some like peanuts raw, but they taste rather too much like soap.

Peanuts contain a small amount of zanthin, a vegetable equivalent of uric acid, but not enough to harm, if they are eaten in moderation, and always with a little raw green stuff. Peanuts are a cheap food. At 30 cents a pound peanut butter is equivalent to 10 cents a pound for beefsteak.

For health and profit plant nut trees and eat more nuts and less meat.

An Intelligent Dog.

A LONG BEACH, Cal., dog was run over and injured by a motorcycle. Later he was arrested, sent to the pound and condemned to death, unless bailed out, because he had been running after motorcyclists, and attempting to bite them.

My sympathies are with the dog. Sometimes I feel like biting them myself.

A Despicable Propaganda.

FOLLOWING is from the California Tourist and Hotel Reporter:

"The worst thing to be feared is a flu scare worked up by the medical trust and the patent medicine people, aided by a subservient press.

"It must be remembered that during the flu scare of last winter more people were killed by fright and improper treatment, than were killed by the flu.

"The direct cause of influenza is poor alimentation. In other words the alimentary canal becomes clogged with refuse thrown off by the intestines.

"For any person to lend himself to the spread of alarming flu propaganda for the purpose of instilling fear into the minds of people, is a dastardly act that should not go unpunished.

"The authorities should at once adopt measures to suppress such propaganda before it has created another panic and caused the death of thousands of more lives.

"Such camouflaged advertisements referred to should be banned by all reputable newspapers, in the interests of public health and decency.

"Sneezing is no sign of a 'cold,' nor of approaching illness, much less the 'flu.'

"If the medical trust and patent medicine people again succeed in throwing the country into a 'flu' panic, the people should refuse to wear useless and unsanitary masks.

"So-called flu is not a contagious malady. All fevers are caused from impurities in the blood and intestines, the result of fermentation of food and poor alimentation.

"Keep the bowels open, the nasal membranes and stomach clean, keep cool and you will not need to fear the flu.

"Always remember that all fevers run their course in seven days and that it is dangerous to check a fever."

Protecting the Children.

A BULLETIN of the State Board of Health says:

"Every California child has a right to demand that he be given every opportunity to be healthy. His health is of public as well as private concern."

Sure! Therefore, every California child should be protected against examinations by ignorant and careless employees of "health boards" and against "minor operations," that lay the foundation of ill health, and against the poisoning of the blood by the injection of filthy animal matter.

Cause of Disease.

FOLLOWING is contributed by Carl Schultz, M.D., N.D., D.O., of Los Angeles:

"A person is healthy who has no ache or pain, sleeps well, has a good appetite, hikes to work, enjoys the simplest food, and the simplest pleasures in life, one who does not know that he has any internal organs. A person who feels the slightest indisposition is not well. When a man has a pain in his stomach and drinks whisky to stop the pain, he acts the part of a fool. The whisky simply paralyzes the muscles of the stomach and lays the foundation of a chronic disease later on. The effect of drugs is the same. Nature in all cases gives us a sign of coming disease, but we are generally too busy to listen to these signs, or we think: 'I am all right, I am strong, I can violate the laws of nature at least once. That may hurt someone else, but surely not me.'

"The human body in some respects resembles a stove. A stove gives heat, but only as long as we put fuel in to keep the fire going. The life in our body is the fire; the food we eat is the fuel for the body. If you put in the stove fuel which contains a lot of waste matter, you will be obliged to clean out your stove often and the fire will

Indianapolis News.

A correspondent writes to the London Times:

"You will remember that during the war we were accused of murdering German babies, through the reduction of milk supply, attributable to some extent to our blockade. The current number of the Revue Internationale de la Croix Rouge shows that infant mortality in Germany decreased, especially in the big towns. In 1914, 15.1 per cent. of infants died within the first year in the whole of Germany; in 1916, 14.8 only. In the towns of over 15,000 inhabitants the figures were 14.1 and 13.3 per cent. In Switzerland in towns of over 10,000 inhabitants the fall was from 9.9 to 6.9 per cent."

The explanation is that milk, intended for a large animal like a calf, is not adapted, even when modified, to a small animal like a human infant. Also the lacking organic materials in cow's milk, pasteurized or sterilized, as supplied to infants, were found in mother's milk, even when the mothers were underfed. The whole article is written to prove the greater life chance of the mother-fed infant.

There can be no perfect substitute for mother's milk. No modifying can change the size of the globules in cow's milk. Goat's milk, being from a smaller animal, and one much less subject to disease than the cow kept in captivity, is far better for infants than cow's milk.

A mixture of almond cream, raw vegetable juice and milk sugar would be better than substitutes now on the market, most of which contain starch. Infants cannot digest starch.

Mothers should regard it as a reproach when they cannot feed their infants. They may always do so, if, during pregnancy, they avoid enervating the system by overeating of stimulating foods, and eat freely of foods rich in the organic elements, as raw green stuff, whole grains and fruits.

Medical Propaganda.

WHEN it comes to medical propaganda, the A.M.A. is even more active than was Germany during the war. Newspapers, magazines, legislatures, picture shows, women's clubs, civic organizations—all are utilized to fool the public, and increase the power of the political doctors.

Following is from an address by Lee W. Edwards, M.D., of Omaha, a physician who is "independent of the trust:"

"Do you sometimes wonder why the newspapers print so many medical articles, like the one I have reproduced? This is sent to them in plate form, so that it is already set up and most of the papers run it because it is easy to do so, and the matter is well written. Think of the flu dope which was spread broadcast last winter, and then you won't wonder that the first million dollars is used up and they must try to scare the nation into asking that five millions more be given them."

Constructive and Destructive Surgery.

SURGERY has done great things, in making over the faces of war-scarred soldiers. This is constructive surgery, and is altogether admirable. The destructive surgery criminal mania for mutilation and removal of necessary organs of the body is altogether damnable, and should be forbidden by law.

Medical Examinations.

I OFTEN receive communications from self-respecting physicians, who deplore the slough of commercialism and politics into which the noble art of healing has fallen. The writers usually ask me not to mention their names, which shows how great is the power of the Medical Trust. Here is a letter from a broad minded M.D. of Los Angeles, prominent in his profession.

Following are a few incidents that have recently come under my observation:

"A patient, whose word I can depend upon, told me that one of her neighbors, a young married woman, had the flu—or what some doctor said was the flu. She recovered, and was around the house. The doctor told her that she might be a "flu germ carrier" and persuaded her to allow him to inoculate her with what he said was 'anti-flu germ serum.' Within a few hours this woman was dead.

"A doctor from back East, who was taking a vacation here, was on the Board of Health in one of our near-by cities. He told me that he saw an M.D. hired by the Board of Health inspect the throats of eleven children, one after another. He used as a tongue depressor a lead pencil which he carried in his pocket and which he wiped off between examinations with his handkerchief. He also said that he saw a man hired by the Board of Health as a school inspector who was not a physician at all, but a newspaper reporter out of a job. This reporter examined the throats, ears, etc., of the children in the school where he was stationed.

"At a free clinic in New York City I was waiting to see a certain physician. While I was waiting I saw a lady come in to have her throat treated. The doctor in charge of the clinic told me that he was treating her for syphilitic sore throat and he called my attention to the syphilitic chancre on one of her tonsils. This physician took the tongue depressor out of this woman's throat and left it on a table while he went out for a few minutes. On his return he examined the next clinical patient, a young girl with a simple sore throat which had been diagnosed as 'diseased tonsils.' He took up the tongue depressor that he had been using on the syphilitic woman and, without even wiping it off, put it into this young girl's throat. When I exclaimed that he had not sterilized the instrument he said; 'Who is running this clinic?' and went right on with his work.

"As I have said hundreds of times, the greatest menace we have to life is our health boards who are really disease boards and scare mongers. Why will the people believe that a set of men, who are making their living from diseased persons and are hired by political men, will try to prevent disease? Sanitary engineers would have no interest in having people sick, and therefore would be better than physicians for health boards.

"Recently a doctor was in my office and he told me that he was present when three or four physicians were talking to a health

On Her.

MRS. NORMAN WHITEHOUSE, who conducted brilliantly many important missions entrusted to her during the war, condemned in New York the present bare-back fashion in evening gowns.

"The wearers of these gowns, gowns decollete to the waist line in the back," said Mrs. Whitehouse, "deserve the rebukes very frequently administered to them."

Mrs. Whitehouse smiled mischievously.

"The other evening in a fashionable New York restaurant a clergyman sat at a table next to a vivacious young lady in a very gorgeous but extremely bare-back gown. He could not help overhearing some remarks about his personal appearance made by the girl to her companion in an effort, no doubt, to be witty and entertaining. The clergyman took no notice until the waiter offered him some mayonnaise with his salad. Then he said very audibly in his blandest pulpit voice:

"'No thanks, I don't require dressing, but I think the lady at the next table does.'"

Wrong From the Start.

WHEN Frank Lawrence, editor-in-chief of Universal, got married someone suggested that the bridegroom make a little speech. The young man, being unusually reticent, showed his unwillingness to do so by blushing and stammering his apologies, and this only made his friends more persistent.

They continued urging him until he was finally obliged to make some kind of an attempt. He arose awkwardly, and as he stood beside his bride he unconsciously placed his hand lightly on her shoulder and began:

"Ladies and gentlemen, this has been thrust upon me—" He was interrupted by much laughter and applause, and he immediately sat down more confused than ever.

And Cold Shoulder.

JOHN DONLON, a guest at the Atlantic City Hotel during the recent convention of the Federation of Labor took occasion to notice a very beautiful young woman in evening gown who sauntered past his table. Said he:

"Ankle-biters annoy all these ladies who wear open work stockings and I expect that the ladies' dresses offer a splendid opportunity for backbiters."

Presto Change.

THE morning report is a fearsome document. On it appear all the changes in status of men and animals for each preceding twenty-four hours. It happened in an Ohio regiment once that two mules fell ill one night. The veterinarian gave his verdict of hopeless, and the captain of the supply company accordingly made the proper entry on the morning report: "Two mules, from duty to dead."

But under the care of the grizzled old stable sergeant the mules recovered and next morning the captain found them alive and kicking. Now, entries made on the morning report can never be erased, which made the situation embarrassing for the captain. However, he was a man of resource, and the next day's report carried the startling entry: "Two mules, from dead to duty."

The Coming Crisis.

REPRESENTATIVE HOMER HOCH was talking about governmental extravagance and the fearful taxes that are its consequences.

"The government," he ended, "seems to think that it only needs to say to the American people, 'Cough up! Cough up!' But how will we cough up when our coffers are empty?"

Decent Dresses.

APROPOS of the modern fashions Senator Watson told a story at a Rushville dinner.

"A struggling business man," he said, "came home one evening with a joyful countenance.

"'My poor dear,' he said to his wife, 'I have just been admitted to the League of Reconstruction Profiteers. Our hard times are now over. At last you can have some decent dresses.'

"A steely glitter came into the woman's eyes.

"'No you don't, Joseph,' she said, 'I'll have just the same kind of dresses all the other women are wearing.'"

An Unkempt City.

"CONSTANTINOPLE," said Bishop Brewster at a Portland missionary meeting, "is a beautiful but unkempt city."

He smiled and added:

"See Naples and die. Smell Constantinople—same result."

One Too Many.

"YOU love my daughter?" said the old man.

"Love her?" he exclaimed passionately. "Why I would die for her. For one soft glance from those sweet eyes I would hurl myself from yonder cliff and perish—a bruised mass upon the rocks 200 feet below."

The old man shook his head. "I'm something of a liar myself," he said, "and one is enough for a small family like mine."

His Idea.

GEORGE M. COHAN is intensely patriotic. All his songs are filled with American sentiment and yet at least once in his life, he might have been accused of being unpatriotic. In mitigation it might be mentioned that he was a very little chap at the time.

Indeed, it was the occasion of his first glimpse of the Statue of Liberty.

"What do you think of her?" asked Cohan senior.

her lover—thou! . . She refused to live and now she is dead . . . alas! she is dead!"

A long silence follows broken only by their mournful weeping.

"The night is getting deep and I must take leave." The lady speaks finally.

"Where is thy abode?" Wang asks.

"Come, I will show thee." She weakly wends on and Wang follows. When they come upon the cinnamon tree the lady suddenly disappears. Then he realizes that the lady is the spirit of the cinnamon and Heng Yok is the spirit of the peony.

Wang is not at all aware that they are not human. For he believes everything is as real as man, and all are from the same unity of nature. He staggers back to the temple and into his chamber. In sorrow, he drops heavily upon his bed. As he is lying there awake, suddenly, he feels a cold wind, and there appears the dim form of Heng Yok standing by his side. He beholds her in startled awe.

"Fear me not, my lord," comes her sad voice.

"Heng Yok! Thou are not dead?" exclaims Wang and jumps up to embrace her. But he feels naught.

"Be calm, my lord," comes the voice again. "I am different now. Before, I was the spirit of the peony, therefore, real; now I am the ghost, therefore, vain. I have died for thee, my lord, and for thee again I will live."

"What dost thou mean?" Wang asks.

"After I died," Heng Yok begins her story, "I went unto the flower queen and appealed for pity. The queen learned the trueness of our love and was impressed with our devotion. Knowing that thou wert lost in the wilderness in seeking me, she at once sent my sister to lead thee home. Then she granted me rebirth to be with thee."

"For me, thou hast gone through the utmost suffering of death," Wang bursts into tears. "What have I, to be worthy of thy great love?"

"Thy love hath changed my fate, lord of my heart," she declares. Although I shall not be able to demonstrate my love to thee till the return of spring, have patience, my love. If thou wilt, every morning offer, to the earth where I have lived, a cup of water from the stream, then next year I shall repay thee my gratitude.' And her form vanishes.

Next morning, Wang goes to work and replaces the earth in the tomb of the peony, and waters it at every breaking of day. On the seventh dawn, he finds a white stem sprouting out of earth. He is overcome by joy and his heart dances. The priest and monks astonished by this strange miracle think that Wang possesses the power of magic.

Hopefully, tenderly Wang watches the new peony grow day by day. As the summer falls, autumn passes and before the winter is over, the peony reaches the height of five feet. And now a warm breeze is beginning to blow; about the temple the robins are fluttering hither and thither to build their nests. And the peony bears a bud, only one. Eagerly, oh untiringly, he observes it with anxious eyes through the seemingly long drawn days. He holds holy thoughts for Heng Yok and prays for her. "O Heng Yok! Heng Yok, my love!" his heart keeps calling—and at last the time is up, the peony is in full bloom. Within the perfumed heart of the blossom he can see her lovely face, and when the twilight falls, of a sudden, Heng Yok is before his eyes . . . and so . . . oh happily they love as together they live.

After many years one day, Wang becomes ill and is about to die. The monks gather around his bed and mourn. But Wang does not seem to suffer with any pain. He smiles at them and gives his last testament: "My good friends, do not shed a tear for me. For this is not death but birth. After I leave this form, I pray you will bury my body near the peony, and after seven days, I shall appear on earth again." And thus he passes into the great beyond. The monks carry out his will. And seven days later, a red shoot of a peony grows out from his grave, and within a year it is as tall as the other and they stand with their branches interwoven. The monks tend them equally with the shrine of Buddha and call them the "Divine Plants."

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

Monkey Business.

THE average length of life is greater today, through saving the lives of infants. On the other hand, lives of men and women over 40 have been shortened, by "civilization," starvation foods, drugs and serums.

Centenarians should be the rule, instead of an exception. Everyone who dies under 100 dies prematurely.

Every few years some physician announces a wonderful rejuvenator. An Italian physician thought he had it in distilled alcohol. Ponce de Leon sought the "Fountain of Youth." Brown-Sequard's extract of goat's genital organs was to make old men young. The latest medicinal get-rich-quick scheme is the grafting of a gland from an ape. This will transfer a few millions from rich and old men to eminent surgeons. It would be for the rich only. Apes come high and the supply is limited.

These efforts are and must always be vain. You cannot escape the inevitable laws of nature. You cannot avoid the consequences of breaking those laws. You cannote indulge your appetites and retain youth. You cannot eat your cake and have it. If you think you can, you are a fool.

When men reach the age that corresponds to the menopause in women, they usually substitute for gratification of sex impulse what are called the "pleasures of the table." Passing pleasures, apples of Sodom, bringing in their train an army of ills and suffering, falsely supposed to be necessary attendants of age. Men take less exercise and eat more, storing up waste in their blood, and encumbering their vital organs with potential disease matter. Then hardening of the arteries, senility, and if their digestion is good, apoplexy.

A man of 60 should not weigh more, in proportion to height, than a man of 30.

The only way to prolong life and attain a healthy and happy old age is by temperance—true temperance, not merely the avoidance of stimulants. A little alcohol is permissable, to men after 40 leading the strenuous life. It is surplus food that does the harm.

Cornaro was an example of a healthy and happy old age. At 40 given up by his physician to die, he lived to be over 100, his faculties bright and his body vigorous to the end. He ate daily less than the average man consumes for a lunch; taking with his meal a pint of light wine, which he called the "milk of old age." He was a truly temperate man.

As men grow old they should eat largely of fresh fruits. Fruit, not wine, is the milk of old age. The acids dissolve earthy deposits. Milk, an ideal food for the young of the animal that gives it, is bad for the old, for it contains much lime, necessary to form the bones of the infant. The less flesh food eaten the better. Eat live foods. You cannot get life from dead animals.

By eating half as much, and chewing twice as long, you may get more pleasure out of a simple meal than you now do from an elaborate banquet. And there will be no bad after-effects.

There must be regular exercise, in the shape of work or play, especially to keep the spine limber. It is not necessary or desirable to go through a lot of tedious exercises from "Fig. 1" to "Fig. 77." Exercise should be interesting. And you must have a a hobby. Do something different, or do the old things sometimes in a different way.

Be as much as possible in the open air, where the air is pure. Expose your body to the air and sun. "The breath is the life." Learn to breathe fully. An investigation showed that all persons who have reached great age lived—at least in the first part of their lives—out of doors, almost continually, and they always had ventilation in their sleeping rooms.

Oiling the skin tends to keep the body supple.

Try to make others happy. That will react on yourself, and keep you young. Avoid worry and fear. They kill more than war and pestilence combined. Hate and anger shorten life. Love and kindness prolong it.

Above all, get plenty of sleep. Old persons, like babies need much sleep. Sleep is more important than food. It is the great invigorator, rejuvenator and beautifier. It must, however, be like the sleep of an infant, free from the tortured writhing of a stomach overburdened with fermenting food.

United States statistics show that a great majority of men over 60 are financially unprovided for. This is an unhappy condition. Pensioners live long. Provision should be made for those who have done their share in the battle of life. The best assurance against want is a small piece of productive land. All should aim to make this provision for their old age. Then, at least, you need not fear to starve, or become a public charge.

Whether you attain to a healthy and vigorous old age depends on yourself alone. There is no royal road, no short cut, through "elixirs of life," or genital organs of goats, or glands of apes. Be sure of that. The Fountain of Youth is not to be found in a bottle, or in the carcass of an animal.

Piles.

HEMORRHOIDS or piles is a painful affliction. It is entirely preventable.

No case of piles, or rupture, or enlarged prostate, or falling of the womb can be permanently cured, so long as there is high blood pressure on the parts. High blood pressure is high gas pressure, due to fermentation of food in the colon. That is due to wrong eating.

For temporary relief, let cold water run in and out of the rectum, placing the tip of the nozzle just inside the opening.

FOLLOWING is from "The Philosophy of Health," by J. H. Tilden, M.D.:

"When I first went into the profession doctors did not know much about appendicitis. In those days people had inflammation of the bowels. I remember very early, when a boy in the profession, having patients with inflammation of the bowels. Some of them would pass a lot of pus, and in a few days be well. Others would die. No doubt these were cases of what we now call appendicitis. Today doctors know more about diagnosis, but they do not know much more about the cause and cure.

"Anyone who will operate for a case of appendicitis, unless there is absolutely a rupture, has lost all faith in nature; he is an atheist; he does not believe in the curative power of nature. All cases of appendicitis, if not meddled with by the fingers of the doctor in digging down into the abdomen in an attempt to diagnose, will, if an abscess forms, drain into the intestine. I say every case will end in this way, unless the surgeon's fingers break the abscess into the peritoneal cavity, I say there are very few, if any, cases of appendicitis that will terminate fatally if left alone.

"In the first place, there is inflammation. Nature then begins throwing out lymph to be consolidated into breastworks. This lymph walls in the inflammation, and the line of least resistance is toward the bowel. Significant! Nature is always trying to conserve. As soon as an inflammation starts up, there are breastworks thrown up which wall off the prospective abscess; and the point of least resistance is always toward the intestinal canal. If not meddled with, the abscess will open into the intestine, and the pus will drain through the intestinal canal, and the patient will get well."

Influenza.

A LOS ANGELES correspondent writes: "I would like to tell you that when it came my turn to have the "flu" last winter I went to a doctor once, because the company where I work compelled me to. He was sensible, and gave me no medicine, except some tablets to reduce the fever, then told me to go home and stay in bed and keep warm. (He had nothing to gain by keeping the man sick.—Ed.) I took only part of his medicine then followed your advice in the Care of the Body, and it worked out all right. I was up in four or five days, had no bill for a nurse, etc. So I feel very grateful to you on that account."

Medical "authorities" predict the return of an influenza epidemic, thus inspiring foolish people with fear, which kills more than disease. Can it be that in some quarters the wish is father to the thought?

One "authority" advises physicians to lay in a large supply of drugs and serums. Yet, medical journals admit they have not found the "germ" of influenza, which would be necessary to make a serum.

Remember the results of "regular," as compared with drugless treatment, in the last epidemic.

Nor were there bad "after-effects" to the latter, but better health, after the house cleaning. Almost every day I hear of bad after-effects of suppression of symptoms by "regular" methods.

Remember, also, that if your blood is free of waste, it is impossible for you to "catch" influenza. You are immune.

Anti-vivisection.

THREE important issues were discussed by the California Anti-vivisection Society at its annual meeting, held recently in the Alexandria Hotel, Los Angeles. These issues were:

"First—Determination to suppress alleged practice of vivisection in the Adventist Sanitarium at Loma Vista and other hospitals sponsored by religious denominations whose precepts forbid slaughter of inoffensive animals.

"Second—Support for the bill of Senator Myers of Montana, now before the Senate judiciary committee, prohibiting dogs from being used for vivisectional experiments.

"Third—Plans to circulate an initiative petition the first of next year to abolish vivisection in California."

Adenoids.

A RECENT bulletin of the State Board of Health stated that 10 per cent. of American children have adenoids.

No wonder, considering the way they are fed.

For this condition an operation is, of course, urged. Not a word as to removing the cause, a catarrhal condition of the body, of which adenoids and enlarged tonsils are only one of the symptoms. Not a word about ceasing to feed a surplus of starches and sweets.

Cutting off adenoids, or cutting out tonsils, is equivalent to cutting off a pimple from the nose. Always tinkering with symptoms, instead of removing the cause.

Surely these "boards of health" should rather be called "disease boards." What do they teach about health?

Candy.

THE United States is offering for sale 1,300,000 pounds of candy. There is more to come.

If the soldiers hadn't been given so much of this unwholesome acid-forming stuff, they would be in better condition than many of them are today.

Serums, excessive cigarette smoking and much candy and other sugar compounds, have destroyed the health of far more American soldiers than were killed or maimed in war.

A sailor returning from the front said that on board ship the doctors urged all the sailors especially those with venereal diseases, to eat candy, because it lessened their appetites for tobacco and other stimulants and narcotics.

In such cases, candy is worse than tobacco or alcohol. It produces alcohol in the stomach, also gas, and sours the blood.

Candy does not deaden the craving for nicotine. It increases it, like alcohol, which it forms. It decreases the craving for alcohol, because of this

The Wasserman test for syphilis will show "positive," when there is an acid condition of the blood, and no syphilis.

What can you expect of "laymen," when the United States Army Health Service gives such rotten advice?

Milk for Babies.

IN PARTS of Germany they have been giving babies spinach soup, in place of milk.

Spinach soup, rich in organic elements, is better for babies than devitalized, sterilized milk, although, of course, it will not altogether replace milk. Infants will soon pine away on condensed milk, that we have shipped in such quantities to Europe.

Let Nature Cure Rupture

Don't make it worse by wearing an old style truss or mail order "appliance."

The Benjamin Natural Support, made complete for each individual case, embodies the only principle, which will hold securely and give Nature a chance for steady improvement. No iron frame or hip-spring to torture the body. No tight elastic belt to impair the circulation. No small hard pad to wear away the wall. Cannot slip. Always comfortable.

While giving Nature a CHANCE to cure your rupture, ASSIST her by strengthening the abdominal wall. I show you how. Call, write or phone for free booklet explaining my method. (Mailed in plain envelope.)

REMINISCENCES OF A CUB REPORTER.

BY A SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

I WAS a cub reporter once. Taken in terms of experience, it's ages ago. Taken in terms of years, it's nearly twenty. When I was a cub reporter, in Seattle, the Klondike excitement was on; the town was "wide open," and some of our most respected theatrical magnates were running honky-tonks in basements, while one gentleman who now controls a string of twenty or more vaudeville houses, and is constantly building more, was the chauffeur of a pop-corn wagon.

Being a cub reporter in Seattle was a liberal education for a kid whose knowledge of life had been gained by attendance at a freshwater college, and through a somewhat ill-assorted course of reading. Here are a few fragments of experience that the first few months brought to me, taken at random from the the shelves of memory.

There was no Alaskan cable in those days, and no wireless. We used to get Klondike news from correspondents at various ports of call, and steamer pursers brought out the material for us. Always we went down to the dock, met the Alaskan boats, talked to returning sourdoughs, and got the envelopes. Usually one real reporter and one cub went down, the experienced man to do the interviewing, and the cub to leg it back up town with the correspondence.

One particularly dark and wet night I was sent down with C. B. Yandell—then a reporter, now a rather prominent Seattleite—and it was my duty to get the envelopes. I wanted to make a record for speed, so I balanced on the edge of the dock, sprung for the steamer rail as she drew in, missed by a hair, and went into Elliot Bay. Fortunately for the extension of these memoirs, there was room to dodge between the pilings under the wharf, and I swam out on the other side, and "beat it" for dry clothes. When Yandell came in with the envelopes he wanted to know, with picturesque comment, where in the hereafter I had been, but I kept the details strictly to myself.

Getting a Rise on a Good Little Murder.

ONE night when I was "doing the dog-watch," that is, waiting around for the unexpected, after everybody else had gone home, one "Appetite Bill" Langdon shot another gentleman commonly known as Eddio Shank, in the professional environs of the latter, who dealt in cards and chips. Eddie grunted and died, whereupon Appetite Bill, calmly replacing his kid gloves on his well manicured hands, walked up the hill to police headquarters and told about it.

I got it about ten minutes before final edition time, but I got a passable story into the paper. The next morning the city editor came down. "Who wrote that story," he roared. "I did," was the meek reply, with visions of a blue slip. "Darn good story," he said. "Your pay's raised two dollars a week."

Two dollars a week doesn't sound like much money nowadays, but it was a flat increase of 20 per cent. at that.

After I had been around a while, and had begun to get an idea of the game, they let me "do police" one night a week, while the regular man took his wages down to some of the knights of the green cloth.

One night an utter stranger walked into the old Hotel Northern, down on First street, stepped into a lavatory, and blew out one side of his head, after first thoughtfully tagging the revolver "This gun belongs to Schwabachers." They picked him up in the wagon, took him to central station and stretched him on a long table in the back room, to gasp out his few remaining moments.

The police, used to such occurrences, left him. I stood there, eager and interested, and finally decided he might have a note book in his pocket, or some letters, for identification, I reached into his breast pocket, and felt for the contents, when he suddenly raised his head, gave a choking groan, spewed a torrent of blood from his mouth, and died while my hand was in his pocket. That was all right, but his blood utterly ruined the sleeves of a light gray suit, and in my haste to get away from there I fell over a cuspidor and got a scar on my knee that I carry to this day. I have seen a lot of suicides go west since then, but that first episode has a little gilt frame all to itself in my gallery of memory.

One Time When the Coroner Got Premature.

THEY had a habit up there in those days—they may have it yet—of electing an undertaker as Coroner. One night I was loafing in the Coroner's "parlors" when a call came in from a district referred to in polite society—if at all—as "below the gas tanks." The call said a girl had killed herself.

The deputy Coroner, whose name recurs to me as Arnold, and I got out a wagon and drove down there. In a big wooden building, externally plain, but internally magnificent, we found a frightened group of girls grouped around the "madam" with tears streaking their makeup, and their finery all awry, while they bewailed the fate of "Bessie." Bessie, it seemed, had had a few words with the gentleman who condescended to accept her earnings, and had taken poison. We took our long box, and were shown to Bessie's room, where she lay extended, apparently as dead as Julius Caesar. Arnold took her by the heels, and I took her under the shoulders, and we were just lifting her into the box when she opened her eyes, and remarked "Rrrrrruuuuugh!"

I dropped my end.

Arnold, however, was game. He followed the screaming girls out to the telephone, got a doctor, and Bessie lived to fix it up with her young man. In fact, she married him, sought new scenes, and when I last heard of her was moving in the very best society in a California city. I could spill the beans for her, of course, but it wouldn't get me anything, and that's one thing you learn in this business—tolerance.

These are only a few of myriad experiences that I had in the first few months of my apprenticeship. As a reporter gets older, he has just as many experiences, but they pass from his mind as a page that is turned, and he forgets them. Perhaps the keenness of those first impressions makes them last better. Anyway, I remember these things, though it is an effort to recall the details of more striking occurrences within the past few months.

One night, however, I went in without a story, but I had been told to get it; I had a perfectly good alibi, but the city editor happened also to have a hangover. In those days, you didn't have to be a non-drinker to hold your job; you only had to be sober when you were really wanted.

He roared at me. I was a little tired and very young and wholly independent and I roared back. He looked at me in amazement for a minute, and then he beat a recent joke by about twenty years.

"Keep on talkin'," he said: "Keep on talkin'. While you talk you've got a job, but when you shut up your gonna git fired."

And it was even so

Back Again Where the Presses and Editors Roar.

I QUIT the game then, and went into another of the learned professions. Get that word, another. We kid ourselves along, after we get to be editors and editorial writers, that we are members of a learned profession. Anyway, I turned elsewhere, made money, lost it and went back where I could smell ink, hear the roar of the presses, sense the trembling of the building, and also hear the roar of the editors and sense the trembling of the reporters. Some years have passed, as years have a habit of doing. I'm not a reporter now, but I still go out on interviews once in a while.

The other day, my wife and I celebrated our umptysteenth anniversary. We discussed life, which we have lived in many cities and in varying circumstances.

"Well, my dear," I said, "there's this much about it; when we married, I was a reporter, and I am still reporting. Thank God, we're holding our own."

Moments of Inspiration.

There seems to exist a tendency to ascribe inspiration to a process which is the result of a preliminary effort. Many have noticed that, after long and fruitless mental effort, the result for which they have been striving comes to them suddenly while they are thinking of something entirely different. The preliminary mental toil has borne its fruit subconsciously.

Poincare says that many of his most abstruse mathematical discoveries have come to him in just this way. Once, after laboring on a difficult problem for two weeks, the solution came to him spontaneously at night while he was trying to sleep.

Another solution came to him while he was entering a subway train, his mind being apparently quite free from all thought of mathematics. Again an important conclusion forced itself upon him with what he terms "brevity, suddenness and certitude," while he was resting on a sea beach after a period of apparently futile cogitation.

The striking part of it all is the appearance of "spontaneous illumination," which may be taken to be the sign of long subconscious deliberation. Experiences of this sort appear to be very common to mathematicians and to other men whose work entails long periods of mental concentration.

HAS THE APE A HUMAN BRAIN?

BY PROF. RICHARD L. GARNER.

HERE and there in the jungle one finds a small area of sonorous earth, irregular in shape and about two feet across. The surface is of clay apparently artificial, superimposed upon a kind of peat bed which, being very porous, acts as a resonant cavity, intensifying sounds. It is a kind of drum.

The natives say that this is made by the chimpanzees. According to the natives, they secure the clay along the bank of a stream, carry it by hand and deposit it over the place selected and let it dry. From the Mkomi forest, I brought home with me a part of one of these drums; it shows the fingerprints of the apes, impressed in it while the clay was yet soft. But this is not a proof that the chimpanzees intentionally made it.

They Hold a Fiesta and Dance and Sing.

THE natives say that when the drum is quite dry, the chimpanzees gather around it and hold one of their most remarkable social gatherings. The natives call it the kanjo, which implies the idea of carnival. Many families participate. One or two chimpanzees beat violently on the drum while others jump up and down in a wild, grotesque manner. Long, rolling sounds fill the forest as if the chimpanzees were trying to sing. When those beating the drum tire, others take their place and the festivity continues for hours. The resemblance of this to the festivities of the natives is astounding and goes again to show how closely chimpanzees approach the lower horizons of humanity.

Like man, the chimpanzee is averse to solitude. He has the community idea, living in family groups instead of herds. He is also fond of the society of man and is easily domesticated. This is in contrast to the gorilla, a lower genus of the ape, who will flee from his habitation with man at the first opportunity. If, when introduced among men, the chimpanzee is allowed to go at liberty, he is well disposed and fond of man. If he is confined he becomes vicious and ill-tempered. Confine a man and he becomes exactly the same.

Cannot Compare Mentality of Ape With Man.

IT IS difficult to compare his mental status to that of man because there is no common basis upon which the two rest. Their modes of life are so unlike as to afford no common unit of measure. Chimpanzees and men have but few problems in common to solve: They are not called upon to exercise the faculties of the mind as often as is man. Therefore, their minds are not as active as man's.

But within his own sphere of life, the chimpanzee occupies a high plane. While the scope of the human mind is vastly wider than that of the chimpanzee, it does not follow that it can act with more precision in all things. There are perhaps instances in which the mind of the chimpanzee excels that of many by reason of its adaption to certain conditions.

To compare them, a fair specimen of an adult chimpanzee is in about the same mental horizon as a child of one year old. But if the operation were reversed, if man were placed under the natural conditions of the ape, the comparison would be much less in human favor.

On problems that concern his own comfort or safety the chimpanzee exercises the faculty of reason with a fair degree of precision. He is quick to interpret motives, to discern intents and he is a rare judge of character. He is inquisitive; but not so imitative as a monkey. He is quite observant of the relations of cause and effect. In his actions he is controlled by more definite motives than any other animal. He quickly learns anything that lies within the range of his own mental cosmos.

Dietary Similar to That of Man.

HIS dietary is similar to that of man. The opinion has long prevailed that the chimpanzee subsists upon a vegetable diet. This is not the case. Like man, they eat vegetables, fruits and meat. Briefly, the difference between their habits and those of man is that they eat their food raw while man has learned how to cook. But they soon learn to like cooked food. The chimpanzees I had were very fond of cooked meats and dried fish.

The brain of the chimpanzee resembles the brain of man even more closely than his skeleton resembles man's. To be sure the texture is slightly coarser but the brain has the same lobes, convolutions, sulci and centers as the human brain. In man and the chimpanzee the same nerves are present and connect the same organs of sensation and motion.

Regarding man purely in the light of an animal, it is evident that he is physically very closely allied to the chimpanzee. In the vital organs of the two there is a great unity of structure and equal unity of function in all essential details. The difference of structure is only to the extent of making the organs conform to the general plan of the animal, and the difference of function is only one of degree

Since the same characters vary quite as much among men without changing their identity as such, it cannot be sufficient ground to widen the gap between man and ape. Indeed, as the comparison is extended into more minute and scrutinizing details, the physical likeness of the two grows stronger. To the casual observer, the general resemblance of man to the chimpanzees is apparent. To the student, the analogy becomes evident.

With man and the chimpanzee the physical structures are one so far as they pertain to the animal policy. Yet they may not be of a common stock.

Man is Not Descended From the Ape.

THE public mind does not seem to have grasped the correct idea of evolution. The common idea that man has descended from or is related by consanguinity to a monkey is silly and absurd. Science never taught such folly. Darwin never advanced any theory from which such a conclusion could be justly deduced. It is only the bigots and sophists who have so distorted the theory because they could not deny it.

No one will deny the physical resemblance between man and the ape. I spent a score of years in the jungle to show the mental resemblance between them as well. Things may be equivalent and yet not identical. The chimpanzee is called "the white man of the jungle" because he is on the same relative plane to the other apes that the white man is on to other human beings. The natives gave him this sobriquet.

Of course, I do not think the simian language is capable of shadowing sentences into narrative or giving detail in a complaint, for I have never found anything as yet among them which could justify one in attributing to them so high a type of speech.

I do think, however, that their present form of speech is developed far above a mere series of grunts and groans and that some species among them have a much more copious and expressive speech than do others and some have higher phonic types than others.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

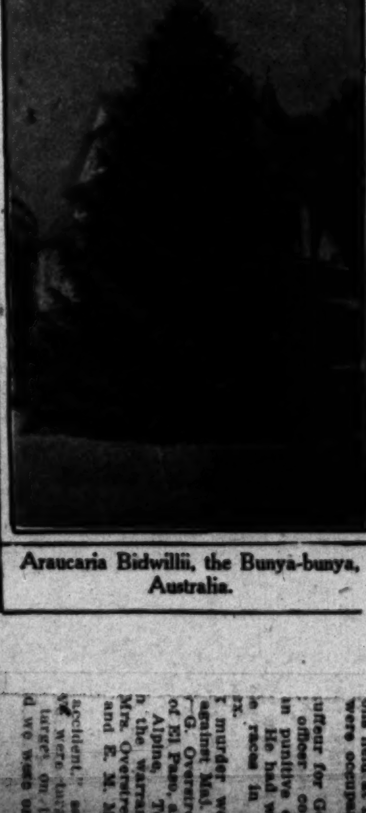
Araucaria Imbricata, or Chilean Monkey Puzzle.

THE greatest fundamental need of any city is availability. The keynote to commercial success is transportation, which can come only through a proper street system. "All roads lead to Rome" made Rome the world's center. All roads should lead to Los Angeles and also from Los Angeles as well. Make all parts of our city available alike to business demands and to those on sight-seeing bent. It must not be thought that because all roads lead to a city that all lead away from it, for there are many cities so lacking in a good traffic system that one unfamiliar with the streets could scarcely find his way out. The streets of a city must connect with the great arteries outside. This gospel has been preached by this department for fifteen years and must be considered as a fundamental on which to build the City Beautiful. Yet one more factor is needed before we begin to beautify and that is a satisfactory sewer and storm drain system or systems. Transportation and health must be taken care of before we tackle the more spectacular phases like civic centers, parks, street trees, etc., or they must at least be planned for at the same time. Any plan that does not embrace the whole city and provide for its every need, in so far as a plan can, is far from a perfect or even satisfactory plan. We reiterate, for the 'steenth time, that some cutting through and widening of streets must be provided for in any and all civic center plans.

The Congested City.

The Kansas City Star makes the statement that nothing really is of greater moment than the question of proper transportation and that the comforts available for people help to determine the business possibilities of a city. We quote:

"There must be adequate trafficways to handle business. It must be possible for people to get quickly and easily from one part of the city to another and it must be possible to deliver goods readily. Would a large automobile plant be able to turn out its enormous production of cars daily if it were cluttered up, if its passageways were relatively as narrow and congested as those of Kansas City?"



Araucaria Bidwillii, the Bunya-bunya, Australia.

Bougainvillea Not Blooming.

J. W. B. has a bougainvillea five years old of light-green leaf that has grown vigorously but has not bloomed and he wishes to know what to do with it.

As to identify. The common species is B. glabra, and glabra means smooth leaf, which it has, of a bright green color. B. lateritia does not have smooth leaves or leaves of light color. The leaves are larger and thicker than in the more common species and young foliage is often tinged with red. Leaves are covered with a fine hair. The large hooked spines are also easily distinguished from the other and if the plant be vigorous the new canes are larger and longer, a very rampant growth. Would advise pruning back heavily in March, shortening in all big leaders and cutting back the laterals on these leaders to two eyes each. (Two eyes are enough for anyone.) All are natives of Brazil; there is no B. Brasiliensis.

Amorphophallus Titanum.

This perhaps is the most remarkable plant known. It is one of the giant dragon flowers or black callas, by far the largest known and not surpassed in size of flower even by the noted rafflesia, which is a parasite. Our subject was first discovered in Sumatra in 1880 by E. Beccari, an Italian botanist, and named by him. One bulb was obtained by the British government and it flowered in 1890 at the Botanic Gardens at Kew and then rotted. The bulb was twenty inches in diameter and was a heavy load for two strong men to carry out of the Sumatran jungle. The swell of the spathe or hood of this calla was three feet in diameter and the spadix or clublike column in the center was six feet high. The color of the flower is a brownish purple-red, about like that of the small species grown here, and the odor attracted nothing but flies and buzzards. This plant had a single leaf, the stalk of which was ten and one-half feet high, a foot in diameter at the base, the leaf spread in several divisions of the stem to a width of nine feet and measured forty-five feet around the edge of this the world's greatest leaf. This sounds like a big story, but it is true in every particular.

Beware Nature Fakers.

Under this head the director of the State Board of Agriculture warns people against those who seek to gull the people on Phenomenal Phodder Plants, Miracle Muskmelons and the like. He should also have included the New Guinea butter bean, for the country press is still printing stories about this fake, which is nothing but a gourd, weighing up to fifteen pounds. No true bean ever weighed fifteen ounces. Plant and seed fakers are many, but the New Guinea butter bean is the biggest fraud of all. As a gourd it is a good one.

Plant Detention Depot.

The Federal government has appropriated $50,000 for the purchase of ground and the erection of buildings for a detention depot where they may quarantine and hold plants from districts and countries infested with pests which bar entrance to all plant life from these places. It is hoped through this medium that we may get ornamental plants from Florida. These have found their way here very sparingly through the mails, for in spite of the greatest vigilance, Florida plants still occasionally reach Los Angeles with Uncle Sam's assistance. This is wrong. Means should be provided whereby we may safely receive them.

Avocado Culture.

"Referring to your article in yesterday's Times on avocados, wherein you state that your correspondent 'points out the royal road to success,' while that may be true, still experience teaches me that budded trees fit for transplanting will not be secured by anyone not of 'royal' degree within any such time as that mentioned. Just think of it—a budded tree ready for transplanting ten or eleven months from the time the seed is planted. Not in California.

"Let us follow up the steps and see where we land. Plant the seed April 1. He says 'up in sixty days,' which brings us to June 1. Then seventy-five days more and bud, or on August 15, and I will say here that a plant 'twelve to fourteen inches high' is mighty small stock for budding. He will have to leave his bud wrapped up for at least a month, and will consequently unwrap it September 15. It will take it anywhere from two weeks to a month to start, as the closest figure gives October 1 to start to grow that budded tree. You know how much growing it will do at that season, in fact, if any number of seedlings were cut back then I don't believe many of the buds would start at all until the following spring. Any that did start would get just large enough to get caught by the first light frost that came along; so, taking it by and large, I am not surprised that your correspondent 'has no trees for sale.'

"It seems to me that in your remarks before quoting your correspondent you have fully covered the entire matter in one sentence, i.e.: 'The seedlings should be field grown and budded in the field, as is done with oranges and all other fruit trees, and when of a like size.' There it is, and if a whole book were written it could say no more. As you know, an orange tree is about two years from the seed when budded, and three years from the seed to the transplanting of the budded tree, and if small Mexican avocado seeds are planted many of them will have to grow nearly two years before they are of a fit size for budding.

"If the seeds are planted in the open ground, and never see a pot, there need be no fear of hurting the tree by cutting the tap root. Some years ago I raised a number of seedlings of the Guatemalan race, planting the seeds directly in the nursery rows, and a number of the resulting trees were balled and moved three or four times, the roots being cut each time. A number of them planted in 1913 are now higher than a two-story-and-a-half house and correspondingly wide.

"As stated by you, if the seed and resulting tree is kept in the open ground at all times, and allowed to get big enough before budding, stock will be produced that will stand transplanting and produce results if properly taken care of. The writer has several hundred seedlings growing now, the seed having been planted eighteen inches apart in the nursery rows last March. As practically 100 per cent. of the seed started, it would seem unnecessary to start them in a seed bed."—E. C. D.

Pruning Acacias.

Now that rains weigh down the lower branches of street trees the latter will have to be cut away. But do not give acacias a general pruning at this time of the year. The proper time is just after they have flowered in the spring. It is then the sap flow is strongest and will not quickly heal the wounds and flow into new channels to make vigorous growth where it is most desired. Pruned at this time of the year, the spring flowers will be cut away. It matters little how heavily acacias are pruned, though but poles remain.

Giant Bamboos.

There are at least a dozen species of bamboos growing in California and Florida that attain a height of fifty or more feet in their native land. Two of the most common here are Bambusa vulgaris, native to India, eighty feet; and Dendrocalamus latiflorus, India and Cochin China, seventy feet. A fine specimen of each of these may be seen at the northwest corner of Ninth and Olive streets, Los Angeles. Others are B. arundinaria sixty feet, India; B. macroculmis, China and Japan, seventy-five feet; B. Thousarsii, India, sixty feet; B. Tulda, Bengal, seventy feet; Phyllostachys mitis, China and Japan, sixty feet; P. Quilii, China and Japan, seventy feet; Dendrocalamus Hamiltoni, India, eighty feet; D. strictus, India, fifty feet, and D. membranaceus, India, seventy feet.

Acacias for Hedges.

In California we grow three or four acacias that make good hedges, but we do not grow enough species or use those we have as much as their merits deserve. The best species for hedges are A. acinacea, armata, cultriformis, dodonaefolia, Howittii, pronunens, suavelous and vestita. It is rarely that one sees an acacia hedge in California, but in Australia they are common everywhere. Several of these dwarf species are thorny, notably A. armata.

Moreton Bay Pine, A. Cunninghamii Australia.

The Araucarias.

The araucarias are closely related to the pines, though no species resembles the pines in foliage, but the cones are much like pine cones. The best known and most planted is the Star Pine from Norfolk Island, A. excelsa; the next in popularity is the Bunya-bunya, from Australia, A. Bidwillii. Another favorite yet quite rare is the Chilean Pine or Monkey Puzzle, A. imbricata. Others known here in large size are the Brazilian Pine, A. Brasiliensis; A. Cunninghamii, the Moreton Bay Pine from Queensland, and A. Cookii, from New Caledonia. All do well here but the Brazilian species, which needs a humid air to hold its foliage. The Chilean Pine also prefers a damp atmosphere.

Sterculia Gregori.

Since a note was printed in this department about this grand tree, several have asked where young plants could be obtained, but the writer knows not. Two large trees are known, one at Santa Barbara, and one at Alhambra, the latter being the handsomest sterculia of any species in the State of California. Any responsible dealer having these trees for sale will do himself a real favor by sending such information to the Garden Beautiful Department.

Garden Pools.

Many new gardens will be planned and planted during the rainy months and every one should have some kind of a water or bog garden. These should not be planted until late spring, but provision must be made for them in the plan. For excavation must be made and the soil removed to some spot where it is needed or where it can be made use of. Do have a water garden, if no more than a half-barrel sunk in the ground. The first cost is the total cost. The upkeep is not worth considering.

The Livestock Show Poultry Department.

A SUCCESSFUL EVENT. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

CONSIDERED merely as a fixture of a fall fair or as a division of the Los Angeles Live Stock Show, the late fall poultry fixture must be considered the best that has been featured at this season of the year for some time. Not only was it good in numerical strength of entries and their high quality, but it was also valuable for variety in breeds, and for a splendid showing of geese, ducks and turkeys, in these three latter excelling any previous fall fixtures for a number of years. The attendance was good, and the volume of business transacted by exhibitors in hatching, day-old chicks and breeding stock was much above the average.

The method of judging was by comparison, the honors being awarded by Judge E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo. For the most part it was just, and while ruling according to the Standard rather closely, it was on the whole satisfactory. Indeed, to the mind of the experienced exhibitor, it was a matter of no little gratification to see every disqualification enforced and every defeat allowed for. This resulted in a number of disqualified birds in nearly all breeds and varieties, which aggregated much larger in volume than usual; it was, however, salutary in its effects. It again emphasized the folly of sending disqualified birds to the showroom, and also the hazard there is in exhibiting specimens subject to major discounts. It costs money to enter birds, and unless they possess quality that will at least give them a "look in" for the money, they had better be kept at home, or made to do service on the family dining table.

Obviously at this season of the year the birds are not well furnished; many still show evidence of the moult in a dearth of hackle feathers, undeveloped tails, and a general untidy appearance. Indeed we saw some specimens that appeared in low cut evening dress, a thing that is not only immodest but wholly unbecoming to a well brought up chicken. To be sure all suffered more or less from this defect, so that on the whole all stood an even chance for honors, nevertheless, we are not "taken" with fowl whose feathers are undeveloped and scraggly in appearance. Unless sufficiently grown to present at least a symmetrical appearance, such birds had better be left in the yards to develop a suit of clothes before being allowed to sport along the poultry way.

The Asiatics.

For the first time in a number of years there were shown a few Black Cochins which were fairly good in type, but in bad feather. And a Cochin that is not well feathered out, certainly does not make a very strong appeal to the fancy Black Langshans and Light Brahmas, though a larger entry than the Cochins, were nevertheless somewhat limited in numbers. The winning specimens in both breeds showed elements of strength, being true to type and color markings. In White Langshans there was one lovely hen to individualize the breed and variety. Here and there are bits of evidence going to show an increased interest in both breeds, which at one time were prime favorites in California.

Rocks, Dots and Reds.

Of the American breeds there was a goodly number covering the several breeds and varieties. In the list, the Rhode Island Reds led in numerical importance, closely followed by the Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks. The winning Plymouth Rocks were the property of a singel exhibitor, who takes a pride in his birds, and at heart is a real fancier. The blue ribbon birds showed good yellow beaks and legs, clear bold eyes, good type and fine barring of feathers in all sections. Here and there we noticed birds of this breed with darkly marked beaks, smutty barring and dark colored legs—all glaring defects according to the Standard. In Wyandottes there were a few good Silvers, some splendid Whites and a number of good Partridge. The Rhode Island Reds were a strong class, showing both Rose and Single Comb. We should infer from the placing of the blue ribbons that the judge was partial to good red color, for certain it was that in color of plumage the winners were there with the goods. This breed has a strong following in Southern California and under careful handling is certainly improving in quality, breeding truer to type and showing better color in plumage with each year. The Whites were a nice lot

The Mediterraneans.

There were strong exhibits in White Leghorns, Andalusians, Anconas, Black Minorcas and Brown. The winning Single Comb Whites were a splendid lot, the winners being among the best. Especially good were the first hen and pullet, and cock and cockerel. The Andalusians were one of the largest exhibits of the variety ever staged in Southern California. When bred to Standard requirements this is one of the handsomest of our domestic fowl. It more than maintains its own among our breeders, and every year finds an increase of exhibitors. Anconas are still to the fore, a fact due in large measure to the enterprising specialty club that is constantly pressing its claims to wider recognition. The quality was good, many of the birds being well furnished, hence making a pleasing appearance. Black Minorcas were of the usual California type, established by a certain strain indigenous to the soil and climate of California, and the skill of a breeder who certainly knows the Minorca in the breeding pen as well as in the showroom. The Brown Leghorns were not up to the quality shown in some of our earlier shows.

Orpingtons and Cornish.

The exhibits in the English class were limited to Orpingtons and Cornish, with a rather small showing of Speckled Sussex. The first mentioned were practically from two exhibitors, and on the whole were a good lot. In the Cornish the winning cock and hen were exceptionally fine specimens, showing good color, close feathering, fine head and leg points, and correct type. This breed has evidently come to stay. The Speckled Sussex were an uneven selection, while the White Cornish were limited in numbers, but of good quality.

The Novelties.

Among the Standard breeds there was a rather interesting exhibit of Light Brahma capons, and a new breed still in the making, being a cross between the Dark Cornish and Rhode Island Reds. These birds resemble the Games in type. The plumage is a combination of green-black and red, which gives to the males a pleasing appearance. This first cross shows vigor and a robust development, making it desirable for caponizing.

The Midgets.

The array of bantams, occupying all the coops of a single row, must have proven a pleasure to the fanciers of the little fellows. The Black Breasted were a fine display, the winning males and females possessing station, close feathering and color markings typical of the breed when at its best. Likewise the Silver Seabrights were a joy to the eye, being good in type, fine coloring, and strong in head and leg points. The Goldens were also correspondingly good. The Cochin Bantams were represented by good entries of Buffs, Blacks and Whites. Among the lot were some splendid specimens in all three varieties. Quite a novelty were the two specimens (cockerel and pullet) of Black Minorca Bantams, the first the writer has seen of this breed. In type and color scheme they conform very nicely to the standard fowl of the same breed. The same exhibitor also showed a cockerel and pullet of Partridge Rock Bantams that attracted the attention of Rock fanciers.

Aquatic Fowl.

In some respects the aquatic fowl exhibit was the surprise of the show. In the first place it was larger than any similar exhibit we have seen for some years; in the second place, it covered more varieties; and finally, it possessed quality. The Toulouse geese were indeed splendid birds, of good color of feather, large bodies, and good type. One bird, not in good feather, was an importation from England, which to the experienced eye, possessed good breeding and showroom characteristics. If well furnished, it certainly would have won a decoration. The entries of colored and White Muscovy ducks weer also a matter of comment, being of good size and type, good color in plumage and desirable markings in head and leg points. The displays of White Pekins and Indian Runners was not so strong in numbers, but the quality was up to the usual average displayed in previous shows.

The Thanksgiving Bird.

The entries of turkeys covered only two varieties, viz., the Mammoth Bronze and the White Holland. Of the former, the display was absolutely quiet, both in the number cooped and also in quality. The first old Tom was among the best colored specimens ever exhibited in this section, the plumage being a rich metallic from neck feathers clean down to the tail. The remaining ribbon decorated specimens were all correspondingly excellent, having good bone, superb type, and indeed all the fundamental qualities that please the commercial demands and the fine points of the fancy. The White Hollands were also good of the breed.

Exhibition Breeding Yards.

A feature of considerable interest was the exhibit of breeding yards consisting of one male and eight females. These were passed on by George C. England, the judge of this division, from the best known standards for their apparent value for egg production their quality from an exhibition point being of a secondary consideration. This embraced pens of Single Comb Rhode Island Reds, Anconas, Blue Andalusians, White Leghorns, Black Langshans and Barred Plymouth Stocks. The interested reader is referred to the list of awards as to the opinion of the judges in designating economic values as applied to the different breeds in competition.

Missing Links.

The law of elimination is never idle; it is the survival of the fittest that prevails. The number of breeds and varieties staged at modern poultry shows represent after all but a comparatively few of those represented in the Standard of Perfection. How many of these absent breeds represent economic values quite the equal of those that find a place in exhibition coops subject to judgment and the gaze of visitors. For the most part, it would add to the interest of poultry shows and in no way lessen commercial returns if at least some of these neglected breeds were more in evidence. The W. F. Black Spanish was absent for the first time in years; likewise we do not see either Red Caps nor Dorkings; Polish, once the favorites of a few fancies, are now practically obsolete in the show room; the Hamburgs are rarely seen and then not always at their best; the same is true of the Houdans and other French breeds; the Campine seems to have lost its grip—only a few years ago a favorite, not a single specimen graced this show; of Standard Games there were none, and Malays and of Sumatras we have seen no good specimens for years. How the average premium list covers all breeds and varieties in the Standard, which certainly makes an opening for "easy money" for a few people to take up some of these somewhat neglected breeds. Particularly should this appeal to the fancier spirit, to which the maintenance of poultry exhibitions is so largely due.

An Appreciation.

This Los Angeles Live Stock Show exhibition was held under canvas; the weather being pleasant, it afforded ideal conditions for the health of the birds. The arrangement was good, the cooping of the best, and the care of the birds and comfort of visitors all that could be desired. The interest excited and the attendance enjoyed, showed that live stock has become a great and growing factor in the development of a diversified agriculture in Southern California. As an integral part of this growth the poultry industry is holding its own and going forward to better and larger things.

Egg Weights and Numbers.

In a late issue of the New Zealand Poultry Journal a writer advocates that the standard weight for a dozen eggs be reduced from twenty-four to twenty-two ounces to the dozen, his contention being that the difference between twenty-two, twenty-three and twenty-four ounce eggs is at best but a slight variation, hence would not be noticed while at the same time the change would inure to the benefit of producers. This may be more or less true, but to our way of thinking it is a plea for the hen producing the largest number of eggs, for it is quite generally recognized that excessive fecundity has a tendency to reduce the size of the egg; besides it would reduce the standard and give the smaller hen fruit higher rank. But beyond this, it would be inimical to the man with a strain of fowl that averaged high in twenty-four ounces to the dozen eggs. To lower the standard of an article either by diminishing its quantity or vitiating its quality is bad business. To get the ultimate consumer "a coming" and then maintain him as a regular and satisfied buyer is the greatest asset a business can have. To place numbers first, and size second, does not appeal. Can it be that in our zeal for 225-250 egg laying hens we are sacrificing size of egg?

MARKETING SOCIETIES.

Marketing methods and marketing problems are excellent subjects for discussion by various organizations, many of which resume their meetings this fall. A number of such societies already have prepared programmes on which are listed questions relating to farm management, disposal of farm produce, as well as many topics of general interest

One of the common causes of failure in raising calves is that of over-feeding, which usually results in scouring. When scouring occurs, the amount of milk fed should be reduced, or in severe cases no milk at all given until the trouble ceases.

SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 2, 1919.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

It Was a Great Show.

NQUESTIONABLY, the Los Angeles Live Stock Show will become a wonderful institution, to be coupled, some day, perhaps, with an extensive Southern California exhibit of farm products which shall rival any such exhibition anywhere. The best argument for the continuation of the show is the complete success that attended this year's effort.

Southern California is rather apathetic regarding the California State Fair, held at Sacramento each year. Exhibitors in the southern portion of the State find it most inconvenient, not to say unprofitable, to ship exhibits so far north. Many of those who have exhibited products at Sacramento have come away also with an impression that exhibitors of the northern end of the State, rather have the best of things in the general showing, which is perhaps natural considering the geographical location of the fair and the fact that northern men practically run it.

But the Los Angeles Live Stock Show will become the nucleus of a great Southern California Farm Products Exposition, in which live stock will take the lead, a real State fair for this end of California in which the farming industry of this section will be more faithfully and adequately represented than has ever been possible at the Sacramento fair. There isn't any question as to the ability of this part of the State to put on such an annual show. The show just closed proved that it could be done.

More all-around class was exhibited in the live-stock entries at the show just closed than at any other similar event in the history of the State, or perhaps of the Coast. Live-stock breeders know the southern part of the State as a rich field for the introduction of the best they produce. The live-stock-raising industry in this section is on the upgrade. A perpetuated live-stock show will help this industry, and the industry will in turn help the live-stock show, while both will contribute to the upbuilding of the section.

Now that the directors of the Los Angeles Live Stock Show have unanimously decided to make it a permanent institution, stock raisers, and men engaged in other branches of farm husbandry, should unite with business interests to make it the most important exposition of meat and milk producing animals west of the Mississippi. The Southland has just produced the greatest live stock show on the Pacific Coast. Next year the Los Angelets Live Stock Show will get additional pure bred champions from the widening circuit of shows on the Coast, and all indications point to a magnificent future for this great live stock exposition.

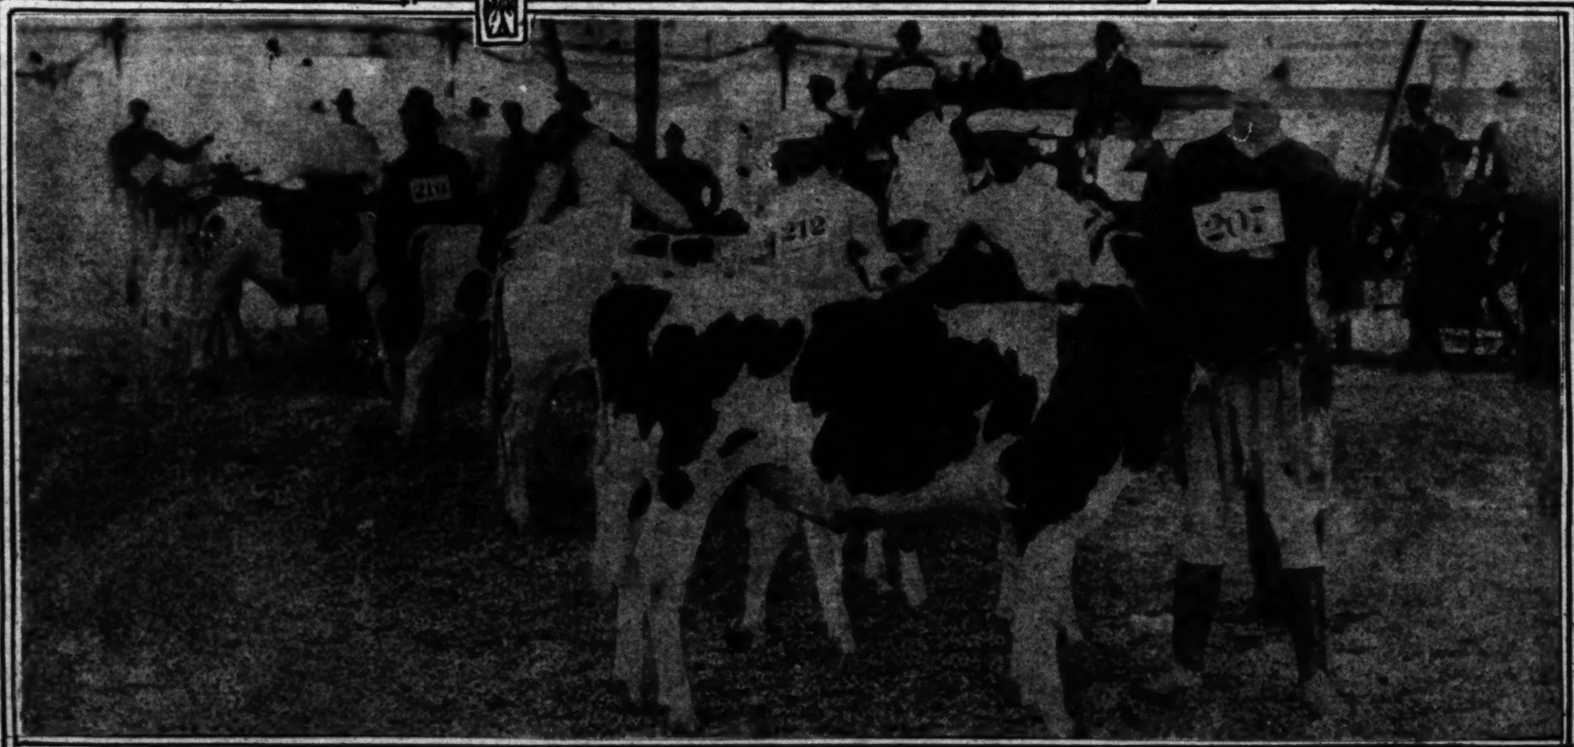
GROWERS SELL WALNUTS.

Within ten days after having placed the 1919 crop of walnuts on the market, the California Walnut Growers' Association sold the entire crop to middlemen, and found it necessary to turn down orders aggregating 100 carloads. The nut crop is worth from $13,000,000 to $15,000,000.

The California market prefers a hog between the weights of 200 and 250 pounds. Good hogs should be ready for market at these weights when from six to eight months old.

UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS OF STOCK SHOW ASSURES ITS PERMANENCY.

BORN a "war baby," and given the brand of unqualified success upon its second appearance, the Los Angeles Live-Stock Show has become a permanent institution to lead the powerful new live-stock raising movement throughout the Southwest. At the close of this year's show the board of directors to a man enthusiastically decided to make the show an annual event, and to begin immediately with preparations for a third and still greater exposition.



Glimpses of the Great Los Angeles Livestock Show.

Below, interior of the judging tent. John B. Irwin of Minneapolis was judging Holstein heifers when the Farm and Tractor camera man dropped in. Above is the Santa Anita Rancho pavilion with some of the fine animals of the ranch lined up ready for parade. Anita M. Baldwin, owner of the great San Gabriel Valley stock farm, is standing at the left.

The 1920 show is to be broader in scope, more pretentious and more instructive than this year's notable event. Exhibits of farm crops may be added to those in live stock, and the whole may well become a great agricultural exposition for the entire Southwest.

The Los Angeles Live-stock Show was the most popular with patrons of any in the extensive experience of the manager, C. R. Thomas. Live-stock breeders told him that never before had so many questions regarding their animals been asked by visitors. The history of breeds, their care, feed, cost, and production were subjects of inquiry by hundreds.

The standard of individual merit was high at the exposition of live stock. Many grand champion animals of other shows and fairs were shown, and in a number of instances these were not good enough to win in the fast company of the Los Angeles show. In fact, it was a show composed largely of prize winners, and included were animals that had pulled down championships at national events.

It was a show of many interesting auxiliary features. Associations of cattle raisers, swine breeders and dairymen met in convention during the show and took important action. A great Berkshire swine sale was held, nearly fifty head of pure-bred Berkshires being distributed to Southern California farms. Spirited trotting, pacing and running races were held each day, some of the fastest horses in the country contesting. A dog show was one of the interesting features, canine blue bloods from many parts of California being shown. Cavies and pigeons were among other pet stock exhibited. The poultry and rabbit shows were very well attended and highly appreciated.

The Los Angeles Live-stock Show was held at an opportune time, when the whole nation is engaged in a campaign for the abolition of the scrub live-stock sire, and the use of the pure-blood sire. The ninety-six exhibitors of fine stock endeavored to show by visual comparison the value of using the better sire, and the lesson is bound to bear fruit among the cattlemen, dairymen, swine, sheep, goat and poultry raisers of the Southwest, constantly increasing in numbers.

CREATES WIDE INTEREST.

That the Los Angeles Live-stock Show is bound to attract wider attention from year to year was evidenced by the inclusion of Los Angeles in this year's intinerary of some of the finest show herds in the western part of the United States. Western breeders were interested from the start, in fact, the Liberty Fair of last year drawing a goodly number from distant sections. Some of the herds of cattle and swine this year came from the Mississippi Valley and the Far Northwest, and the exhibitors expressed themselves as satisfied with results and attendance.

The Hereford Corporation of Wyoming an institution that fits show stock for exhibitions far and wide, showed at last year's Liberty Fair and returned this year, exhibiting eighteen fine animals, shown in Nebraska, Colorado and Utah before coming here, and will go to Portland Denver, Oklahoma City and Fort Worth before returning home. Mr. Herm, of Kansas City, also

PREPARING SQUABS FOR THE MARKET.

Squabs are ready for market usually from three and one-half to four and one-half weeks of age and up to this time they are fed by their parents. They must be sent to market promptly, as the period during which they are in best condition rarely exceeds one week. According to specialists squabs are in good market condition when fully feathered under the wings, which is usually about the time they begin to leave the nest. If they are not killed at this time they soon lose their baby fat and their flesh begins to harden.

Catch the squabs to be marketed in the morning before they are fed by their parents, so that their crops will be empty. Squabs are usually killed in the same manner as poultry, by cutting the arteries in the back of the roof of the mouth and piercing the brain, but if sent to market without plucking they are usually killed by wringing or breaking the neck. After they are stuck the feathers are immediately plucked clean, with the exception of the head, and the birds are cooled either by placing them in cold water or by hanging them in a cool place. The crop should be cut open and thoroughly cleansed if it contains any feed.

Squabs should be graded according to size and quality, as dark-colored and small squabs tend to lower the price paid for an entire shipment of mixed squabs. They are usually packed for shipment in a good supply of cracked ice, breasts up, with paraffin paper between each layer of ice and squabs.

As the period at which a squab is right for market is not over one week, it is necessary to have a good-sized flock to have over one dozen squabs ready for market at one time. A local market which will take any number of squabs is a great aid to the small producer. Where one has a small flock, it usually pays best to build it up until it is large enough to make good-sized shipments of squabs. This, however, requires a constant outlay without any return for some time.

Farm News of the Great Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

SAN BERNARDINO.—How one pig will put a boy through college sounds like a story from the Arabian Nights, yet that is what 11-year-old Frank Cutley of Chino, who recently won first honors in the pig club contest is planning to do. Young Cutley for his efforts received a handsome Duroc-Jersey gilt, valued at $250. This will be bred in November to a $3000 boar of the Diamond Bar ranch at Spadra, free of charge, for a litter of March pigs. A conservative value of this litter is from $800 to $1200, and from this litter other litters will be bred. "I expect to go to college when I am pig put me there," said the boy, when asked pig put me there, said the boy, when asked what he was going to do with the proceeds from his pig. Besides winning first honors in the pig contest, Cutley made $14.37 net prize money from his pig in the contest, after allowing for wages in caring for the animal and for feed. His pig averaged one and a half pounds a day during the six weeks of the contest in the way of gain. The success of the Chino Pig Club, which was inaugur[illegible] Farm Adviser B. W. Shaper, has proven a tremendous impetus in the formation of pig and calf clubs throughout San Bernardino county, and from many farm centers applications for similar clubs are being received. Advices from other counties state that similar clubs are doing more to solve the question of how to keep the boys on the farm than any other movement thus far advanced.

GROWERS PROSPERING.

YUMA (Ariz.)—Cotton growers in this locality are entering upon what appears to be their most prosperous season. The medium staple, Mebane, now is selling up to 44.43 cents a pound, compared with around 30 cents last year. At this price the growers are making more money than they did on long-staple Egyptian at a higher price, for the Mebane is easier to handle, has a shorter growing season and produces more heavily.

GOAT EATS RIBBONS.

SNOWFLAKE (Ariz.)—One of the odd features of the live-stock exhibit at the recent Snowflake fair was the manner in which the prize ribbons disappeared from the animals in a certain section. It finally was discovered that a blue-ribbon goat, the entry of William Flake, Jr., had sampled his own decoration and finding it palatable had proceeded to eat all other ribbons in sight.

SCALYBARK DEMONSTRATION.

ALHAMBRA.—A scalybark control demonstration was held at Alhambra Monday morning, October 20, under the auspices of the Lamanda Park-Pasadena Farm Bureau Center. The demonstration was concluded by Assistant Farm Adviser Blanchard. A discussion of scalybark disease and its control was given, and following that, several trees were treated. These trees will be marked and a follow-up demonstration will be given next spring to show the effect of the treatment.

BIG POULTRY RETURNS.

VAN NUYS.—Van Nuys, the poultry metropolis of Southern California, is producing at the present time over 25,000 eggs a day, which at the prevailing prices are worth approximately $1500. A week's production has a market value to the producers of $10,500. This is the molting season, and the production is at the lowest point in the year, but practically all of the poultry ranchers in the colony say that the production this fall is better than in any fall period since the colony was established. This showing is due to an increase in the number of hens, and also to the splendid condition of the flocks. The poultry industry at Van Nuys has been growing by leaps and bounds during the past year. Since January 1, 1919, there have been sixty-nine new poultry houses erected in the colony, representing an investment for housing alone of over $60,000. The average capacity of the houses built during this year is conservatively estimated at 1000 hens each. White Leghorns are the prevailing type of chickens raised here, but there are a few scattered flocks of other breeds. Turkeys and ducks are also raised extensively, and these are gaining rapidly in importance.

LEMON PRUNING EXPLAINED.

CLAREMONT.—A lemon-pruning demonstration was held at Claremont, Monday afternoon, under the auspices of the La Verne Farm Bureau Center. Assistant Farm Adviser Blanchard gave a talk on lemon pruning, which was followed by a practical demonstration in the Claremont High School orchard. The importance of the elimination of the sucker type of growth was emphasized. It was pointed out that where there is excessive wood production there is a low production of fruit. A lemon tree should be made up of a fruiting type of wood with a minimum amount of vigorous sucker wood.

DRIERS FOR PRUNES.

BANNING.—The hot air drier for prunes is growing in favor in this section. E. L. Robertson has had one in operation for some time, and Frank Jost has recently completed one, while C. O. Barber is planning to install one as soon as he can obtain the necessary labor and materials. These driers are built of concrete, and equipped with a furnace to supply the heated air. The whole of the drying process is not, however, accomplished in the dryer, the prunes being exposed to the sun till partially dry anu then finished off in the heater. The advantage and necessity of proper fertilizing of prune orchards is very apparent as the prune harvest proceeds. The prunes of some orchards are grading as low as 111 to the pound, while other orchards where commercial fertilizers have been used are showing a far better average size.

MOUNTAIN APPLES.

REDLANDS.—A great mountain apple country is being formed about Redlands and in a few years the apple will be a rival of the orange for the wealth they bring to the upper San Bernardino Valley. In the valleys of the high range to the east of Redlands some of the finest apples produced in the West are now being grown. John W. Edwards, Rhea Igo, J. Stetson, Dr. McDermott, J. Jackson and Will Clark are among the men who have gone into the mountains and cleared land to plant to the orchards now producing such a fine grade of fruit. The apples grown in these protected valleys are conceded to be of exceptionally fine flavor and the trees usually produce only the finest grade of fruit. This is attributed largely to the fact that apple trees are helped rather than hurt by the cold winter weather, especially the cold nights that put so much color in the fruit. There are two great apple-growing districts near Redlands, one the Oak Glen district, that for twenty years has been producing fine fruit, and which is in the mountains a mile high. The other is in the Yucaipa Valley and while not so high, it is high enough to give the fine color to fruit. The mountain orchards scattered through the Mill Creek and Santa Ana countries are believed to be the forerunners of other big orchards so that this promises to be the big apple growing country of the South.

TO SAVE COTTON.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—A material improvement will be made this summer in the local cotton situation by the installation by the McCall Cotton Company of a ginning plant for handling cotton in the bolls that are not open at the time of the coming of frost. It is expected that at least 300 bales of medium-grade cotton thus may be saved

HERD BOOK RECEIVED. .... ..

The Los Angeles Public Library has just received ten volumes of the Holstein-Friesian Herd Book, which is a list of registered stock. The last volume comes down to February 1, 1919. These books may be consulted at any time in the science and industry department of the main library, Fifth and Broadway.

Petitions for the formation of the Madera irrigation district are now in circulation and more than the required amount of assessed valuation has already been signed. The resident land owners of the proposed district are practically a unit in signing and the campaign for non-resident signers is bringing results. Many of the larger non-resident owners have already signed. The system will comprise over 300,000 acres of the finest land in the San Joaquin Valley.

A SHORT COURSE FOR FRUIT MEN.

ONTARIO.—In an effort to make the Chaffey College of Agriculture of practical service to growers of deciduous fruit in this section, a short course dealing with problems of vital importance to fruit men under the direction of George P. Weldon, until recently assistant State Horticultural Commissioner and now pomologist of the Ontario school, has been announced for November 10 to 20 at Chaffey Auditorium.

It is the plan to make this course exceedingly practical and not only will the Chaffey faculty have a part in the work, but some of the most noted agriculturists and horticulturists from the University of California and the United States Department of Agriculture will aid.

One of the big problems of this section at present is that of spraying peaches for the control of thrips and twigborer. More power sprays are said to be needed and an exhibition of approved sprayers is included in the plans for the course.

The programme for the course follows:

Monday, November 10, 2 p.m.—"What Chaffey is Attempting to do for the Farmer," M. E. Hill; "Peach Twig-borer and Thrips," George P. Weldon; "Cultivation and Cover Crops," Charles J. Booth.

November 11, 2 p.m.—"Irrigation," Charles J. Booth; "Spraying and Spraying Equipment," George P. Weldon; Spraying demonstrations. 7 p.m., Economics of agriculture.

November 12, 2 p.m.—"Pruning." Pruning demonstration, Dr. J. C. Whitten, Department of Pomology, University of California.

November 13, 2 p.m.—"Insecticides and Fungicides," orchard spraying demonstration, George P. Weldon.

Tuesday, November 18, 2 p.m.—"Pollination and Thinning of Deciduous Fruits," George P. Weldon; "Ways for the Grower to Co-operate with the Canner," J. H. Williams. 7 p.m.—Illustrated talk on deciduous fruit growing, George P. Weldon.

November 19, 2 p.m.—"Improvements of Deciduous Fruits Through Bud Selection," A. D. Shamel; "Orchard Mites," George P. Weldon.

November 20, 2 p.m.—"Standardization of Fruit," George P. Weldon. Question box.

"There's A Right Way"

"Some folks think that when you blast for tree planting you've got to shoot the earth up to the sky—that's wrong. A good shot for tree planting just raises the surface earth two or three feet—then the force of the dynamite is properly used—it breaks up the earth all around the hole and gives the young tree's roots a chance to spread.

"The best dynamite to use for tree planting is

and the best way to find out how to use it most effectively is to send to the Hercules Powder Co. for the 68 page illustrated book, 'Progressive Cultivation'. This book not only tells of the many things that dynamite can do to help you with your farm work but it gives detailed directions for every blasting operation.

"And the best part is that any farmer or orchardist can get this book free. The Hercules Powder Co. will send it to you if you will sign and send in the attached coupon."

ACTUAL PROFIT

In practice, how much profit do you think 1440 hens can make for their owner in one month? Would such a flock of hens make a gross profit of $817.00 in 31 days? Mr. W. H. Young of Downey has some figures hard to beat. Read what he has to say. He uses "PCA" Dry Mash and Lactein.

"You will be interested in my egg record, because I secured it by feeding 'PCA' Dry Mash and Lactein. In the month of December I had 1440 hens and pullets. For the 31 days of December, these hens laid 1661 dozen eggs, besides what we used ourselves, and we use a lot of them. I sold these eggs for $1,157.25. Feed cost me $340.25, leaving a gross profit of $817.00 for one month. Can you beat it? Yours truly.

(Signed) W. H. YOUNG."

Note the results obtained by W. H. Young, Downey.

C. T. Teames, Burbank, says:

"Have 700 hens and 2200 pullets. I am now feeding 'PCA' Mash to them. After having fed other mashes and keeping accurate account of amount in pounds consumed, decided to use 'PCA,' since they are eating 16% less in pounds than other mashes and results are the same. The 2200 pullets are from 4800 chicks fed on 'PCA' Buttermilk Chick Mash—my loss was 5%. I can heartily recommend the feeding of 'PCA' products.

(Signed) C. I. TEAMES."

H. P. Chenoweth, the well-known Ancona breeder, says:

"I tested 'PCA' Mash against the mash that I have been using, with the following results:

Total number of hens in test, 600—300 to each mash. These hens were fed the two mashes for 81 days. The egg yield was about equal, but the hens fed on 'PCA' ate 1.6 ounces per hen each day, while the ones fed the other mashes ate 2.1, making a saving in 81 days of nine 90-lb. sacks of mash. Both pens received the same amount of grain. Since that test I have fed 'PCA' Mash to my whole flock.

(Signed) H. P. CHENOWETH."

F. R. Richardson of San Gabriel says it is more efficient than any other.

"In a general way I would say that I have been using your Mash for a number of years, and have been unable to find anything better. I have often experimented with other mashes and those made up from my own formula, and have gone back to the 'PCA' Mash. In my opinion, your Mr. Schofield knows more about feeds and the true meaning of a 'balanced ration' than any one I have ever met. I consider the Mash safe and dependable.

(Signed) F. R. RICHARDSON."

GOOD ROADWAYS ON THE FARM SAVE BOTH TIME AND LABOR.

GOOD-ROAD building, like charity, should begin at home. This is another way of stating that private roads on the farm are as important to the interests they serve as the public roads over which the farmer's product is hauled to the market.

In proportion to its use a poor private road on a farm is as great a handicap to efficient marketing, as well as other farm operations, as a poor public highway. The fundamental principle involved in the construction of the two kinds of roads is the same, according to the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. But, as the farm road is called on to bear far less traffic, the ordinary methods of construction and maintenance are so modified and the use of materials so adapted as to meet the special requirements and reduce the cost. To build the farm roads in the same manner and design as public thoroughfares, which carry much greater traffic, in general, would be a useless waste of money.

The first consideration is the location of the roads and paths about the farm. The roads and paths are a part of the permanent farm plant. Consequently they should be so located as to serve best the purpose for which they are intended, should fit in with the general scheme of the farm and at the same time should avoid, as much as possible, places which would require difficult and expensive construction or maintenance. The main consideration, however, must be to secure the highest degree of efficiency from the farm plant as a whole.

ARRANGEMENT OF LANES.

The accompanying diagram, showing an ideal arrangement of farm buildings as well as of connecting lanes and drives, offers helpful suggestions to the farmer who is planning new vehicle ways in the immediate vicinity of his farmhouse. This particular arrangement is for a farmstead occupying a corner lot, which permits a second, or rear, entrance from the public highway. This lane, running to the north, shown at the right side of the diagram, is a convenience in case stock is to be driven to the market, in that the animals need not be driven past the house, thereby subjecting shrubs, trees and the lawn to possible damage. One feature that should be taken into consideration in planning the roads near the farmhouse is the direction of the prevailing winds. In this instance the main entrance lane and drive have been located so that dust from them will ordinarily be carried away from the dwelling.

The earth road is the most common type of farm road and will probably so remain. When properly crowned, drained and maintained with the split-log drag or other similar device, the earth road, in all but a few exceptional soils or in a few places immediately around the farm lots and buildings, can be made to answer the requirements fairly well. A little grading will in general give the earth road a crown sloping from the center toward the side ditches at a rate of about one inch to the foot, and side ditches of sufficient size to carry away the storm water can usually be constructed without difficulty. If the ground is springy the side ditches may be made deeper, or the ground water may be carried away by tile drains.

GOOD DRAINAGE ESSENTIAL.

The fundamental requirement of an earth road is always good drainage. This involves, first, the removal of the water which reaches the surface of the road from precipitation or otherwise; and second, in certain places the removal of any ground water which reaches the road from underground seepage. Surface drainage is accomplished by securing a reasonably firm crowned roadway and providing ditches of sufficient size and with ample grade and frequent outlets. Subdrainage to remove the water from beneath the road surface or to prevent its passage into the roadbed is usually accomplished most effectively by so-called blind drains or by means of properly located tile drains.

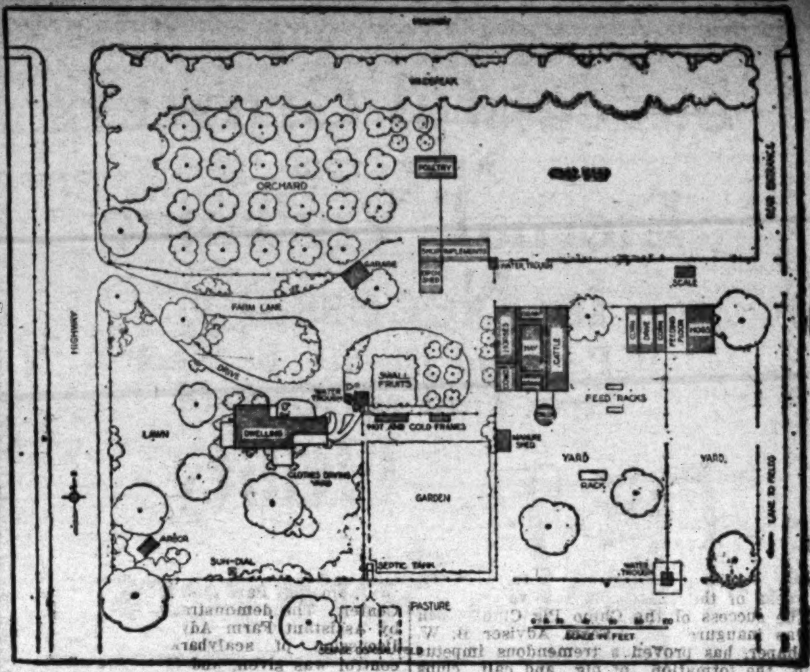
Roads and drives immediately around the farmyards and barns which are used very frequently are usually of sufficient importance to warrant some surface improvement.

Many of the materials ordinarily employed in road construction will be found too expensive for use in improving the farm roads. One or more of the following will, however, usually be found available and within the means of the farmer for surfacing his roads and paths: Gravel, mixtures of sand and clay, cinders, brickbats from old buildings, brickyard waste, and quarry waste. The material selected should be hard enough to withstand crushing under heavy loads and possess sufficient binding power to compact well and maintain a firm, hard surface.

Drainage and a good foundation are the first considerations in improving a road with a hard surface. The best possible foundation is a good earth road with a low crown. Earth shoulders may be graded upon each side to prevent the surfacing material from spreading, as in the construction of an ordinary macadam road. The material used for surfacing should be placed in a uniform layer or layers on this foundation and should be given a sufficient crown to shed the rain waters to the sides. If a road roller can be secured, the material may be quickly consolidated.

TWELVE FEET WIDE ENOUGH.

During this process the road should receive frequent attention with a split-log drag or other means for smoothing the surface and filling the ruts. On steep grades, where there would be a tendency for the side ditches to wash, this can usually be overcome by providing outlets and getting the water away from the road before it accumulates in large volume. On roads where wagons will not be required to pass each other, a width of from nine to twelve feet between ditches will usually be sufficient. The surfaced portion need rarely exceed seven or eight feet, though it can be carried to the ditches to advantage. There is no particular virtue in building a farm road wider than is necessary to answer the special traffic requirements. The need or desirability of moving occasionally extra wide or heavy implements, such as certain harvesting machinery, over the roads should, however, not be lost sight of. A little foresight in the alignment of ditches, in providing ample width of gates, or of giving extra strength to culverts, may save a great deal of both annoyance and delay during some very busy period.



A Good Arrangement of Farm Lanes and Drives.

When the young pigs scour, reduce the sow's feed. If they are running on grass, shut them up for a few days. Keep the beds and pens clean and dry, and let in plenty of sunshine.

Alfalfa and Milo Maize 2 of California's Wonder Crops

The annual value of these two crops, the acreage used and capital employed, are little realized, and the opportunity for greater production, wide distribution and a fair profit to the producer is just beginning to be understood.

1500 PRODUCERS, owning 50,000 acres of alfalfa and maize, have organized a State-wide non-profit co-operative association—to apply modern, co-operative and business methods to the production, distribution and sale of these crops and to render a strictly co-operative at-cost service.

GREATEST RABBIT EXHIBIT THIS YEAR.

Men familiar with such exhibitions declare that the show of rabbits, pigeons and cavies given at the Los Angeles Livestock Show was the best in quality and number of exhibits given in the State during 1919. Many surprises in the exhibit of Flemish Giants and fur rabbits greeted those who saw the show. That Southern California has held the lead in the breeding of high class rabbits, cavies and pigeons was amply attested by the brilliant array of prize-winners.

Among the exhibitors of rabbits were Wilson Bros., Los Angeles, who had thirty-five animals in the show; C. E. Post & Sons, Ernest W. Sutton, J. V. Terry, Mrs. Ruth Blackwell, Mrs. C. Fred Steele, Mrs. E. M. Jones, C. A. Shelly, Gus Schilling, Edwin M. Spining, L. S. Perry, Mrs. T. R Griffith, S. C. Barthold and M. Minton, all of Los Angeles; Ada B. Mansfield, Culver City; Mrs. Edith S. Taft, Pasadena; Pyle & Oustatt, Pasadena; Harley P. Martin, Hollywood; and B. N. Wheeler, San Anselmo.

There were about 100 excellent pigeons shown, among the exhibitors being Wilbur T. Helm, Palmdale, showing White Swiss Monadines; Paradise Valley Poultry Ranch, National City, exhibiting White Kings; Southern California Racing Pigeon Club, showing racing Homers and record Homers, English Pouters and White Runts. There were eighty-five cavies, the exhibit of these animals being unusually extensive and interesting.

COVER CROPS VALUABLE.

It has been pretty well demonstrated in the San Bernardino Valley citrus groves that a winter cover crop is the thing. The growers have put in their crop and the rain of last month did wonders for it. The crops are now well out of the ground and another rain or so will put them in just the best of condition for the winter. There is a wide variance of opinion as to the crops which are most valuable and it has been shown that at times the soil requires certain crops and that certain soils do better with certain crops. Most of the growers put in their winter cover crops in the early valley and get them out of the way in the spring before they become a drain on the trees, which are at that time working hard to supply the sugars for the fruit. The melilotus clover seems to be the most popular cover crop for this section, as it answers all purposes. The clover, when turned over, enriches the soil as well or better than most others and it has been proven that the grower is more sure of getting a good stand with it. There are experiments every year in certain crops and many have strong leanings toward the bean crops. In the past two or three years the experiments of the citrus experiment station have been of great value to the growers.

PROFITABLE POULTRY ADVERTISING METHODS.

To keep his breeding birds in the public eye is the aim of every progressive breeder, as in this manner he attracts a following which either purchases his surplus breeding stock or else by word of mouth or other publicity advertises the fame and quality of this particular poultry, so that the ultimate sale of the fowl is effected. One of the greatest values of the fall fairs and poultry shows from the standpoint of the breeder is that they furnish opportunities of advertising his flock, comparing his birds with those of his associates and profiting by the decisions of the judges. Many people attend poultry shows purely because of interest in feathered stock and without any immediate intention of purchasing breeding birds. However, the outstanding quality or superiority of certain fowl may be so impressed upon their minds that later on, when they decide to make purchases, they will remember the names of breeders whose fowl they saw at the shows and will patronize them.

Attendance at the fall fairs and poultry shows is of particular importance to the beginner in the poultry-breeding business, as it shows him the fine points of standard-bred fowl, enables him to compare his birds with the birds of other breeders and gets him in contact with successful poultrymen from whom he may learn many clever points of management which otherwise would cost long and costly experience.

Although the fall fairs and poultry shows are one of the best selling mediums for the poultryman who raises breeding stock, it is also advisable that he advertise judiciously in the poultry press as well as in reputable farm papers.

Poultrymen, the country over, also find it advantageous to use neat and attractive roadside signboards at their farm gates, which announce the breeding and number of fowl they have to offer, as well as the price, if desired. These signboards may be made in the form of inclosed cases so that the sales sheets may be changed frequently. Some owners paint the name of their farm and the breed of poultry which they keep on the roof of a shed or barn, where it is conspicuous from the country highway, while others place similar information on the water tower or near the top of a silo. They aim to attract the attention of the passers-by, and in one way or other leave with him a lasting impression concerning their farm and poultry offerings.

Many extensive breeders of poultry follow the advertising methods practiced by breeders of other varieties of live stock. They issue annual and elaborate catalogues containing pictures of their prize-winners as well as detailed records of the breeding and winnings of their flocks. They also utilize post cards, circular letters, personal letters and the customary "follow-up" system of advertising. They index all inquiries regarding their stock and at regular intervals communicate with inquirers who appear interested, ultimately making many sales. Persistency, consistency and insistency form a trinity in poultry advertising and the uniform and profitable dissemination of high-grade breeding stock.

Put it up to your hens!

SAY what you will, the final test of a feed is: does it make your hens lay? If it does that—if it makes your hens produce eggs and more eggs—and keeps them in fine condition all the while—then, it's a good feed.

That's why thousands of successful poultrymen have turned to Sperry Surelay. They have found in Surelay a simple and economical solution of their feeding problem. They know that Surelay is not only right but always right—always the same. Our daily laboratory tests (something the hand-mixer does not, and can not have) assure absolute uniformity at all times.

Surelay is worked out in accordance with a practical, scientific formula that has stood the test of time. It is so blended as to provide just the right amount of protein for the white of the egg—just the right amount of fat for the yolk. It contains fourteen distinct ingredients that every hen in your flock needs to make her a profit-producer.

Moreover, our large scale of production enables us to manufacture and sell the finished product lower than the average feeder can buy the ingredients—to say nothing of the cost and trouble of mixing.

After all, all we ask you to do is to put the egg-production question squarely up to your hens. Feed them Sperry Surelay—and judge its value by what the hens do for you!

SIX MILLIONS FOR CITRUS PRODUCTS.

ONTARIO.—More han six million dollars was received for oranges and lemons shipped from the Ontario district during the past fiscal year, it was estimated today, following the submission of the annual report of the Ontario-Cucamonga Fruit Exchange, numbering eleven packing-houses in this district. The total receipts for the year amounted to $4,856,112.91, which exceeds the previous record year of 1916-17 by more than a million and a quarter dollars. The receipts of independent packing concerns, not affiliated with the "O.K.," as the exchange is commonly known, will, it is estimated, amount to approximately $2,000,000 more, placing the total received for citrus fruit for the season of 1918-19 at well over the six-million-dollar mark and establishing a new record.

During the year the "O.K." Exchange shipped a total of 1,342,623 boxes of citrus fruit, numbering 953,977 boxes of oranges and 388,646 boxes of lemons, which on a basis of 400 packed boxes to the car, amounts to 3356.5 carloads. In addition to this, the exchange is carrying over into the 1919-1920 season about 240 cars of Valencia oranges still on the trees.

The expense of operating the office of the Ontario-Cucamonga Exchange, according to the report, which was submitted by R. B. Wallace, its assistant manager, was slightly less than three-fourths of a cent a packed box, considerably less than the average operating expense of all district exchanges in the California Fruit Growers' Exchange during the past season, which was slightly over nine-tenths of a cent per packed box. The service rendered during the past season by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange cost a trifle over four and a quarter cents per box, making a total cost to the growers for the services of the two organizations of just five cents per packed box.

Of the total number of oranges shipped by the exchange during the year there were 675,336 packed boxes, or 1688 cars, of Washington navels and 189,349 packed boxes, or 473 carloads, of Valencias. Navels averaged $3.59 per packed box and Valencias $3.98. More than three-fourths of the navel crop was marketed at an average price which exceeded by 28 cents per box the highest previous average in the history of the exchange.

During the season five carloads of navels were exported to England and commanded a very fancy price. Wallace's report declares that the "O.K." district enjoys an enviable reputation on navels and that the exchange has sustained it during the past season, the fruit from this section having met with a ready demand in the eastern delivered markets and auctions.

The market on tangerines, bloods, St. Michaels, Sweets and Floridas and Seedlings was declared to have been the most satisfactory in many seasons.

A total of 19,537 packed boxes of grapefruit were shipped, which is more than twice the volume of this fruit ever shipped in the history of the exchange, at an average of $3.38 per packed box.

Navel oranges shipped by the exchange were graded as follows: 71.5 per cent. extra choice brands, 27 per cent. choice and 1½ per cent. standard.

Cull oranges shipped to by-products concerns operated by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange swelled the receipts of local growers.

Directors and officers elected at the annual meeting of the Ontario-Cucamonga Fruit Exchange were Charles E. Harwood, president; H. E. Swan, vice-president; and "O.K." representative on the board of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange are Harry B. Harlow, secretary-treasurer and manager; R. B. Wallace, assistant manager; W. K. Beattie, "O.K." representative on the board of the Exchange Orange Products Company; William Rohrig, representative on the board of the Exchange By-Products Company; Charles B. Ford, R. M. Welch, Albert L. Swift, R. T. Nelson, Isaac Jones, H. B. Harlow and Miss Ina Demens, directors.

OBSERVATION TRIP OF POTATO GROWERS.

The second annual potato growers' observation trip under the auspices of the Los Angeles county farm bureau will be held tomorrow, November 3. It will convene at the ranch of E. D. McSweeney on the El Monte road, just east of the limits of South Alhambra at 10 a.m. An unusual array of talent will be present on the trip from all parts of the State.

Prof. S. S. Rogers of the division of olericulture of the State university will be on hand and will discuss potato culture in Southern California. H. A. Hyde, potato seed grower of Watsonville, will bring a series of charts and pictures with him. George Peters of Bakersfield, one of the largest potato growers of Kern county, will also be in attendance.

In addition, it is expected there will be a number of experts from Southern California, including D. G. Milbraith, an authority on diseases of potatoes, who is working at the government laboratories at Alhambra; D. B. Mackie of the State department of Agriculture, who has done some work on the fumigation of potatoes for tuber moth; and H. J. Ryan, Horticultural Commissioner of Los Angeles county.

After inspecting the potato field of Mr. McSweeney, the conference will go to Burbank to the place of J. D. Radcliff, south and east of Burbank on the San Fernando road. The members of the Burbank farm center will convene at Mr. Radcliff's place at 1:30 and continue with the potato growers for the rest of the trip through the San Fernando Valley. Two or three places in the vicinity of Van Nuys will be visited.

GROWERS WANT TARIFF ON KOTENASHI BEANS.

After a stormy session with the House Ways and Means Committee in Washington, representatives of California and Michigan bean growers have urged a tariff of 4 cents per pound on Kotenashi and other Oriental beans, stating that this was necessary to preserve the bean growing industry in America.

Aaron Shapiro, counsel for the California bean growers association, stated before the committee that thousands of tons of Oriental beans are now in storage on the Pacific Coast, and are dumped on the market whenever it shows a rising tendency, causing the price to drop.

Dynamite less Outrage

It is an outrage in these days of progressive agriculture to plant young trees where the subsoil is at all compact, without loosening up and aerating the ground deeply and thoroughly with a few cents worth of low percentage dynamite.

I am thoroughly familiar with this work and all farm and orchard blasting. References, dozens of satisfied customers all pulling for me. If your job is too small to pay me, write enclosing stamped envelope and I will gladly answer questions and help you all I can.

BEEF CATTLE ENTRIES OF A HIGH ORDER.

BY G. E. GORDON of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau.

The beef cattle exhibit at the Live-stock Show was one of the best ever seen in this end of the State.

With the exception of the herd of William Henn of Kansas City, all the Shorthorn herds were from California. The estate of Thomas B. Dibblee, Santa Barbara; T. S. Glide, Davis; F. L. Hall, Perris; the Merritt-Bowers Company, Tulare; the Pacheco Cattle Company, Hollister, and the University of California were the competitors in this division.

All the entries were nicely fitted and were in excellent condition. The female honors went to the famous herd of T. S. Glide of Davis, owner of the Hillcrest stock farm; the herd of the estate of Thomas B. Dibblee of Santa Barbara took most of the seconds as well as the championships among the bulls. Hallwood Flash by Village Flash was senior champion bull and reserve grand champion, while the senior yearling bull of the same herd, Bashan Augusta. was grand champion. He was also grand champion at the State Fair at Sacramento. A son of Hallwood Flash, Baron Lancaster, was reserve junior champion. These animals were shown at the State Fair and will also be seen at the San Francisco and Portland shows.

Champion Steer of the Los Angeles Livestock Show.

Ericman C. B. 2d, under-year Aberdeen-Angus, owned by Congdon & Battles, Yakima, Wash.

The one entry of the university, Memory's Champion, sired by Champion Junior 3rd, carried away the blue ribbon in the junior bull calf class.

The Pacheco Cattle Company won the blues in the senior heifer and junior heifer classes, with White Pacheco and Pacheco Doris, respectively. The former was also first in her class at Sacramento.

The Hillcrest stock farm herd of T. S. Glide carried away the firsts in the 2-year-old bull class, 2-year-old heifer, senior yearling heifer and junior yearling heifer classes. Little Sweetheart, 2-year-old heifer, was grand champion cow; she also won the same honor at Sacramento. King's Countess from the same herd was junior champion heifer.

The Glide entry was first in the aged herd class, also the young herd and the get of sire classes. The Pacheco Cattle Company took the blue with its calf herd, while the estate of Thomas B. Dibblee won with its produce of dam.

The Hereford showing was not quite up to the standard set by the Shorthorns, or at least the competition was not so strong. The Hereford Corporation of Wyoming walked away with most of the honors. Wallace Good of Kansas City was the judge. The other exhibitors were the Conejo ranch, Newbury Park, and D. H. Ogden, Alpine, both of California, and Will Henn, Kansas City, Mo. The Ogden herd had been off the range but two months and naturally was not in show condition. William Henn's herd was in much better form, but the splendid condition and showing of the beautiful Hereford Corporation herd carried everything before it.

The wonderful herd of Aberdeen-Angus cattle belonging to Congdon and Battles of Yakima, Wash., had the field to itself, as it was the only herd entered. It was a mighty good show if not a competition. This herd will go on to the San Francisco, Portland and Chicago shows before returning home. The herd is shown at many fairs every year and always carries away its share of the ribbons.

In the fat cattle division, Congdon & Battles, T. S. Glide, and the University of California were the exhibitors. California Thickset 3rd, exhibited by the university, won first in the 1-year-old class, while Ericman C. B. 2nd, exhibited by Congdon & Battles, was first in the under 1 year class and champion steer.

Three carload lots of beef cattle were exhibited by Fred H. Bixby, Long Beach, the Merritt-Bowers Company, Tulare, and the Kern County Land Company, Bakersfield. First prize went to the Kern County Land Company on a carload of Shorthorn steers; second to the Merritt-Bowers Company on a carload of Shorthorn heifers and third to Fred H. Bixby who showed Hereford steers.

CONTROL OF CATTLE LICE.

Among methods of cattle lice control tried at Connecticus Experiment Station are clipping, raw linseed oil, sprays, arsenical washes, greases, fumigation and powders. Of the methods tried the most practical found was the treatment with raw linseed oil applied with a brush. In the fall, when the cows are brought in from pasture, is the time recommended as best to begin treatment. Treat again in twelve or thirteen days and every month thereafter, as lice are most plentiful in winter. This treatment does not burn or injure the skin. Lack of oil in the skin makes the animal more susceptible to lice.

RANCHERS EXPERIMENT IN TREATING SEED.

MURIETTA.—The owners of the Thomas ranch near here, Moysey and Roy Thomas, who are the largest growers of wheat in the district, have been for some time carrying on interesting experiments in the treatment of seed wheat for the prevention of rust. Until lately the method was to treat the seed grain with a solution of bluestone and follow this with a treatment with a lime solution. This was the treatment used last year and that it was completely successful is shown by the fact that the wheat on the 700-acre Thomas ranch this year was entirely free from rust, though smut was plainly visible in the seed grain while it was receiving treatment. The Thomases are now convinced that there is no good reason for the lime treatment, which is only used through a fear that the bluestone, which kills the smut, might have an injurious effect on the life of the seed wheat. To determine this point, two plots were planted, one with seed wheat which had been treated with bluestone and lime and the second with seed which had received only the bluestone treatment. The difference between the two plots as to yield was hardly noticeable. Next year they will use only the bluestone treament.

The process of treating the seed wheat on the ranch is as follows: Sacks are half filled with the seed grain and then tied near the top, in order that the contents may move about freely in the sack. The sacks are then thrown in a tank containing the bluestone solution, and poked about with a pole till they have turned over and the contents are thoroughly soaked, wetting every individual seed with the bluestone solution. About two minutes is the time generally given to each sack. One-fourth pound of bluestone is used to one gallon of water.

A Precautionary Measure.

CURING DATES IN IMPERIAL VALLEY.

EL CENTRO.—The correct method of curing dates in the Imperial Valley has been described by R. P. Crocker, assistant farm adviser, as follows:

Many date growers in the valley are having trouble curing dates, stating that they ferment and sour. This can be largely prevented if the dates are properly treated.

At the first picking it is best to go over the bunches carefully, selecting only those dates sufficiently ripe to pick, and gathering the rest of the fruit as it ripens on the bunches later. Bunches of dates that ripen evenly throughout may be picked at once. Dates for home consumption require no further treatment except cleaning by washing before eating.

When the dates are to be kept for a considerable time or are to be marketed, they should be pasteurized as soon as brought from the field, so as to destroy insect eggs and fermentation and decay bacteria. In pasteurizing the dates should be placed in an oven for three hours at a temperature of from 180 to 190 deg. Fahrenheit. The small grower can use a cook stove oven, but the commercial grower should build an oven sufficiently large enough to pasteurize on a large scale. During pasteurization the dates should be spread out on trays; these should be shallow, having wire mesh bottoms, so as to provide more even heating of the fruit.

When dates show translucent soft spots they should be placed loosely in wooden boxes. Varieties which ripen evenly may be placed in boxes in clusters. Date bunches which ripen unevenly should be handpicked and put in boxes and the rest of the bunch left and the dates placed in boxes as they start to mature. The boxes should be tightly covered and put in a storehouse, which should be tightly closed at night to keep the cool air out. Those growing dates commercially, would profit by having a storehouse, tightly constructed with double walls to retain the heat at night, as in such a structure dates will ripen in a few days.

Dates that are very soft, as Deglet Noor, may be dried by placing them on a tray in the sun for a few days. However many varieties of dates should not be dried in the sun as they shrivel up too much and become tasteless and dry.

Date bunches should be covered with mosquito netting when they are injured by insects.

Dates which tend to ferment and sour should be picked when a small translucent soft spot appears, and packed in wooden boxes in a storehouse to ripen. Many Imperial Valley growers lose large amounts of dates by allowing them to get too soft or ripe before picking and curing.

Cleaning dates may be accomplished satisfactorily by tacking a bath towel so as to line the inside of a barrel placing the barrel in a horizontal position with the dates in the center and rolling the barrel back and forth a few times which gives the dates a good cleaning and polishing.

Farm Adviser Hodgson of Los Angeles county has completed arrangements for the second annual series of deciduous pruning demonstrations, to begin November 13 and end November 24. Dr. J. C. Whitten, who gave great satisfaction last year, is again to be the demonstrator. The series will comprise fourteen demonstrations, to be given at all the deciduous fruit centers

UTAH SEASON OVER.

Frost has put an end to the growing season in Utah, according to a weather bureau report issued October 14. A large acreage of tomatoes was caught by the visit of the frost, and there is a heavy live stock movement to southern winter pastures. Weather is favorable for fruit picking, and digging of beets and potatoes.

Whey is worth about half as much as skim milk as feed for hogs.

WHY THE LIVE-STOCK RAISER SHOULD OWN A FARM TRACTOR.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

THERE is little question but that the raiser of live stock, the producer of meat and milk, can use a tractor to advantage on a smaller area than men who carry on other farming occupations.

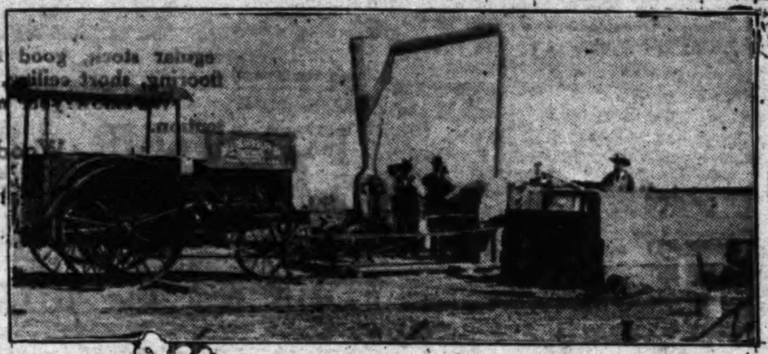
The tractor does farm work much more quickly than horses and mules. Thus the dairymen, hog raiser or beef cattle fattener has more time from ordinary farm operations to devote to care of his live stock if he has a machine that will plow, plant, cultivate and harvest in a little over half the time it takes with horses. Live-stock raising is a business that requires close application. The farmer who has dairy cows, hogs, beef cattle or sheep finds in the tractor a source of power which may be used between milking or feedings.

Especially does the dairyman find the tractor a great advantage in his operations. The time of a dairyman is valuable. The length of a day's work in the field is relatively short on the dairy farm. Therefore, a large power unit which will enable the owner of a string of dairy cows to do the field work more rapidly is very desirable. With a three-plow tractor a man can plow from eight to ten acres per day, or double disc from fifteen to twenty acres. By this means a dairyman keeps ahead of his work, is able to take advantage of seasonable conditions and is made more independent of the hired-help problem.

BELT WORK IMPORTANT.

But the greatest use of the tractor on the dairy farm, it would seem, is in filling the silo, grinding feed, threshing the grain and running the separator and milking machines, all belt operations to which most modern tractors are well adapted. If the dairy is of the average size, some source of power must be provided if operations are to be carried on at a profit. It is therefore simply a question of comparative power costs. The total yearly cost is vital when farm power is concerned. Illinois farmers who operated dairies last year kept a record of the yearly cost of their tractors for the University of Illinois, and it was found that the average cost of running a tractor on a dairy farm was $125 for a three-plow machine.

Another advantage of the tractor on the dairy farm—the feed which would ordinarily go to horses can be fed to advantage to the cows. In some cases, it is easy to see, this saving of valuable feed would be considerable.



Farm Tractor Belted to Feed Grinder.

The use of silos is becoming more general in Southern California, especially in the interior valleys where alfalfa is generally raised. Dairy farms are springing up here and there, and shortly after the establishment of this sort of a farm a concrete silo lifts itself toward the sky, then another one, and sometimes three. The dairyman then is confronted with the problem of getting his silage out and blown into the huge stacks. The majority of the modern dairymen choose the tractor because it is a handy source of power for all purposes.

When the dairy farm is small, and only "one string" of cows are milked, the owner finds he can raise and harvest his grain and fodder crops so necessary to the life of his business between milkings. He thus gives the lie to the old adage that a dairyman cannot find time to raise his own feed. With grain high and alfalfa from $28 to $35 per ton, the farmer who has one string of cows finds that he can double up on his work by using his tractor.

The swine raiser, too, is turning to the tractor as a source of ready help in lowering the cost of producing a pound of pork. Feed costs are vital in the hog business. If the hog raiser can produce his own alfalfa, barley, skim milk and other feeds, he has a great advantage over his neighbor who buys his feeds. The tractor helps the hog-raiser grow his own feed by doing work more quickly than the old-fashioned way.

GRINDS THE FEED.

It has been demonstrated that ground grain is far more profitable to feed to hogs than whole grain, and ground alfalfa is economical feed for it saves the pasture stand. Here is where the tractor belt comes in handy—running the feed grinder and alfalfa mill. California swine raisers have not been slow to see the great feed value of barley, which can be raised on lands dry farmed in this State, lands which will not profitably produce a crop of Indian corn. The tractor is used in three operations in barley culture—plowing, seeding, and running the combine harvester.

The raiser and fattener of beef cattle has the same problem of feed costs to contend with as has the dairyman and swine raiser, and appreciates as well the fact that the tractor raises the crop of fattening grain beween feeding times.

It is emphasized that the stock raiser and dairyman can select his machine with care, and hire his operator with no less judgment. The buying of a tractor and the hiring of an operator involves a relatively large outlay of capital and some little change in the system of farming. Such changes look appalling to some dairymen and cattle and hog men, and they call for careful consideration on the part of all men engaged in animal husbandry. But the tractor has been and is successful on dairy farms and cattle and hog ranches, and the possibilities for better work and reduced man hours must be well weighed.

The tractor is the outcome of a general tendency towards higher efficiency and economy in farm operations, manifested during the past two score years. Power machines, fewer man hours and reduced cost of production have made the American farmer supreme in the world today. The tractor is on the stock farm to stay, and its use is constantly increasing. When properly handled it has many advantages from the stockman's and dairyman's standpoint, and reduced costs of raising meat and milk will come with more general use of the tractor.

THE AUSTRALIAN WAY.

Efforts of various American interests to have set aside the embargo against apples from this country placed by the Australian government have been futile, and latest advices from there are to the effect that the embargo will be continued because it will be an aid to the Australian producer. At the same time Australia is asking the United States to purchase and consume liberal supplies of apples from that country during the period when American apples are high and the growers here are getting the benefit of the lessened supply.

KEEPING UP THE DECIDUOUS TREES.

HEMET.—According to Farm Adviser Hodgson of the Los Angeles Farm Bureau, who spoke here recently to a large audience of deciduous fruit growers, the problem of preventing the decline and deterioration of deciduous fruit trees is the greatest problem this district has to face. The principal underlying reason for the danger, he stated, was the depletion of the soil.

"In order to conserve the moisture in the soil," says Mr. Hodgson, "it is necessary to cultivate frequently during the summer months and this has an undesirable result in exposing the organic matter in the soil to the sun, which burns it and destroys its usefulness to the trees. The best way in which this can be met is by the use of cover crops, such as are now used by the growers of citrus fruits. If the soil is not to become depleted cover cropping must become universal as in the citrus regions."

In regard to the best cover crop, Mr. Hodgson was of the opinion that it depends largely upon the kind of soil. Melolotus Indica' gives the best results in some sections, he said, while purple vetch seems to be more beneficial in others. Melilotus, however, seems to have a wider adaptation than any other cover crop, as it can be grown successfully and luxuriantly almost anywhere in this section.

One cause of deterioration in deciduous orchards, according to Mr. Hodgson, is wood rot, caused in the tree by unskillful pruning, or too close cultivating, leaving wounds through which fungi enter the tree. He advised the prompt application of asphaltum paint to all bark abrasions, including the cuts made in pruning, as soon as possible.

Sun scald was mentioned as another prolific cause of deterioration. The difference between the day and night temperature in Southern California often results in a bark-bound condition, weakening to the trees and laying them liable to attacks from borers. White washing the trees has been found an effective treatment for this condition.

Mr. Hodgson pointed out that deciduous trees, in California, do not have the dormant season enjoyed by such trees in cold countries, this putting a great strain on the tree. This rest can in a way be supplied by withholding irrigation to some extent in the summer months. It is possible to lengthen the life of the deciduous tree by efficient soil building, proper fertilization and rational pruning.

When pasture is gone, feeding alfalfa hay in racks is a good plan in raising brood sows. Feed cattle and sheep the coarse stems left in the rack.

COW TESTING WORK PROVING ITS VALUE.

The best scientific agency for isolating and eradicating the drone cows from the dairy herd is milk testing. Reports received by a Federal agency from various cow testing associations throughout the country show the value of this work. Cow testing is a means also of detecting the best producers in the herd, and is a method of increasing the net earnings of the dairy.

One eastern cow-testing association, whose members owned 385 cows last year, reports an association average of 345 pounds of butter fat per cow, and that the present production of the cows is seventy-two pounds of fat more apiece than it was at the first of the year.

Another cow-testing association announces that its expenses during the last five years have been below $4000 while the value of the increased production during only the last year has aggregated $11,000.

DAIRY CATTLE EXHIBITS THE GREATEST IN SOUTH'S ANNALS.

By F. H. Scribner, Dairy Cattle Expert of Los Angeles County Farm Bureau.

NEVER before in the history of Southern California has such an aggregation of dairy cattle been brought together as was assembled at the Los Angeles Live-stock Show October 18-26. The facilities of the show were taxed almost to the limit to prepare accommodations for them. Two hundred and fifty entries were made of dairy cattle alone, being divided as follows:

Holstein-Friesian, 106 head, with ten exhibitors; fifty Jerseys, with seven exhibitors; thirty-nine Guernseys, with three exhibitors; thirty-nine Ayrshires, with three exhibitors; four dairy Shorthorns, one exhibitor, and eight Dutch Belted, one exhibitor.

The judges had been selected with great care and were men of national reputation. The judge for the Holsteins was John Irwin of Minneapolis, Minn., who has one of the best herds of Holsteins in the Middle West, and who owned and developed Dutchess Skylark Ormsby, the cow making the greatest yearly production of butter fat of any cow in the world. Judge Irwin's decisions, needless to say, were accepted generally as authoritative.

Los Angeles county did herself proud in the Holstein classes, capturing over two-thirds of all the blue ribbons in the open classes, and romping away with nearly all the champion and grand champion honors. The judge remarked on Wednesday evening at the Holstein banquet, that a great many of the individuals that were shown would be "in the money" at the great National Dairy Show at Chicago.

SOME GREAT HOLSTEINS.

The great bull, Merci Lad Korndyke Burke at the head of the Anita Baldwin herd was such a massive fellow, with such great depth and constitution and quality that he was easily placed first in his class, but when the young bull from the George Junior Republic, also placed first in class, came in competition for grand championship, it looked for a time as though the young fellow might win. It would not have been a bad guess if he had been placed ahead, as he had a wonderful carriage and is really of the more modern type that is winning at the big shows.

The senior yearling bull of the Burr farm, a bull of great handling qualities and masculine appearance, was placed junior champion, over the Arizona junior yearling, and senior calf, and also over Jeffries's junior calf.

In the aged cow class, Topsy Clothilde Hengerveld of the Burr farm carried away the honors. She is a cow of great depth, spring of rib and with lots of quality and Holstein characteristics, but she had to give way to the young Burr farm cow, Bessie Segis Pontiac 2nd. The latter being fresh and in splendid bloom, was given the grand champion honors over all females.

The young stuff that Jim Jeffries showed was quite a marvel to him, as he entered but eleven head of young things, all sired by King Segis Pontiac Jannek and carried away twelve ribbons of which five were firsts. H. A. Koch, the herdsman, did a good job in growing out and putting on the finish for the show, and if this fair did nothing else than to get Jim "woke up" to the class of his own stuff, it certainly was worth while.

THE JERSEY SECTION.

Ed Cary, a prominent breeder of Jerseys in Oregon, tied the ribbons on the Jerseys. Jolly Senator Raleigh, the three-year-old bull of J. E. Thorp, Lockeford, which was grand champion at the State Fair, also received the same honors here, and Grant Brown's young bull, which was first at Riverside, had to be content with third place.

In the aged cow class, Grant Brown's Shy Lady Viola was an easy winner, having more real Jersey character than any of her competitors, and beat out the Salome cow of Mr. Thorp, who has been first cow at the State Fair for two years. Some very classy young heifers were shown making a very interesting exhibit.

THE CLASSY GUERNSEY.

In the Guernsey classes, the Dupee herd quite outdistanced everything, and well they might as they were just back from the National where they captured 70 per cent. of all the prizes offered. The little herd of Mr. Humphrey of Escalon, Cal., never showed in such fine condition before, but the pace here was a little too strong for him.

The great Dupee show bull, Itchen May King, is still in show shape, and I believe, a little better than ever, as some of his surplus flesh has been taken off and he shows up his dairy qualities much better. Mr. Dupee can well be proud of his excellent herd.

THE AYRSHIRES.

The one full herd of Ayrshires, owned by J. Henry Meyer of Watsonville, attracted a great deal of attention and the only competition was given by three young heifers from the university farm. The State Fair grand champion cow, Highland Ithan, placed first, was easily entitled to the place for Ayrshire type, both for her capacious udder and general conformation, although I believe Curfew Bell 3rd, a little more plain matron, might be a hot contender at the milk pail. A number of the young things were well up in their classes and will surely be heard from in the future.

The Dairy Show, take it all around, was not only interesting to those who were lookers on, but was an education, as in nearly every case the judges gave their reasons for placing. I believe this is a feature that can well be emphasized because if a fair is not educational, it has lost sight of the object for which fairs are held. I think there is no question in the minds of those who had this Live-stock Show in charge, but that the success of the show decides the permanence of this annual event and will make it second to no other show in the State.

IMMENSE YIELD OF NEW ZEALAND SPINACH.

It appears that the popularity of New Zealand spinach is growing, chiefly because of the immense yield of green feed which can be cut for the table and for poultry and other animals. One seed of this variety of greens has produced more than fifty pounds of succulent food. Two or three plants are enough to supply a family and a half dozen chickens, and where more poultry are kept, a dozen plants provide feed for the fowls and for the family. The spinach is cut when needed.

One New Zealand spinach plant grown by A. E. Buell, 517 East Forty-seventh street, Los Angeles, has produced more than half a hundred weight of greens. Mr. Buell cuts the amount of greens needed for his table or his hens, and the plant keeps on producing. It is now two years old and seems not to be affected by light frosts. A heavy frost may kill the part above ground, but a new growth springs up after a few weeks.

This spinach may be planted in October It is slow in getting a start, and may not do well until spring.

LACTEIN
CONDENSED BUTTERMILK
FOR HOGS AND POULTRY

Buttermilk Is Nature's Food and Tonic

It is nature's first ration. Lactein is the concentrate of buttermilk after removing the butter fat, casein and water.

It contains all the health giving food and tonic values of the original buttermilk without the useless bulk of water. On account of its high lactic acid content it will keep almost indefinitely.

Lactein is now recognized as one of the most necessary food digestive agents known for both growing hogs and poultry, due to the large amount of lactic acid it contains. The lactic acid aids digestion and assimilation, causing the hog or fowl to digest all the good from the grains given them to eat, and to eliminate all the dead and disease matter from the digestive organs, thereby promoting growth and preventing disease. Lactic acid is considered the best tonic, appetizer, liver and bowel regulator known for hogs and poultry.

COSTS LESS THAN 2c PER GALLON TO FEED

One gallon of Lactein mixed with thirty gallons of water and fed with the usual grain feed will show greater gains than from feeding the grain alone, besides it will keep the hogs and poultry healthy and their appetites keen.

You can buy it from your local dealers. Phone or write for the name of your nearest dealer.

THE FARM TRUCK AND THE FARM TRACTOR.

BY H. A. CRA-TS.

Come to think of it the truck is an important agricultural adjunct.

The tractor, of course, is the more essential of the two; but where a farmer is financially able to have both the truck will be found a good second to the tractor.

The truck implies transportation almost exclusively. The tractor may not only do the plowing, but it may do the transporting.

But the tractor is the slower machine of the two, and it is doubtless true that it is not fast enough to do all of the transporting as rapidly as it should be done.

For the hauling of large quantities of non-perishable produce to warehouse, railroad or market the tractor, with a proper addition of trailers, is capable of excellent service.

But in the gathering of unthreshed, and non-threshable crops in field, orchard or vineyard the motor truck comes into better play.

The other day I saw the illustration of a motor truck surmounted by a big rack being loaded in the field with loose hay.

Here appears to be a good example of the excellent utility of the truck on the farm.

Take California's great line of orchards and vineyards and we see most excellent opportunities for demonstrating the extreme usefulness of the farm truck.

The gathering, processing, storing and marketing of the immense harvests from these sources require easy and rapid transportation.

In the handling of green fruits and fresh vegetables the truck may be found the best adapted vehicle that could be imagined.

The dairymen and poultry raisers have found in the truck the very best vehicle that could be conceived for their business.

The small dairyman, farmer, orchardist or gardener has access to the transformed automobile for use in transporting their products.

Now in discussion of either farm truck or farm tractors the proper constitution of tops, bodies, racks, hitches and trailers becomes an important consideration, in that the vehicle itself may perform its best functions with no vital waste of either time or power.

But these are questions that gradually settle themselves by use, suggestion and experimentation.

THE TRACTOR AS A LOCOMOTIVE.

The farm tractor as a locomotive for the pulling of heavy loads over rough, broken or hilly country is a success. Its low formation, grip on the tread and great power are the things that turn the trick. One California farmer pays the following tribute to his tractor as a locomotive:

"It certainly walks along and pulls an almighty heavy load. The fact that it travels much faster than horses is a big factor in totaling up a big day's work."

Another has the following to say:

"I have pulled a number of heavy loads with this tractor over hilly country which would seem prohibitive. There were places on the hills where I, of course, went into low, but it took a mighty steep grade to make it necessary to shift gears."

GOOD STOCK SHOWING AT TULARE'S FAIR.

TULARE.—Growth of interest in pure-bred stock and poultry, which was exemplified in exhibits by more than two hundred individuals, was indicated by the showing at the Tulare County Live-stock and Agricultural Show, which was held here two weeks ago under general direction of the officials of the Tulare Board of Trade.

Excellence was particularly evident in the Holstein sections of the cattle show, where, competent judges stated, the animals shown ranked with those of the State fair and the shows of Northern and Southern California. An equal standard was set in the swine classes, and in the poultry exhibit many of the pens were of national-show class.

H. E. Vogel and W. J. Higdon carried off the honors of the Holstein section, with R. F. Guerin, R. C. Sturgeon and T. J. Gist, all local breeders, placed among the prize winners.

A. A. Jenkins's herd of Jerseys took practically all the prizes in that class. Charles Weaver had the only herd of Durham Shorthorns, an exhibit which attracted considerable attention because of its novelty.

Poland-Chinas and Duroc-Jerseys had the call in the swine section. J. N. Chinowith, W. J. Fulgham and Sons and R. C. Sturgeon led in the prize winners in this class

In the poultry show interest was divided among the Reds, Barred Rocks, White Leghorns, Black Minorcas, White Rocks, Anconas and Light Brahmas, with a large number of high-class pens in each class. Kingsburg exhibitors—N. Forney and Raymond Nelson—carried off the Leghorn honors. Mrs. W. H. Cook of this place took practically every first and second prize in the Barred Rock classes.

Attendance at the show was better than was anticipated, and the reports from the financial department indicate all bills will be paid with a small surplus remaining in the treasury.

OFFERS FORMULA FOR ANT CONTROL.

ALHAMBRA.—Russel Woglum of the Subtropical laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture in Alhambra advocates the use of the following poison syrup, known as the Barber formula, in combating the ant pest:

Twelve pounds of granulated cane sugar, ten pints of distilled water, one-quarter ounce crystalized tartaric acid, distilled water. Boil the above mixture thirty minutes and cool. Add enough distilled water to allow for evaporation. Dissolve three-quarters of an ounce of sodium arsenite, using only the chemically pure, in one pint of distilled water. Boil and cool. Then add to the above two pounds of strained honey. Stir thoroughly.

This poison, he says, should be used persistently in places frequented by ants. Two-ounce spice tins, or one-quarter ounce paper bags can be used. The latter should be prepared as follows: Punch a one-quarter inch hole near the top, then dip completely in melted parafin to prevent leaking. Place about a dozen long strands of excelsior in each tin or sack, and an inch or an inch and a half of the syrup put in. They are then ready for distribution. They should be placed wherever there are trails of ants, and should be shifted as the trails change.

The poison syrup can be obtained from a drug store, but care must be used in ordering it that technical sodium arsenite is not substituted for chemically pure.

SAN FRANCISCO SHOW.

Federal and State agencies have co-operated in the assembling of the dairy exhibits at the California International Live Stock Show to be held in the California Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition grounds at San Francisco, November 1 to 8, according to the announcement of Prof. H. True, who is on leave of absence from the University of California to manage the show. F. Lamson Scribner, expert on exhibits of the United States Department of Agriculture, has had the government exhibit at the National Dairy Show at Chicago shipped to the San Francisco show. This deals largely with the Bureau of Animal Industry's educational work in encouraging better dairy herds and better dairy practice. Tillie Alcartra, the world's champion milk cow, will attend the show from the Morris herd at Woodland, Cal., and Vive La France, the world's champion Jersey cow from Oregon, will be shown. The showing of dairy cattle will be one of the large sections of the live-stock department.

WOMAN TAKES GRAND CHAMPION HONORS.

The Poland China exhibit did not equal some of the other exhibits in size, but what it lacked in numbers it made up in quality. The showing made by M. and A. L. Bassett of Hanford was very high class, and was the largest made by any one exhibitor. The Bassetts won all the championship honors except senior champion boar and grand champion boar, which were awarded to Viola L. Renwick of Santa Barbara, on her El Profito. This boar is an outstanding individual, having both great size and a world of quality. He has a fine arched back, heavy bone and is well up on his feet. C. R. Doty, of Charleston, Ill., tied the ribbons in the Poland-China section.

FINE SHOWING OF HAMPSHIRES.

The Hampshire swine exhibit at the Los Angeles Live-stock Show was the largest and best held in California this year, or in fact, any year, and in both size and quality would have done credit to any show in the United States. The latter statement is vouched for by E. R. Doty of Charleston, Ill., who tied the ribbons. It was the second largest exhibit of swine on the grounds.

The Fairbanks Ranch of Redlands won grand championship boar honors on Harvey's Choice, which was also the Riverside Fair grand champion. He is an excellent individual, with a strong well-arched back, heavy bone and good feet. He is a credit to the Llano Vista Ranch, which bred him, and to Mr. Harvey, manager of Fairbanks Ranch, who selected him as a pig and has been responsible for his development. The Conejo Ranch of Newbury Park had a large exhibit of very high-class animals, and took grand champion sow on Florine II. C. J. Gilbert of Lancaster had many outstanding animals. His sow, Wavelet, which won reserve senior championship honors, is one of the great Hampshire sows of the Coast.

L. A. Denker of Saugus came back strong this year, and carried home three purple ribbons, as well as a large number of blues and reds. The only exhibitor from outside the State was Roy E. Fisher of Lincoln, Neb., who showed the reserve junior champion sow.

SHEEP EXHIBIT SMALL, BUT HIGH CLASS.

The sheep exhibit was small, but of very high class throughout. The University of California had an exceptionally fine showing of Shropshire, Rambouillet, Hampshire and Southdown sheep, and won every prize in the fat-sheep classes. The Calla Grove Farm of Manteca, Cal., showed some exceptionally fine Hampshire sheep, and shared with the university in the firsts. C. R. Doty of Charleston, Ill., tied the ribbons.

at the Liberty Fair, was back again with his beef animals. Congdon & Battles's herd of Aberdeen-Angus beef cattle, whose home is at Yakima, Wash., included Los Angeles in an itinerary which covers the principal live-stock sections of the Pacific Coast. From here the herd goes to San Francisco, then to Portland, Denver and the National Live-stock Exposition at Chicago in December before returning home. J. E. Thorpe of Lockford, Cal., known as one of the West's greatest breeders of Jerseys, exhibited sixteen excellent animals, coming here from the Sacramento show. Frank Reed Sanders of Phoenix, Ariz., brought Holsteins, Jerseys and Dutch Belted cattle to compete at the Los Angeles show.

The Shorthorn cattle and Clydesdale horses of the estate of Thomas B. Dibblee of Santa Barbara, came with their State Fair laurels to Los Angeles, as did also the Shorthorns of T. S. Glide of Davis, the horses of the Merritt-Powers Company of Tulare, the Shorthorns of the Pacheco Cattle Company of Hollister, the Ayrshires of J. Henry Meyer of Watsonville, the Guernseys of A. B. Humphrey, and the horses of James Marwich of Santa Barbara and O. H. Brandt of Shellville. The swine sections drew from other parts of the State and country the herds of A. B. Humphrey of Escalon, J. Francis O'Connor of Santa Rosa, M. and A. L. Bassett of Hanford, Roy E. Fisher of Lincoln, Neb., C. T. Thompson of Bishop and J. E. Thorp of Lockeford. The Calla Grove farm of Manteca sent down some of its fine sheep. One of the exhibits most appreciated by everybody was the excellent collection of sheep, cattle and hogs sent to the show by the University of California.

SOUTH'S GREAT SHOWING

The wonderful showing made by the Southern California entries in the various classes against the great exhibits from outside is a source of great satisfaction to breeders in this part of the State, for the Southland won its full share of awards, large and small, in the highest class competition ever seen in this part of the country.

The complimentary comments on the Southern California stock made by the various judges (all of whom were brought in from other sections of the country) also served as a great encouragement to the great movement for more and better live stock now going ahead in this part of the State.

The officers responsible for the success of this year's exhibition are: E. W. Murphy, president; C. R. Thomas, secretary; Clinton E. Miller, first vice-president; Walter P. Story, second vice-president; Irving Hellman, treasurer; directors, Fred H. Bixby, Harold Braly, George M. Brown, Harry Chandler, L. M. Cole, Irving Hellman, Charles H. Hill, W. I. Hollingsworth, H. A. Jastro, F. E. Lewis II, Clinton E. Miller, E. W. Murphy, Walter M. Ross, Frank Simpson, Walter P. Story, Frank Wiggins, H. P. Woodill; executive committee, Fred H. Bixby, Charles H. Hill, Frank Wiggins, Harold Braly, H. A. Jastro.

FIVE SHORTHORN HERDS ON DISPLAY.

Five Shorthorn herds were exhibited at the Los Angeles Live-stock Show and the excellence of the exhibit can best be expressed by saying it was "fast company." Judge Frank Brown of Carleton, Or., who made the awards, is considered one of the best shorthorn judges in the United States. The showing made by the Thomas B. Dibblee estate of Santa Barbara was one of exceptional merit. Their young bull, Bashan Augusta, is one of the outstanding young bulls of America. He was junior champion and grand champion bull of both the Los Angeles Live-stock Show and the 1919 California State Fair. Their aged bull, Hallwood Flash, took reserve grand champion.

T. S. Glide of Davis had a wonderful showing of females and won senior champion, junior champion, grand champion and reserve grand champion ribbons in the female classes. Little Sweetheart, grand champion cow, took similar honors at the State Fair.

F. L. Hall of Perris had several head of good males and females. The only exhibitor from outside the State was William Henn of Kansas City. The reserve junior heifer, White Pacheco, shown by the Pacheco Cattle Company of Hollister, Cal., is worthy of special mention.

HEREFORDS COME FAR TO SHOW.

The Hereford exhibit was one of the best ever seen in this section of the State. The two largest exhibitors were from outside California. The Hereford Corporation of Cheyenne, Wyo., had a large exhibit of high quality, and Will Henn of Kansas City exhibited a number of outstanding animals. D. H. Ogden of Alpine, Cal., and the Conejo ranch of Newbury Park were the only exhibitors from this State. The ribbons were placed by Wallis Good of Kansas City, who for many years has been a producer of range and breeding animals. The Hereford Corporation's Miss Rialto 2nd, named grand champion cow, took similar honors at the Liberty Fair, last year.

DUROC DISPLAY RIVAL OF BEST.

It was conceded by all swine authorities at the show that the Duroc exhibit at the Los Angeles event was the best ever seen on the Pacific Coast, and a worthy rival to the exhibits held in the Middle Western States, where the leading Duroc breeders have their strongholds. The aged sow class probably was not surpassed in any show ring in the United States, not even excepting the National Farm Show, held recently at Des Moines, Iowa. The Winsor ranch's great old matron, Model Defender Lady, grand champion at Sacramento and Riverside, won first in her class, and was made grand champion Duroc of the show. She had worthy contestants in Grand Lady 66th, owned by Conejo Ranch; Critic's Rose, shown by the Diamond Bar Ranch; Bonnie Jean Again, owned by the Falfadale Farm, and Defender's Ohio Maid, owned by W. Moore of Fallbrook. All are of such high class that any one might easily have been placed first without fear of undue criticism.

The Diamond Bar Ranch of Spadra had a wonderful exhibit, and won the silver cup given by the American Duroc Association for the best showing of Duroc swine. The Conejo Ranch had an exhibition which attracted a great deal of attention from all spectators, both expert and casual observers. The Winsor Ranch of Bonita, Cal., had a large exhibit, and won a number of ribbons. The Falfadale Farm of Perris had a small exhibit, but what they lacked in numbers they made up in quality, winning junior and reserve grand championship honors on their outstanding young boar, Great Orion Sensation, Jr. Ace of Pathfinders, owned by the Diamond Bar Ranch, won senior champion and grand champion honors, and is a boar of outstanding individuality.

The only exhibitor from outside the State was Roy E. Fisher of Lincoln, Neb., who had a very strong exhibit of high-class animals. E. J. Barker of Thorntown, Ind., placed the awards, his many years' experience as breeder of Berkshire swine having fitted him as an excellent swine judge.

GOOD BERKSHIRES FROM NORTH.

The Berkshire exhibit was strong, both in numbers and in excellence of individuals. Two of the well-known breeders from the northern part of the State, A. B. Humphrey of Escalon, and J. Francis O'Connor of Santa Rosa, brought down their show herds, and incidentally took home with them all but one of the purple ribbons. This was awarded to the Italian Vineyard Company of Guasti, and represented the reserve senior champion boar honors, which were awarded to Choice Goods, 10th. Mr. Humphrey took grand champion boar on Grape Wild Emblem.

The grand champion sow, Castleview Premier Belle, shown by J. F. O'Connor, is probably one of the best Berkshire sows in the State. She won junior championship honors at the State Fair, and in the Berkshire sale which followed the Los Angeles showing she was sold for $510, to F. L. Hall of Perris. Mr. Hall had a small, but select showing, and won many prizes, especially in the boar classes. The ribbons were tied by E. J. Barker of Thornton, Ind.

GOOD EXHIBITION IN THE HORSE CLASSES.

BY G. E. GORDON.

The Los Angeles Live-stock Show had one of the best exhibits of horses ever seen in the State. The heavy horse classes were comprised of the Percheron, Belgian, Shire and Clydesdale breeds. The Percheron classes appeared to be the most popular to judge by the number of exhibitors and the number of entries in the various classes. The Merritt-Bowers Company of Tulare had the largest number of horse entries, while Hall Bros. of Perris, Fred Bixby of Long Beach, James Marwich of Santa Barbara and the Dibblee estate of Santa Barbara were all well represented.

The Percheron is a Fernch breed of horses and is very popular in this country on account of its strength and good moving qualities. In the Belgian classes, Merrit & Bowers were the only exhibitors and although there was no competition in most classes, some very fine animals were shown. A feature of this exhibit was the showing of three brothers all from the same mare. The Belgian, as the name indciates, is a native of Belgium and has been developed to do especially heavy work. They are very strong in constitution and have much endurance. They are hardy and can handle rough feed at a greater advantage than the other breeds. They also mature quite early and in Belgium farmers make a practice of working the yearling colts. There are less than 200 registered Belgians in Belgium at the present time, while there are probably between 1500 and 2000 in this country.

In the Shire classes, the Merritt-Bower Company and Fred H. Bixby were in competition. The Shire is an English breed of horses and is noted for its strength and compactness. It is similar in type and size to the Belgian.

The Clydesdale breed was represented, by the exhibits of O. H. Brandt and the Thomas B. Biblee estate. Some excellent individuals were shown in these classes. The Clydesdale has been developed in Scotland from the same original material the English used in developing the Shire. It takes its name from the Clyde River in Scotland, in the valley of which it has been developed. It is noted especially for the high quality of the legs, pasterns and feet and the way the horse moves.

The Merritt-Bowers Company's exhibit of horses took up one whole barn and received many favorable comments.

There were several exhibitors of saddle horses, but the extensive exhibit of Revel Lindsay English of Chino excited the most comment. The Merritt-Bowers Company showed a team of four mules which has won first prize at the State fairs of both Oregon and California, and at all of the county fairs in the two States where they have been exhibited.

Disturber, Champion Jack, Los Angeles Livestock Show, Fred H. Bixby, Long Beach, Exhibitor.

BREEDERS OF HORSES MEET AND ORGANIZE.

One of the greatest results of the Live Stock Show was the getting together for organization of horse breeders of the State, an action accomplished during the fourth day of the show, after earnest efforts by Ed R. Smith and H. A. Jastro of Bakersfield. The object of the association is, of course, to prpmote the breeding of more and better horses, both saddle and draft.

The new organization was termed the California Horse Breeders' Association, and headquarters is to be in Santa Barbara. The officers are: president, Tom Hughes; first vice-president, Anita M. Baldwin; second vice-president, L. J. Christopher; third vice-president, H. A. Jastro; treasurer, T. H. Dudley; secretary, Ed R. Smith. Other directors are: Clarence Berry, San Francisco; C. W. Bowers, Tulare; R. L. English, Chino; M. L. Way, Fresno; W. G. Durfee, Los Angeles; Charles Donlin, Hueneme; James Montreich, Santa Rosa; W. H. Bowker, Los Angeles; Fred H. Bixby, Long Beach; Charles F. Silva, Sacramento; Tom Clark, Ventura; George R. Reutel, Los Angeles; F. E. Lewis II, Spadra; I. L. Bordon, San Francisco; Tom Mason, Santa Barbara; C. F. Payne, Sacramento; Fred E. Ward, Hemet; John Troop, Santa Barbara; S. E. Bragg, Calexico; J. E. Montgomery, Davis; W. H. Taylor, Santa Anita.

VALUE OF CLEANLY QUARTERS EMPHASIZED.

A well-arranged exhibit was installed by the State Department of Agriculture at the Live Stock Show for the purpose of educating the public and the stockmen to the value of cleanliness in handling milk and meat, and in the inspection of meat. James B. Newsome, head of the bureau of animal industry of the department, had a corps of assistants explaining the several exhibits.

Inspection of dairies and dairy products is one of the functions of this division, and the work of the bacteria where conditions in dairies were not sanitary was illustrated by cultures. Dirty water, dirty bottles, cow's hair, dirty hay, all develop millions of harmful bacteria and the division's exhibits drove the lessons of cleanliness home.

Miniature corrals for the dipping of cattle and sheep for tick, scab and other diseases were displayed. Tubercular lesions in cuts of beef, pork and mutton were exhibited in a refrigerated case, showing the evils of non-inspection. The cattle branding the law was explained to all interested. This law requires inspection of cattle and their brands before shipment.

WHOLE COWS' MILK FOR ORPHAN PIGS.

If, because of the death of the sow after farrowing or for any other reason, it is necessary to hand feed the young pigs, whole cows' milk probably forms the best nutriment, and this should be fed as fresh as possible.

Feed the pigs often, six or eight times a day, if possible, and decrease until, when the pigs are about five to eight weeks old, they may be fed three or four times a day. If the pigs will not feed from a trough, use a bottle, and place milk before them between feedings, in a trough. Allow, in addition to the milk, a little soaked grain, getting the pigs started on it as quickly as possible, and a little later get the pigs started on both grain and tankage. Sow's milk is richer in sugar and butter fat than cows' milk, but it has been found not advisable to enrich the milk by the addition of sugar and cream, as this causes souring.

Salt should be available for cattle and hogs at all times, or given once or twice a week. Feeding salt with charcoal mixture is a good plan.

SWINE DISPLAY WORTHY OF BEST SHOWS OF THE "CORN AND HOG BELT"

By C. R. Doty, Charleston, Ill., Judge of Hampshire and Poland China Swine, Los Angeles Livestock Show.

IF THE author of "Pigs Is Pigs" should write his story now he doubtless would revise it quite a bit, especially if he had been lucky enough to visit the swine exhibit of the Los Angeles exhibition just closed and privileged to hear the inside facts as to the weights and values, which at times rose to dizzy heights. It was a good place to get some idea of why our pork products get more scarce on the dining-room table. To the writer, who was judge of some of the classes, I am very frank to say the display was truly marvelous, ranking with the best shows of the East where corn and hogs are supposed to be supreme.

It is a source of constant wonder to the eastern visitor to wander through California's wonderful orchards of orange and lemon, peach and plum, prune, almond and walnut, but a visit to the barns and stables of the Los Angeles Live-stock Show was a strong reminder of scenes back home.

The exhibit of swine was the largest in point of numbers of any division of the live-stock department and was represented by six breeds, the Duroc-Jerseys, Hampshires, Berksnires, Poland Chinas, Spotted Polands and Chester Whites.

The Durco-Jerseys were most numerous and represented such fashionable family names as Defenders, Orions, Cherry Kings, Pathfinders, Great Wonders, Sensations, Ganos and numerous others, to the common layman so much Greek, but to the Duroc-Jersey swine breeder, representing knowledge indispensable to success. Many of the individuals of this breed were truly wonderful and every class was hotly contested.

The Hampshires, next in numbers, while comparatively a new breed, are backed by a real live lot of breeders and are making a splendid showing. Their peculiar white markings, a white belt running around the body, make them attractive and conspicuous. Competition in this breed was keen between California bred and eastern imported animals, with honors fairly even.

The Berkshire, an old established English breed, was well represented, mostly by California breeders and presented a good exhibit of high merit. Mr. Barker, judge of this breed, made some very complimentary remarks in general, especially noting particular individuals. The grand champion sow, a senior pig, was particularly singled out for commendation.

The show of Poland Chinas, while not large, was of a high class, the majority of the ribbons going to the veteran breeder Mr. Bassett. Mrs. Renwick of Santa Barbara had the grand champion boar, while Mr. Newton of Los Angeles had a very creditable lot on display. The Anita Baldwin ranch had four head of extra fancy animals newly imported from the East, but these were not shown for prizes.

The Spotted Polands, a brand new breed, or, to be exact, a revival of the old Spotted Poland Chinas, were represented by seven splendid young animals belonging to Mr. Montgomery in the northern part of the State. As no seperate class had been provided for these, ribbons only were given them.

The University of California showed one lone Chester White, a very excellent specimen and well worthy of strong competition.

Taken as a whole the swine show was a revelation to the show visitors, one of the chief attractions in the live-stock department, and must have been a source of pride to the officers of the second Los Angeles Live-stock Show.

RANCH EXHIBIT A CENTER OF INTEREST.

The largest and to many visitors the most interesting exhibit of the Los Angeles Live Stock Show was that of Anita M. Baldwin, owner of the Santa Anita Ranch of Santa Anita. The fine animals of this ranch were housed in a large building of their own, built especially for the event and painted in the red and black that have been the colors of the Baldwin estate ever since the days of E. J. Baldwin and his world-famous Derby winners. The Santa Anita Ranch of today is famed as of old for its horses, but has been converted by its present owner into a general stock farm on which are to be found bluebloods of a number of kinds of live-stock. Of these there was a splendid representation at the show.

One half of the Baldwin pavilion was given over to the Holstein aristocrats of the Santa Anita and to an exhibit of fine Poland-China hogs, the other to horses, Jacks and mules. The cattle were the only animals entered in competition in the show, the rest being on exhibition only. The Santa Anita Holsteins were well represented in the awards for this class, the herd bull, Merci Lad Korndyke Burke, taking grand championship.

The great number of horsemen drawn to the show by the racing and other horse events were deeply interested in a display of silver plated horseshoes worn by famous racers of the Baldwin stables and exhibited in a large glass cabinet in the ranch building. In the collection were fifty or more shoes, including those worn by such wonderful horses as Volante, Silver Cloud, Emperor of Norfolk and Rey El Santa Anita, representing a generation of Baldwin Derby winners. The display also contained cups won by jumpers and polo horses, cups and ribbons won by the Santa Anita stock at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition and other trophies, including a bronze horse awarded by the French government for the ten best Percherons at the San Francisco fair.

The horses on exhibition were Althazar, Jusque, Arsar, Belzar, Deanzar, Manzar and Mejus, Percheron stallions; Kentry, Livie, Oaklawn Queen, Lycelle and Maona, Percheron mares, the first three named having colts at their feet; Mahruz, Arabian stallion; Nejdme III. Arabian mare, with colt; Adalid, thoroughbred stallion; Reina de Santa Anita, thoroughbred mare; Donna, Kentucky saddle mare; Allah, saddle horse gelding; Mahdanas and Mahnell, Arabian thoroughbred cross stallions; King Bersheba, Jack, and two other 2-year-old Jacks; two mules. One of the mules, Shebo, foaled May 13, 1919, by King Bersheba out of a Percheron mare, Daisy Dean, was of remarkable size for his age.

The cattle numbered eighteen and included besides the bulls Merci Lad Korndyke Burke and Prince Walker Cornucopia and the cows May Altoona Pontiac and Anoakia Cornucopia Walker, a number of junior and senior calves.

PEPPERMINT OIL CROP.

Peppermint for oil is produced in Michigan and Indiana. The crop of 1919 has the estimate of 300,000 pounds of oil from 10,000 acres and marks another step in the continuous decline from 600,000 pounds from 18,000 acres in 1914. The average yield is about thirty pounds of oil per acre.

In the Congdon & Battles herd of Aberdeen-Angus cattle, from Yakima, Wash., Judge Frank Brown of Carleton, Or., found some exceptionally good animals to pass upon. The fat cattle section attracted three exhibitors and the "beef cattle—car lot" division a like number of entries. In the latter section first prize went to the Kern County Land Company of Bakersfield on a carload of Shorthorn steers, second to the Merritt-Bowers Company of Tulare on a car of Shorthorn heifers, and third to Fred H. Bixby of Long Beach on a carload of Hereford steers. The prizes were offered by Wilson & Co., the Hauser Packing Company, the Cudahy Packing Company, the California Dressed Beef Company, the Woodward-Bennett Company, the Standard Packing Company and the Newmarket Company of Los Angeles. The winner also received a silver cup from the American Shorthorn Cattle Breeders' Association. In the fat cattle division champion [illegible] Ericman C. HOLSTEINS SHOW REAL CLASS.

There were over 100 head of registered Holstein cattle in the competitive exhibit, which rivaled both in number and quality the exhibit at the California State Fair, held recently in Sacramento. John B. Irwin of Minneapolis, who is conceded to be one of the greatest breeders of Holstein cattle in the world, tied the ribbons. Mr. Irwin was greatly impressed with the high quality of the Holsteins shown, and stated that many of them, particularly in the younger classes, would be worthy contestants in any show in the United States, not excepting the National Dairy Show.

Grand championship honors on males was awarded to Merci Lad Korndyke Burke, owned by Anita M. Baldwin. The grand champion female of the show was Bessie Segis Pontiac II, owned by the Burr Farm of Los Angeles. Another animal worthy of particular mention is Duchess Ormsby Sadie Vale, owned by the Burr Farm. She is not yet 2 years old, but shows wonderful udder development and is an exceptionally typy individual throughout. The reserve senior champion bull, Dichter Spofford Korndyke Lad, owned by the California George Junior Republic, is an outstanding individual, and will no doubt be heard from at next year's shows. Frank Reed Sanders of Chandler, Ariz., had a large exhibit of Holsteins of exceptionally fine type, and was awarded a large number of ribbons, including that for reserve grand champion bull on King Elmora Segis Pontiac. The Burr Farm of Los Angeles made a wonderful showing, winning six out of the twelve championship ribbons awarded.

James J. Jeffries had a unique exhibit, in that all of the animals shown were the offspring of his noted herd sire, King Segis Pontiac Jennek, and all under 2 years of age. They were heavy winners in their respective classes, and won first prize honors as young herd, calf herd and get of sire. The showing made by A. J. Stalder of Riverside attracted a great deal of attention. Mr. Stalder had placed signs above each animal, showing the production records for both milk and butter which they had made and it was a matter of great surprise to the spectators going through the barns to learn that cows were able to produce such large quantities of both milk and butter.

THE CATTLE WITH THE BELTS.

Frank Reed Sanders of Chandler, Ariz., contributed to the interest and variety of the show by exhibiting a small herd of Dutch Belted cattle, the first of the breed yet seen at a show in Southern California. The cattle, with their wide white bands, were an attraction to many visitors.

GREAT DISPLAY OF HORSES.

Much could be written about the excellence of the horses shown at the Los Angeles Live-stock Show. Both the heavy draft horse and light-horse classes were well filled. Merritt & Bowers of Tulare had the largest exhibit, and won the prize for the best exhibit and best-decorated barn. Revel Lindsay English, who conducts a riding stable in Pasadena and a large ranch at Chino, also had a large exhibit. James Marwick of Santa Barbara showed several head of exceptionally fine Percherons, and won champion and reserve championship honors in the female classes. Fred H. Bixby of Long Beach took champion Shire stallion. In the Clydesdales the Dibblee estate of Santa Barbara took champion stallion and O. H. Brandt of Shellville, champion mare.

The Diamond Bar Ranch showed imported Arabian mares and stallions which elicited great admiration from lovers of good horseflesh. Anita Baldwin had a very attractive exhibit of both light and heavy horses, although these were not in competition. Hall Brothers of Perris showed Percheron horses of high quality, and were awarded many of the blues in the female and group classes.

The ribbons in the heavy horse classes were tied by F. W. Wilson of Reno, Nev. Judge Charles W. Green of Centralia, Mo., tied those in the light-horse classes.

THE SURPASSING GUERNSEY EXHIBIT.

Judge Ed Carey of Carleton, Or., characterized the Guernsey exhibit as follows:

"The Guernsey exhibit at the Los Angeles Live-stock Show was probably not equaled at any other show int he United States, except at the National Dairy Show in Chicago. Although not great in numbers, the quality at this show was unexcelled."

This is undoubtedly true, as a large part of the exhibit at the Los Angeles Livestock Show was made by the Edgemoor Farm of Santee, San Diego county, owned by W. H. Dupee. This herd was brought to the Los Angeles show direct from the National Dairy Show, where it won many first prizes, including grand champion bull, and

THE SNAPPY AYRSHIRES.

The Ayrshires never fail to attract attention at live-stock shows on account of their snappy appearance, due to the pert angle at which their horns are set. J. Henry Meyer of Watsonville had his State Fair prize winners at the Los Angeles Live-stock Show, and they were much admired. The University of California also had some good animals. Grand champion cow went to Highland Ithan, Mr. Meyer's State Fair grand champion. The judge, Ed Carey, placed the Meyer senior bull calf, Elkhorn Public Opinion, over Holehouse Secretary, of the same herd, Sacramento grand champion. The youngster is an exceedingly handsome animal.

CATTLEMEN'S BODY TO BE REORGANIZED.

A reorganization of the California Cattlemen's Association, on more progressive lines, to include 85 per cent. of the beef cattle raisers in California, will be effected at the meeting of the members of the association at San Francisco, November 4 to 7, inclusive. Members of Zone 5, including the ten southern counties, met at Exposition Park during the Live Stock Show and decided to charter a special car to attend the meeting.

Dissatisfaction has been expressed with attendance at meetings, by-laws of the present organization, and the zone system, and cowmen generally want some kind of a cohesive body to protect their interests before the State Legislature and National Congress. Many are opposed to public stockyards, and many favor them.

It was asserted at the Los Angeles meeting that, although beef is cheaper in California than in any other State, the cry for reduction in the price of beef was greatest here. H. A. Jastro of Bakersfield urged that the marketing of beef was inefficient, and that it was the duty of the cattlemen to see that the product was placed before the public at a cost of 3 cents per pound over the wholesale price instead of 8 or 10 cents as commonly charged now.

The cattlemen admitted that the present brand inspection law was inefficient, and that a new law copied after the air-tight Arizona branding law, must be enacted. Officers were not elected at the meeting at Exposition Park because of insufficient representation and the prospect for a reorganization of the State association.

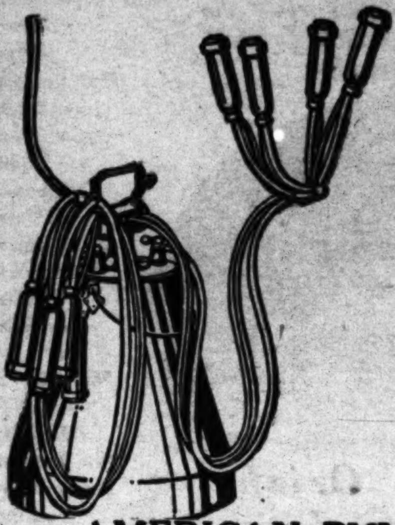
The Universal enables the dairy farmer to do more work with less men. In these days of labor scarcity and high wages, a tried and tested time-saver like this is of utmost importance. This milking outfit will soon save its cost.



The alternating action of the Universal milks two teats while relieving and massaging the other two.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES IN SHEEP RAISING IN THE GOLDEN STATE.

By C. R. Doty, Charleston, Ill., Judge of Sheep, Los Angeles Live-stock Show.

NO LIVE-STOCK exhibit would be complete without an exhibit of sheep, for we must have woolen goods to wear and a bit of mutton occasionally to change off from the heavier diet of pork and beef, in fact, if you happen to be an Englishman you will want the mutton all the time. One would be safe in saying, too, that nine of every ten visitors to the Live-stock Show came clothed in woolen apparel, which fact is likely to go unnoticed until prices begin to soar as they are now doing, due, clothiers will tell you, to the government agents' taking over the entire wool crop last year for our soldiers.

California is especially adapted in location, climate and range to sheep raising and should produce the wool to clothe her people, also the cloth and garments should be manufactured within her boundaries. There are now many good flocks of sheep in the State, but there is room for many more. An aggressive sheep husbandry department in the State agricultural college could give impetus to this branch of industry.

As it is, the university showed the larger number of sheep on exhibition, having four breeds besides the wethers. They were the Rambouillet, Shropshire, Southdown and Hampshire. On the first three breeds the university won all prizes without competition on well fitted animals representative of the breeds and showing the careful grooming of the master shepherd. In Hampshires the University had a contender in the Calla Grove ranch of Manteca, with a nicely turned lot headed by a good ram from the noted Walnut Hall farms in Kentucky. A typical lot of wethers was brought forward by the university for adjudication.

The sheep show compared very favorably with the other live-stock departments and judging from the ringside conversation, is destined to become one of the leading features of the annual Los Angeles Live-stock Show.

DAIRYMAN'S DAY AT THE STOCK SHOW.

Under the auspices of the Los Angeles county farm bureau and through the courtesy of the Los Angeles Live-stock Show management, Thursday, October 23, was set aside on the official show calendar as Dairymen's Day. Although the morning meeting was scheduled to take place in the auditorium of the Exposition Building, it was deemed desirable to change the meeting place to one which could he more easily reached by dairymen and others interested who were taking in the Live-stock Show. The meeting was therefore called to order in the cattle judging tent on the show grounds by J. B. Vaile, vice-president of the farm bureau.

W. S. Rosecrans, secretary of the farm bureau explained the organization and its attitude in working for the benefit of all classes of farmers. S. H. Greene, secretary-manager of the California Dairy Council, told of the plans of that organization and of its purpose in interesting the dairymen of the States to work together. The Hon. F. T. Cummings of Humboldt county had some very interesting things to tell about the cow-testing work that has been carried on in the north for the past ten years. William R. Harriman, superintendent of the Los Angeles county farm, told of the assistance the Cow Testing Association had been to them in making records on their extraordinary herd. Farm Adviser Gordon was the last speaker on the morning programme. He discussed feeds and feeding rations for dairy cows and had charts made up showing the actual rations being fed by some of the local dairymen, comparing the food values and the costs, together with the returns per dollar invested in feed.

In the afternoon at 2 o'clock Farm Adviser Scribner gave a dairy cow judging demonstration which was very enthusiastically received. This was followed by a demonstration of five cows that had been tested during the past year by the Cow Testing Association. These were brought in to show the advantage of testing. The best cow made seventeen times as much net profit as the poorest cow, although there was not a great deal of difference in their appearance as individuals Noel Negley of the dairy division of the United States Department of Agriculture, spoke on the value of cow testing as he had found it in the western States.

As a follow up to the farm bureau dairymen's day, the California Dairy Council held a get-together meeting at the Walker Theater on Grand avenue in the evening. The Hon. F. J. Cummings, Farm Adviser A. Gordon and Secretary Greene of the dairy council appeared on the programme.

A series of lantern slides were thrown upon the screen, which showed the progress of several herds in Humboldt county and their increase in production since they started the Cow Testing associations.

There were many dairymen present who were glad to avail themselves of the opportunity to get together and meet one another.

Sixteen Ribbons Won on Ten Entries

CASTLEVIEW RANCH
Santa Rosa, Calif.

I AM pleased with the consideration which has been shown my herd of Duroc and Hampshire swine at the Los Angeles Live Stock Show, and the courtesies which have been extended to me by the Show Association officials and my fellow swine breeders.

I take this method of expressing my appreciation.

I am in the breeding of swine both to make friends and to make money.

I realize that the more real friends I make among swine breeders by giving them value received for their money the more money I will make in the long run.

I am building for future business.

I will be glad to furnish you whatever you may desire from my herds, or hunt up for you anything in any breed of swine that you may desire from the good herds in the Middle West.

I promise you fair treatment.

Reserve Grand Champion, Hampshire Boar.
Reserve Senior Champion, Hampshire Sow.
Reserve Junior Champion, Hampshire Sow.
4 First Prizes and 5 Second Prizes in the Hampshire and Duroc classes.

This bespeaks the quality of the animals in my herd.
